An Emperor's Early Poverty.

From The London Telegraph.

It may well be that the venerable German Emperor, as on Christmas Eve he contemplated the magnificent tree prepared for him by his children and grandchildren all gathered around him, laden with costly and seasonable offerings to the mightiest Constitution, making it an instrument monarch of Continental Europe, beinadequate to bind the States into one thought him of a certain grim and dismal Christmastide seventy-three years ago. His royal parents, driven from their capital and reduced to actual poverty, were then boarding and lodging on credit, in a private citizen's house at Memel, and but for a timely subsidy reaching them from the Memnonite settlement of Kulm, would have been unable to purchase a few cheap and simple Christmas admirably conducted house of the Baltimore and Ohio Company. This morning at half-past 10 o'clock,

D. C. Gilman. by invitation of D. D. Mallory & Co., who had coaches in waiting at the Carrollton Hotel, we were driven to the extensive oyster-packing establishment of that concern, and shown the various processes through which the oyster passes from the time it reaches the packing-house in its native shell until it reaches the nicely labelled cans. The shucking process especially was a novelty to us, and we watched with much interest the shuckers, many of whom are women and girls, as they rapidly turned out the oysters from their "little beds." Before leaving we were invited to an elegant oyster lunch. Cavitites were hewed out of huge blocks of ice and filled with large, luscions raw oysters, and bushels of hot steamed oysters were served by expert shuckers. We were also regaled with an abundance of hot, smoking coffee, and all seemed to enjoy the "live" oysters with much relish.

After the lunch we were driven to the tobacco- works of Messrs. Gail & Ax, on Barre street, near Light, where we were shown the whole process of the manufacture of smoking tobacco, fine-cut chewing tobacco and Scotch snuff, from the time the tobacco, is taken out of the hogshead, sweated, cut by machinery, dried, and after other processes, put up for use in papers, bags or boxes. A very picturesque sight was afforded in many of the rooms where fem ale operatives were engaged, wearing piquant little caps and neat aprons, while the sleeves of their dresses, tucked up to the elbows, showed bare, rounded arms as the deft fingers manipulated the fragrant weed. In the room where the Scotch snuff was handled

Gay, Sheriff, to James Paige, vited guests, to the number of about 200 persons, gathered in the beautiful lodge room at 7:30 o'clock, notwithstanding the bitter cold weather. The orchestra commenced playing about 8 o'clock, and entertained them about one hour, after which supper was announced. The banquet was held in Kirk Opera House. The tables, running the entire length of the hall and on the stage, fairly groaned under the load of good things prepared by the fair hands of the ladies. affair passed off in the best of order and good feeling, and will long be remembered by those who were present. At the conclusion of the banquet, a dance took place, and was certainly one of the most enjoyable and pleasant parties of the season. The gallant brothers were all courtesy and mirth, while the ladies were robed in beautiful costumes and their faces were wreathed in sweet Vernon, $700. smiles. They danced and promenaded until long after the bewitching hour, when all took their departure, voting an immense success. That Dutch Rennion.
