He did not see Lizette until the small effervesence of the season had quite subsided. He asked no questions about her, for he did not come in con-tact with any old friends in whom he liked to recall memories of the past. But he called at the homely cottage, where she still resided with her moth er (that much he learned from the stranger host at the hotel where he and Dr. J. M. Buckley. had his room,) on the morning follow-ing the close of the commencement exrcises, sure that he would then find her at home.

Nor was he mistaken. He was hown into a small room, a sort of study, as books and manuscripts scattered around fully indicated, and wait-ed long, conscious all the time of a oustle, like the notes of preparation stated that he thought the boy would for some approaching event, but which he naturally ascribed to the departure of guests or something similarly connected with the season.

In the following year Brough was elected Gov-ernor by a majority of 100,882, a change of 106,442. Other changes have been as follows: In 1872 General Wikoff, Republican, was elected Secretary of State by 14,050 majority and in 1873 Governor Allen was elected by a majority of 817, a change of 14,867, and in 1874 Wikoff was defeated by a majori ty of 17,207, a change of 17,285. In 1875 Hayes defeated Allen by 5,544 ma jority, a change of 22,746. In 1876 Colonel Barnes, Republican, was elect-ed Secretary of State by a majority of 3,636, and in 1877 Governor Bishop was elected by a majority of 23,250, a change of 30,136. In the following year Barnes was re-elected by a majority of 3,154, a change of 26,674. These figures and the result of the election on Tuesday indicate that there is a large proportion of Ohio voters who hold their party obligation as a secondary matter and will vote their independent convictions whenever there are questions at issue which touch their feelings, their interest or their cherished beliefs. And it is right that it should be so. There is no serious danger to a State where men hold their party allegiance so lightly that they are willing to lay it aside for the time being, and turn to settle collateral or other questions which arise from time to time in public affairs. The situation to-day is certainly not very cheering to Republicans, but let them study the history of the past campaigns, keep their party headed in

Napoleon III.'s "Weird Sister."

