Do you work in the field of Pilgrimage Studies?

By Dee Dyas, Centre for the Study of Christianity and Culture

A new Online Database created at the University of York is designed to bring together information about pilgrimage-related publications, resources and research projects across all periods, cultures and regions. Disciplines represented include Art History, Archaeology, Architecture, History, Geography, Literature, Psychology, Religious Studies, Sociology, Social Anthropology, Tourism and Heritage Studies. The database is intended as a resource for researchers, teachers, students and practitioners.

You will find the database at <http://www.pilgrimagedstudies.org.uk/>

If you would like to upload information about your own work, or that of others, or help us to test and improve the database, please email info@pilgrimagedstudies.org.uk for a user account.

The screenshot shows a web browser window displaying the homepage of the Database of Pilgrimage Resources. The browser's address bar shows the URL www.pilgrimagedstudies.org.uk/. The page header includes the University of York logo and navigation links: Home, About the Project, Search the Database, and Contact the Project. The main content area is titled 'Welcome to the Database of Pilgrimage Resources' and contains the following text:

The database is designed to collect together resources, publications and general information in the field of Pilgrimage Studies. Resources come from a wide variety of disciplines, including Art History, Archaeology, Architecture, History, Geography, Literature, Psychology and Social Anthropology, and can address pilgrimage from any culture, faith, period or geographical location.

Pilgrimage researchers can obtain database users accounts, which allow them to enter and edit information in the database. Each user account also has an associated 'Research Profile', where researchers can enter their research interests and details to be searched alongside the standard database entries.

Please note: the Database of Pilgrimage Resources is in development, and is currently in a beta-testing phase. As such, although basic functionality is present, errors or glitches may be encountered. Please notify The Centre for the Study of Christianity and Culture (candc@york.ac.uk) of any such issues, with details of any error code and how the error was encountered.
