PASHION NOTES.

The fashionable rage for Eastlake has suggested a style of dress to which this name has been given. It consists of velvet, faille or brocade, any one rich material, cut plain, with a square train, a basque cut, a low, narrow train in front, and sleeve half long, with scant ruffles of wide, Smith says he generally receives real lace. The trimming consists of hand embroidery set in or wrought in the fabric (not put on it), fringe tied in with the fabric, or simple folds and pipings.

NECKERCHIEFS AND COLLARS. Small handkerchiefs trimmed with lace, or silk ones with borders, have now quite taken the place of -or with corners turned down-are cold day in winter he was told that still used in linen.

The polonaise, the blouse-waist and straight overskirt will be in vogue again during the coming spring and summer-the latter style is especially appropriate for print and gingham dresses for girls.

It is safe to say that the Princesse styles will remain, in essentials, the same for some time to come. The the story was told. Princesse polonaise will be worn for the street, and deep mantles, jackets and polonaises of silk, cashmere and lace over Princesse dresses. While in many quarters "combinations" are discredited, they are still worn, and will continue to be so, because they are useful, and often so effective in remodeling half-worn dresses. Sudden Death. Michael Freyman, who at times last three years has been working in the undertaking factory of McDowell & Co., was, on last Thursday evening, found sitting on the steps leading up into the Woodward Block, in an apparently intoxicated condition. Police man Bergin and Constable Vance having been notified of this fact, carried the man to the jail, gave him a bed, and locked him up for the night. Friday morning, Turnkey Doty, on entering the poor man's cell, found him dead. At once a jury was empaneled, and at 2 o'clock this body and Justice Ewing, acting as Coroner, repaired to the corridor of the jail to view the remains. The jury, Mr. Israel Green, Mr. C. S. Deferred from last week.

On last Friday evening, the Patrons of Clinton Grange assembled in their hall at Prospect Hill, to install their new officers for the ensuing year. True to hospitable nature they opened wide their doors, and bid their friends a hearty welcome. It being a beautiful evening, a great many responded te the kind invitation. The ceremonies were opened by the Chaplain; then followed the installation of the following officers: Master, W. L. Wynkoop; -Lecturer, B. W. Robinson; Overseer, F. A. Martin; Secretary,

Samuel Bishop; Treasurer, Isaac Johnson: Steward, William Shinaberry; A. Steward, M. J. Ewalt; G. K., Samuel Lafever; Chaplain, John Welsh; Ceres, Miss Addie Lafever; Flora, Miss S. Bishop; Pomona, Miss Mary Lafeyer; Lady Steward, Miss Emma Ewalt. After the installations were con

We deem it but just to say that our investigation has been very materially aided by the valuable assistance of our present gentlemanly and efficient Auditor, Col. Alex. Cassil. He is, by the requirements of his office, made Secretary of the Board of Commissioners, and whenever we have had occasion to examine his official work, it has been with satisfaction.

In conclusion, we desire to congratulate the people of this county upon the present prosperous condition of our county affairs. So far as our Commissioners are concerned, they have, in their official capacity, acted honestly and carefully; where their course has been prescribed and marked out by law, they seem to have followed it strictly, and in the exercise of their discretionary powers, we believe they have acted competently, and with reference to the best interests of the people.

SINGULAR STORY.

Woman Living Her Life Over Again-Truth Stranger Than Fiction.

The following remarkable case is given by the Cambridge News. The lady is Mrs. I. W. Lewis, of Rushsylvania, Ohio, a cousin of the editor of that paper; and he vouches for the correctness of the story:

She had been married about three ears without issue. At midnight of November 24th last she was taken in convulsions, by the agony of which her husband was awakened. And Comments Upon It According to the Truth After the convulsions subsided she lay as in a deep sleep. When the doctor arrived, she awoke and was asked by her husband if she was sick? She replied, "Why no!" and looked surprised at the question. In forty minutes she commenced a red - haired man with a plug working in another convulsion, after which the time between them lessened until at the end of six the negative; and when the man hours, when one spell followed another without intermission, her chin, nose and lips assuming a pur ple hue. This was twelve hours after she was first taken, my boot tops, deposited the books during which time she worked in over eighty convulsions. After this she lay as though in a trance for twelve hours more, and in two hours after this she gave birth to an eight months' boy, still-born. After the birth of the child she lay two weeks without moving a muscle of her own accord, but would swallow anything put into her mouth. During the third week she gave signs of revival, by clearing her throat and moving her left limbs. Up to this time she could not see, hear nor speak. The fourth week she commenced to say three or four words at a time and repeat them by the hour, and would often repeat everything she heard spoken in the room. At the end of the fourth week she began to understand what was said to her and labored to reply, but could not form words into a senteuce. Her right side now began to show life. During the fifth week she was able to be helped out of bed and to the surprise of all was able to stand up. The sixth week she could walk about the house and sit at the table, but did not know how to handle a spoon or fork. During the fifth week she talked about her cradle and then her trundle-bed, and knew her father and mother. As she progressed during the sixth week she knew her oldest brother and talked about going to school, but did not recognize any of her brothers and sisters younger than she. But as she apparently grew in mind, she began to recognize the vania, and would not admit that she was married. Would say she was too young to marry, and then would blushingly laugh, just like a modest girl of twelve years would do. At the first of the sixth week her mother told her that she and Mr. Lewis were married. She could not you will not tell me a story, I be-

Senior Dramatic Association presented the drama, "Among the Breakers," to the large audience at Kirk Hall the Saturday evening previous, was owing principally to the indisposition of the local. As we said then so we think now that "it would be a difficult matter to single out the star" of the company, the ladies as well as the gentlemen sustaining their several characters in a very creditable way. Miss Martha Irvine, as Mother Carey. the fortune teller, so faithfully portraved her part that many in the audience were loth to believe her other than a decrepit old woman, until the disguise was removed, when the house came down with hearty applause. Mrs. W. F. Baldwin as Minnie Daze, the city belle, made the finest appearance, the character requiring the most stylish outfit. Dressed in summer attire, suitable for a yatching excursion, she put on the usual superfluous airs of the belle with becoming ease. The character Mrs. B. represented being so directly the opposite to her real nature, the audience so much the more enjoyed her successful rendition of the same. Miss Clara Bergin, as Bess Starbright, made a delightful little sea-nymph, playing her part to perfection; her sprightly coquettish manners and easy, graceful movements won her frequent outbursts of appreciation from her many admirers in the audience.