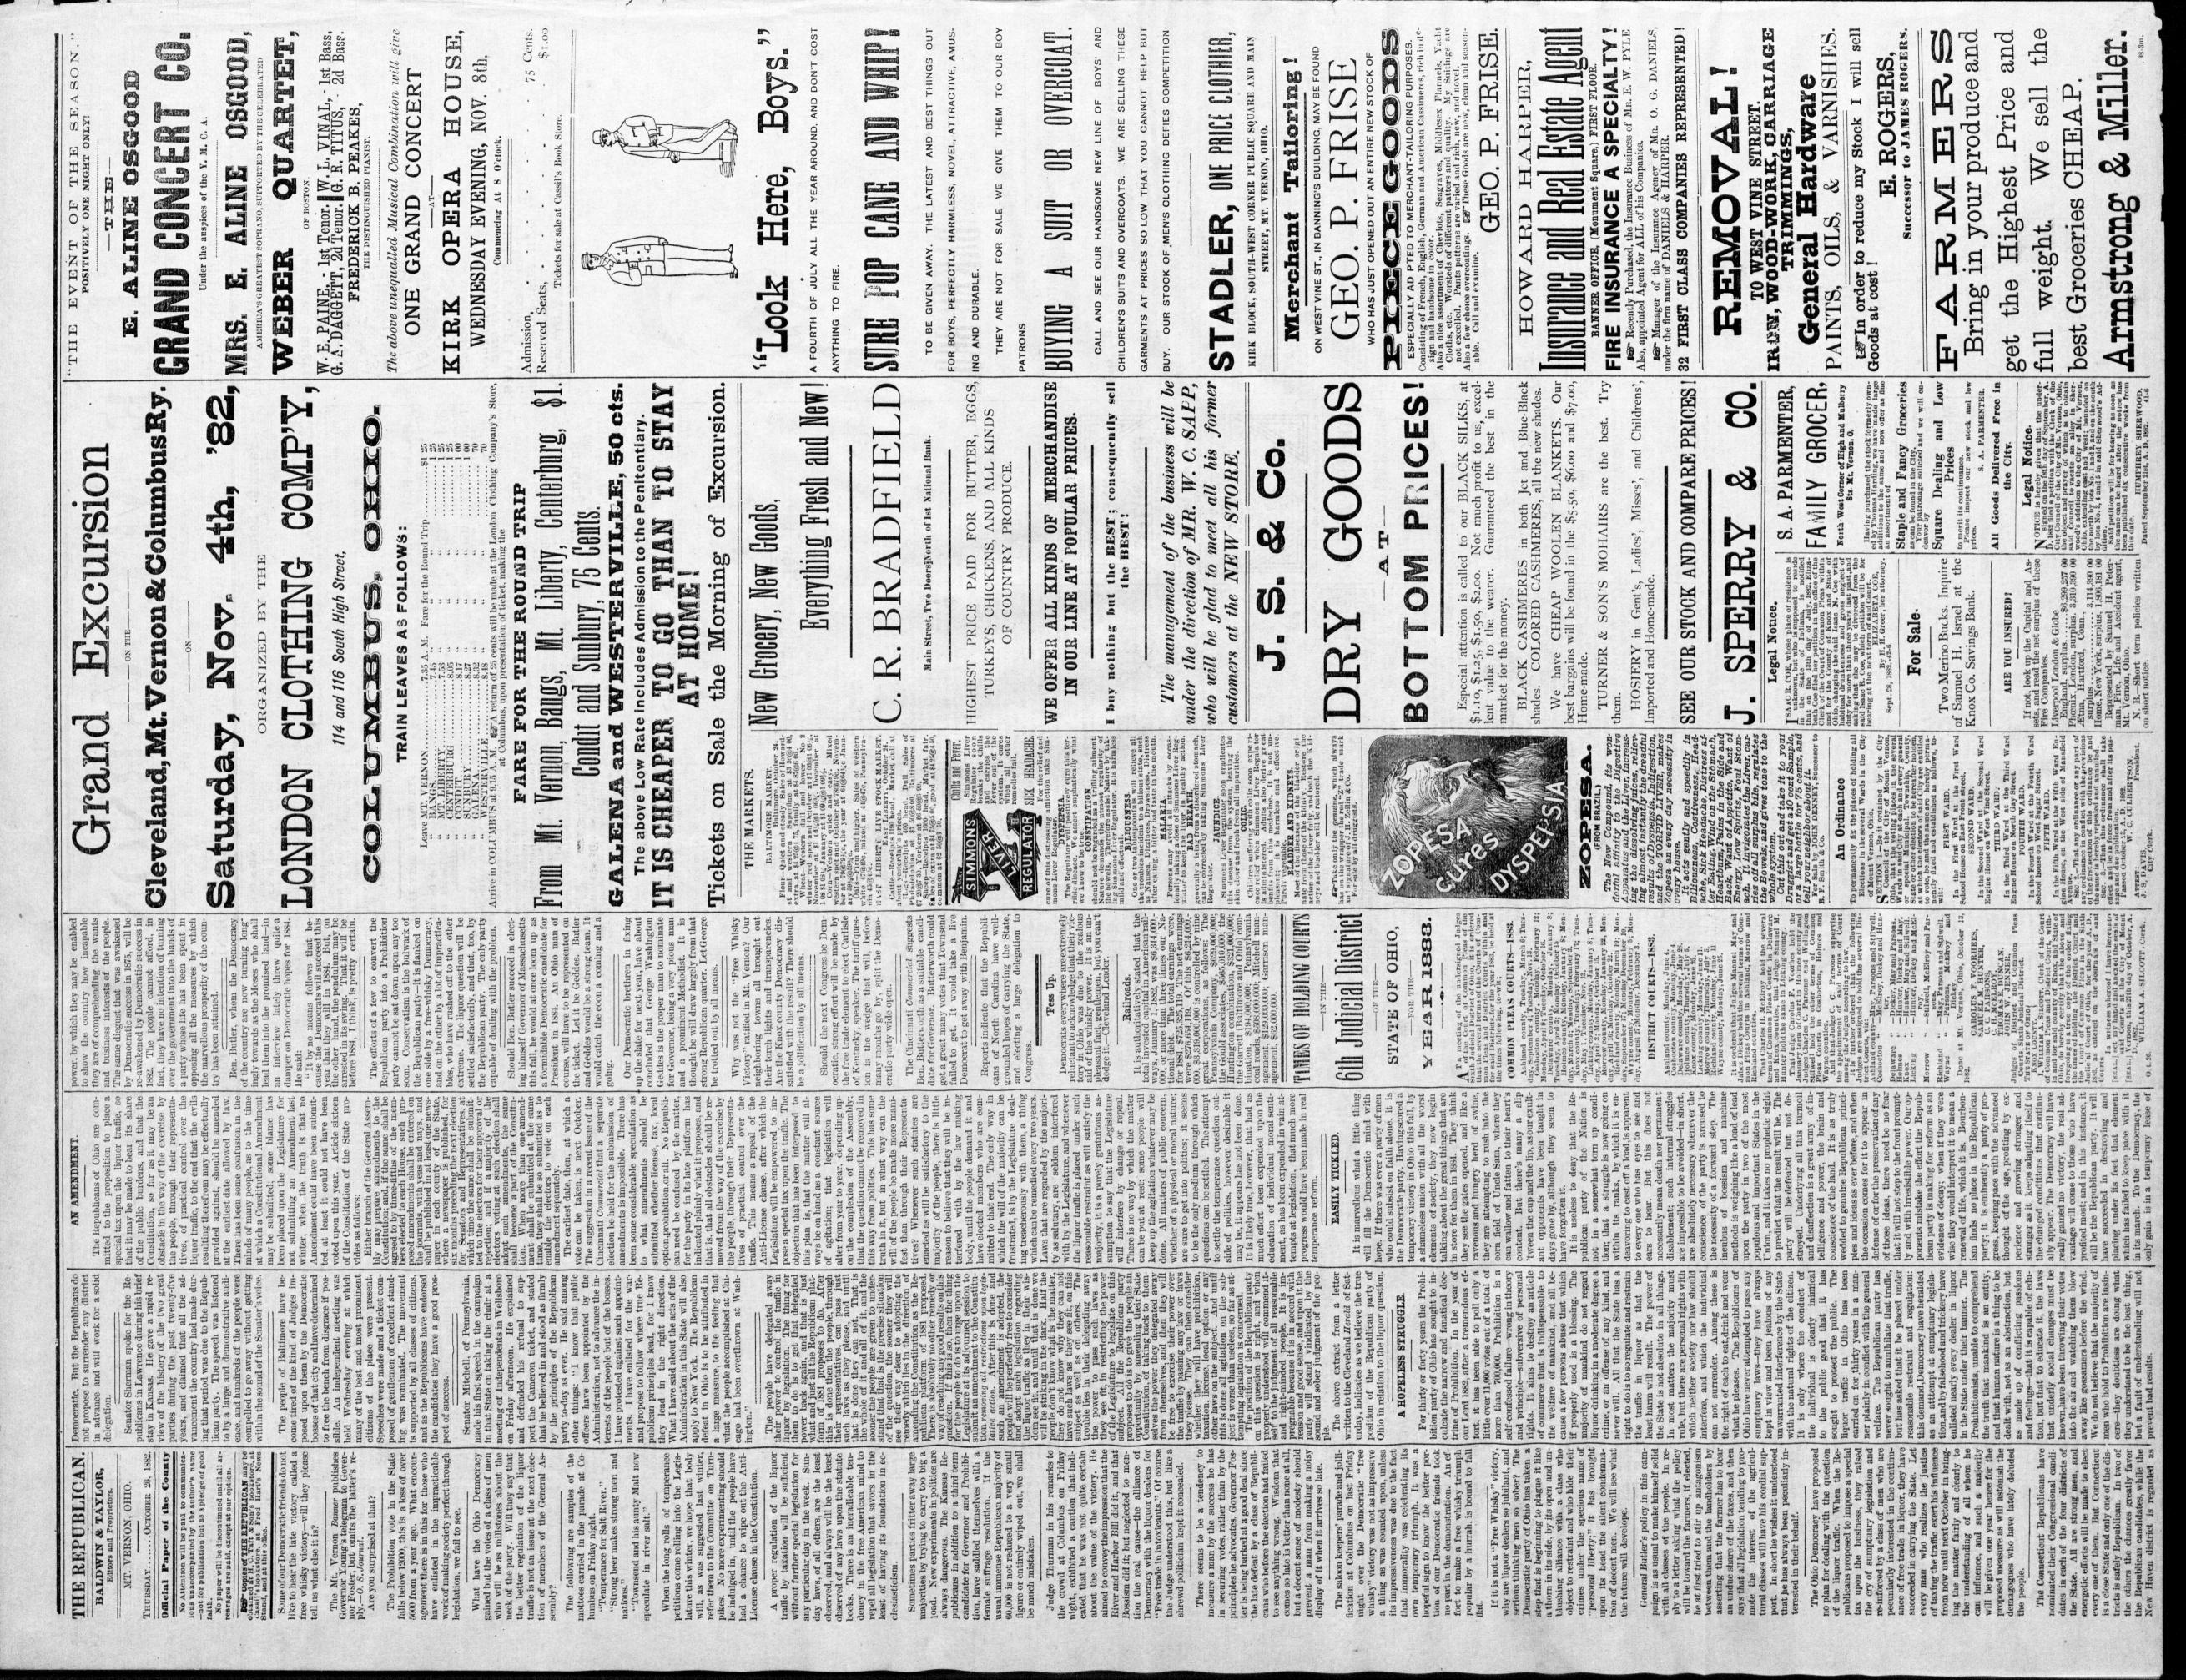

One day, when Prince Louis Napolcon was president of the French republic, an elderly sewing-woman, one Angeliqua Beltoise, homely, unlettered. silent and solitary in her habits, and with apparently no thought beyond her drudgery, presented herself bedaily fore her employers, her face glowing as if it had been transfigured. During the night, she said, she had been visited by a being radiant with light and beauty, which had imperiously bidden her rise and write certain verses from its dictation. "I obeyed, and here they are!" she said, showing four pages of paper, on which, in a hand infinitely superior to her own scrawl, but yet resen it, were written verses, not up to Hugo's standard, perhaps, but far beyond her capacity or education. Her friends en-deavored to ridicule or soothe her out of her belief, but in vain, and she insisted in selling what few possessions she had in order to have her verses copied and richly bound. After having presented herself at the Elysee several times, being refused admission, she sent the volume to the prince president through the mail. "When Louis has read it," she said confidently, "he will send for me." Sure enough, after some time came a messenger desiring her attendance at the Elysee. Thither she went and was received by M. Mocquard, who questioned her, and, taking her for a crazy woman, declined to let her see the prince, but offered her money. This she declined, only professing her anx iety to be informed that the verses had really reached Louis Napoleon. This assurance being given, she said, with satisfaction: "Very well. Then he knows

It is well known by all intelligent observ-ers that it is impossible for any person, no matter how largely endowed by nature or acquirement, to become thoroughly conver-sant with all divisions of the Science of Med-icine. Nearly all who have obtained distinc-tion in medicine have made some special department their life work, being fitted therefor by natural adaptation or selection, special education and experience. The Doctor having devoted several years to the special study of this class of diseases in hospital and general practice, and having the most recent and improved instruments for finding out diseased conditions in the organs of the body, he proposes to devote the whole of his time to practice these special-tics.

The Laplander.

