FEBRUARY FORECASTS. The Kind of Weather We May Expeet According to Rev. Hicks. Below will be found the forecasts of weather as predicted by Rev. Hicks for the month of February: The storms originating in January will subside to eastward by the 2nd, and the cold wave which followed them will have crossed the country to the Atlantic. About the 5th and 6th marked reactionary storms will transpire, with good chances of being continued past the central day of the Mars equinox on the 7th, the full moon in Perigee on the 9th, and into the Vulcan period 9th to 13th. Some hard storms will occur, interspersed with unsettled and threatening weather all along these dates. The probaweather air along these dees. The probabilities are that heavy snow will prevail to the north, but that rains, with lightning and thunder, will be the order in the south. Cyclones and tornadoes are among the possibilities. Quick and extreme changes to very cold will follow all general storms of he month. The 17th and 18th will bring decided storm conditions, with perhaps a sudden sweeping cold wave, but the temper-ature will react very quickly to very much warmer, the barometer will fall, winds will change to southerly, and storms of dangerassignment was made to prevent the prop-ous character will sweep through the conti-nent from about the 22ud to the 24th. Look blizzards all along the northern side of the country. At this time, wherever it turns very warm, with south winds and low bameter-no matter if in the far northpect violent storms and carefully watch all threatening clouds. The probabilities are that dangerous local floods may result from heavy rains, impeded by the breaking and gorging of the ice, along the rivers and streams that flow through narrow valleys We may look for the heaviest disturbances shout the 22nd, 23rd and 24th. A great one that may prove a terror to man and beast. The month goes out growing warm-er, with reactionary storm conditions in-

WOMEN MAY VOTE.

The New Law Granting Women the Right of Suffrage at School Elections is Sustained.

The decision of the Circuit Court of Franklin county with reference to the extension of suffrage to women at elections for boards of education, is one of supreme interest at this time to the women of Mt. The action was begun in the Franklin county courts by William Mills against the board of elections of Columbus to strike The Wheat Swindlers Are at It Again from the registration list the name of Mrs. Inda Earnhart, wife of Senator Moses B Earnhart. Mrs. Earnhart registered as a qualified elector last fall, and this action was brought to determine the constitutionality of the act passed by the Legislature last winter to grant women the right to vote at school elections. The decision handed down Friday by act is constitutional and that women may and a few bring as high as $125. The ten vote at school elections. The court holds that although the constitution prescribes and, although machines are comparatively that only male persons are qualified electors, low in price this season, it may be said that Legislature absolute control of the public schools of the state delegates to the Legislature the power to vest in women the right be sold for as low as $75. The first safety to vote at school elections. Decisions of the Supreme Courts of Illinois, Kansas, Iows and other states having constitutions similar to the constitution of Ohio, where second time and went over until the next similar acts have been passed and declared constitutional, were cited in support of the The ordinance to regulate the salary of decision of the court in this case. As Judge sion of the Circuit Court will be sustained. Hon. Daniel J. Ryan, lwho was counse Solicitor Critchfield made a yerbal report for Mills, is not certain whether the case

CHEAPER WHEELS.

Growing Competition is Sure to Lower the Price of Bicycles.

A Word in Favor of the Man Usually Called a "Boss."

-Persistent Advertising Bound to Win-New Duty of Assessors This Spring.

Manufacturers have announced that bi cycles will be cheaper this year, and an examination of the different exhibits proves udge John G. Shauck, and concurred in by this to be uniformly true. A majority of Judges Stewart and Shearer, holds that the the so-called standard wheels sell for $100, dency to lower prices is growing stronger, the section of the constitution giving the the golden age of the wheelman has not yet arrived. Students of cycling say that within a few years the very best machines will bicycle built in America was exhibited in 1888, and as soon as this style came into popular favor the ordinary bicycles which had sold all the way from $135 to $150, could not find purchasers at $5 apiece. The principle of the safety will probably never be improved upon, and therefore the price should decline to a certain standard. New manufacturers have sprung up all over the country within the past few years, and cometition has tended to make the prevailing price $100. When the pneumatic tire came in use the average price of standard safeties was $150, but last year the new competitor forced the price down to $125, which was the standard list price on all the principal makes last year. It has been said that the cost of an entire bicycle is less than $50. If such is the case, it can readily be seen that a reduction in the prevailing price is very likely to follow next year.

The following from an exchange is worthy of careful perusal:

Any man who takes an interest in politics if he is at all successful, will sooner or later be called a boss, a gangster, a ringster, etc. This is but an evidence of one of the peculiarities of the human family. It is not confined to politics. It is found in any and every organization regardless of what may be the object in view. It is found in the church, in charitable organizatons, in secret societies and, in fact, in every institution which requires that somebody voluntarily takes the lead and assumes the responsibility. So long as there is doubt and uncertainty these leaders are "good enough," but so soon as prosperity begins to come then comes the organization of opposing factions the leaders of which want to advance their own personal ends, and in order to gain support cry "ring!" "gang!" "boss!" until their throats are sore and their voices husky.

The men who stand up andfight the batles year in and year out, the men who manage the affairs of a party successfuly, the men who bear the burden in the heat of the day, to such men belong the spoils of office. When we see such men rewarded the best at lower prices than any other for their unceasing toil we feel that eternal place in Central Ohio. justice has not been dethroned. All kinds of business houses can reduce their expenses during dull times except newspapers. It costs just as much money to get up a newspaper in dull times as in lively times, and it costs a mighty sight more labor, for in lively times there is always something going on to write about, while in dull times there is nothing happening, and that is when readers expect the news, because they have more time to read