The Laplander's sledge has no run-ners, but like himself, is covered with reindeer skin, and is in shape something like a canoe. Harnessed to this sledge the reindeer starts off with almost the rapidity of a steam engine, going fifteen or twenty miles an hour. The reindeer is not only the Laplander's horse, but his cow, and during the time that it gives milk, he is freezing large quantities of it, to be used when no more is to be obtained. Then he breaks off a piece. warms it out, and has again a good ar-ticle of milk. The deer is also his food, large herds of them being kept in some his house, his bed, his shoes and stockings, his clothes, and cords and strings

The Best Man in Burke County.

Not long since a traveler on our railroad, fully half flooded, stepped off the train at the depot, and approached our venerable Marshal, who was standing near, and declared himself the best man traveler, "I am the best man in Waynesboro." Again the Marshal assented, and thus failing to get up a row, the irate traveler came down to personalities by saying, "I am a better man than you are, sir." The Marshal gave him a cool look, and replied, "You may be a stronger man than I am, but I here hold the strongest position." "How so?" asked the man. "Why, sir, I am the Marshal of Waynesboro." Light-ning was not cuicker than that man in ning was not quicker than that man in getting in the train, and he never so much as looked out of the window again.-Waynesboro (Ga.) Citizen.

A Natural Screen.

The "tattie," used universally in India, is a large curved or sloping screen, which accurately fits into each door or window facing the west, and is made of the roots of the khuskhus grass, which singularly combines strength and porosity with the most delicious and refreshing fragrance. The screens are about an inch in thickness, and during the hot and dry west wind, are saturated from outside with water, which imme-diately commences evaporating under the fierceness of the blast; and as evaporation always implies cold, the wind which, in the veranda, would raise the thermometer to one hundred and twenty degrees Fahrenheit, passes into the house at seventy-five or eighty degrees, laden with a delicious fragrance. While tatties are in working order all other cooling appliances are unneces-sary. In the neighborhood of Gwallor and Jhansi there is another form of tattie. A small creeping, thorny variety of the ber is largely found in the jun-gles; this is collected and dried, and at the proper time the whole west veranda is inclosed with thorny walls nine to ten inches thick and these being estimated inches thick, and these being saturated from the outside, all doors are thrown open, and a delightful temperature is secured. Tatties are of no use during the easterly wind, which ushers in and accompanies the rains. Laden with moisture it is a damp wind, and therefore retards evaporation.

Watermelons at the North. Watermelons of excellent quality may be grown in latitudes which are naturally unsuited to them on account of the shortness of the season, or where the soil is not sufficiently sandy to furnish the necessary heat for their rapid growth, by starting the plants in a hot-bed. My plan, which is very successful, is to put diameter, filled with rich earth. The pots are then placed in a hot-bed, and the spaces between them filled with sand. The plants should be left in the hot-bed until they begin to run, by which time the earth will be ntly warm for their transplantoles should be dug in the garden field, in a sunny spot, and filled with well-rotted manure mixed with soil, in which the plants should be set. A hole a foot in depth, and large enough to contain two shovelfuls of manure, is sufficient. One plant should be set in a hill. They can be readily removed from the pots by a slight blow on the bottom from the hand. A hill of sand two feet in diameter and about four inches thick, should be placed around the plants, which serves to both increase retain the heat, and at the same time acts as a mulch to the bed underneath, in which the plant has been set. The south side of a stone wall or board fence is a nice place to grow melons, as the fence reflects the heat and at the time breaks the wind. The Mountain Sweet is the best variety I have grown, as they are early and of superior quality. The Excelsior is sweet, but lacks in solidity. A dozen hills managed in the manner described will afford more of this delicious fruit than an ordinary family can consume. The surplus will find ready market at good prices.-New York Tribune.

Skim-Milk and Flaxseed for Calves. Skim-milk and grass alone will raise ood calves, if the milk is abundant and not allowed to get too sour. When too sour, it causes calves to scour, and thus counteracts its good effect. Skim-milk is well adapted to raising heifers for the dairy, as it is rich in albuminoids and hosphate of lime, to give a strong muscular and bony development. A little more oil would improve it, and for this purpose flaxseed is a cheap addition, effectually replacing the cream skimmed off. The large percentage of oil it contains prevents constipation, as well as scouring. Flaxseed should be boiled in four times its bulk of water, and it then parts of the country. From its skin the four times its bulk of water, and it then Laplander makes the roof and floor of forms a gelatinous mass. A little of this-say, a tablespoonful of the jellymixed with warm skim-milk, is enough for his bow. Without this animal, the for a calf from one to three weeks old. "But," said the better fed on new milk. When the milk better fed on new milk. When the milk comes short, linseed meal may very profitably be added.—National Live-Stock Journal, Chicago.

The Values of Vegetables.

All vegetables have an effect on the chemistry of the body, so that we cannot speak too highly of their importance at table. We will mention a few of these matters first, and dispose of this aspect of the subject, so as not to seem to mix pharmacopœia with the kitchen. Asparagus is a strong diuretic, and forms part of the cure for rheumatic patients at such health resorts as Aix-les-Bains. Sorrel is cooling, and forms the staple of that soupe aux herbes which a French lady will order for herself after a long and tiring journey. Carrots, as containing a quantity of sugar, are avoided by some people, while others complain of them as indigestible. With regard to the latter accusation, it may be remarked, in passing, that it is the yellow core of the carrot that is difficult of digestion-the outer, a layer, is tender enough. In Savoy, the peasants have recourse to an infusion of carrots as a specific for jaundice.

The large, sweet onion is very rich in those alkaline elements which counteract the poison of rheumatic gout. If slowly stewed in weak broth, and eaten with a little Nepaul pepper, it will be found to be an admirable article of diet for patients of studious and sedentary habits. The stalks of cauliflower have the same sort of value, only too often the stalk of a cauliflower is so ill-boiled and unpalatable that few persons would uninviting an article. Turnips, in the same way, are often thought to be indigestible, and better suited for cows and sheep than for delicate people; but here the fault lies with the cook as dish is sure to be the worse for it. Try a better way. Half boil your turnip, and cut it in slices like half-crowns.-

Misplaced Confidence.

On the Rock Island train coming into the city, last night, a young man with a freight bill and a monte deck in his pocket was trying to play his little game on the sly among the unsophisti-cated, and ran against an old travelling man who had as he afterward said, been successively book-agent, sewing machine agent, lightning-rod man, safe agent, and lately a patent medicine Sauntering through the train, the young man took the seat next to the veteran agent and began opera-

'Do you live in Kansas City, sir?" No; thought I'd come and take a look at it; hear it's a rattling place." "Going into business there?"

"Maybe, if I think I can make it go." "I am going to open a stock of merchandise there myself, shipped from New York;" and the young man proceeded to divulge his plans in the most confimanner, and in due time produced his freight bill. "Sav friend," broke in the agent,

'you're going to open a store, are you! Have you bought a safe yet? No? Well, just wait till I pull down my grip and show you plans of our Nos. 1, 2, and 3 safes; doors notched inside-round corners outside-cabinet work inside nade according to order; time lock outside, patent Yale lock inside. Close a ect now for a thirty-four inch safe; dollars down, ten dollars a month until paid; eighty dollars delivered in Kansas City; take freight bill for security for first payment, and borrow from my uncle, who is chief of police, to lend. you a trifle till you get the remittance from the old man.

The young man squirmed uneasily in his seat, and manifested a desire to get away, but that veteran agent "smole a wicked smile, and, laying hold of the ung man's lappel gently, continued young man's lappel gently, continued: "Don't be in a hurry-beautiful car, elegant accommodations. Don't say you don't want it. . I'll send you one .-I'll tell you what else you want. Got a lightning-rod to your store? No? They say that lightning is thicker'n chinch bugs in Kansas City. Ladies have light-ning-rods on their hats. A lightningrod sets off the building; shows the pro prietor's a solid man-got forethought and caution. It'll help your credit.--Which will you take?
