Daniel Gray. BY DR. J. G. HOLLAND.

In all of the late Dr. Holland's writings, we know of nothing which equals in pathos and tenderness the following beautiful poem, and its value is enhanced when it is known that the author describes his own father in "old Daniel Gray:"

If I shall ever win the home in heaven, For whose sweet rest I humbly pray, In the great company of the forgiven, I shall be sure to find old Daniel Gray. Old Daniel Gray was not a man who lifted On ready words his weight of gratitude, And was not called among the gifted, In the prayer-meeting of his neighborhood

He had a few old-fashioned words and phrases Linked in with sacred texts and Sunda rhymes, And I suppose that in his prayers and graces I've heard them at least a thousand times. I see him now—his form, his face, his motions, His homespun habit and his silver hair, And hear the language of his trite devotions, Rising behind the straight-backed kitchen

I can remember how the sentence sounded—
"Help us, O Lord, to pray and not to faint!"
And how the "conquering and to conquer'
rounded, The loftier aspirations of the saint.

The lottler aspirations of the saint.

He had some notions that did not improve him.

He never kissed his children—so they say.

And finest scenes and fairest flowers would move him.

Less than a horse-shoe picked up on the way.

He had a hearty hatred of oppression,

And righteous word for sin of any kind;

Alas, that the transgressor and transgression were linked together in his honest mind,

He could see naught but vanity in beauty, And naught but weakness in a fond caress, And pitied men whose views of Christian duty Allowed indulgence in such foolishness. Yet there were love and tenderness within him, And I am told that when his Charley died, Nor nature's need nor gentle words could win him, From his fond vigils at the sleeper's side. And when they came to bury little Charley, They found fresh dew-drops sprinkled in his hair; And on his breast a rose-bud gathered early, And guessed, but did not know, who put i there. Honest and faithful, consistent in his calling Strictly attendant on the means of grace. Instant in prayer, and fearful most of failing. Old Daniel Gray was always in his place.

A practical old man and yet a dreamer, He thought in some strange, unlooked-for way, His mighty Friend in Heaven, the great Re-Would honor him with wealth some golden day. This dream he carried in a hopeful spirit, Until in death his patient eye grew dim, And his Redeemer called him to inherit The heaven of wealth long gathered up fo

So if I ever win the home in heaven, For whose sweet rest I humbly hope and pray,
In the great company of the forgiven,
I shall be sure to find old Daniel Gray.

A HAPPY RESULT.

"Let us get married at once," urged Harry, "and let my father undo it if he can! I tell you, Rose, it's the only way. He has set his heart upon my marriage with the daughter of some old chum, long lost and recently recovered; and, though she may be the paragon of per-fection he describes, she is not my little lovely Rose! In fact, I care much less for his money than his blessing, Rose; and I have too much confidence in his goodness and warmth of heart to seriously doubt his giving that when once he realizes that the step we have taken is irrevocable. Isn't it evident that he is in the wrong? He never gave me cause to suppose that he would interfere with my choice until quite lately and suddenly. He was in high spirits over a chance encounter with some old friend, whom he had not seen for years, and said he, 'My friend has a daughter, Hal; what a wife she would make for you! I thought he was in jest at first, and certainly I shall not sacrifice the happiness of two lives to gratify a foolish whim of his. Why, he has never even seen the girl! He owned as much to me. One 'knockdown blow,' dear, a plain declaration, 'Father, I am already married!' will be worth all the pleading in the world. He'll succumb at once to the inevitable, you see. Darling Rosie, say you will marry me at once. Rose gave way, after a little coaxing, stipulating only that she should be "allowed to remain at home until the marriage could be publicly acknowledged." Harry agreed to this very readily. our wedding-day, sweet, before I take There was nothing difficult about this marriage-fate seemed propitious to the lovers. Harry said, laughingly, that their troubles were all to come, when his father should learn how they had overreached him. Rose had told him timidly that if there was any delay she could not be married. "For papa is going to take me some-where with him this evening-I don't know where, but he told me I must look my prettiest—and I must be home in time," she said earnestly; and Harin time," she said earnestly; and Harry, though secretly he chafed a little at this "ordering about" of his little wife, had sense enough to acknowledge that, for the present, papa must be obeyed. No delay occurred, however. The first clergyman to whom they went was at home and at liberty, and Rose and Harry left his presence man and wife. It was surely the most hurried of weddings. The bridegroom had scarce-ly time to snatch a kiss ere the bride had escaped him and ran home. He went home merrily enough, feeling rather sorry, in advance, for his father's disappointment, and resolved to break it to him as gently as he

"A perfect paragon, my boy," said old Mr. Miller, enthusiastically; "she'll be here to-night, and you'll see. I can't tell how many years she has kept her father's house, and nursed him in sickness" — ("Some miserable old maid!" thought Harry to himself)-"but you'll have me to thank for finding you a perfect pearl of a woman! What a daughter for me, too, when I am old! Ah, I want you to marry her, and bring her home to me at once !"

Harry listened for awhile in silence. "I won't tell him I am married just that to him by degrees."

"But my affections are already engaged elsewhere," he said gently.

"Would you have me marry where I

"Wait till you see the girl," said he "I'll answer for it that you'll love her. Why, I've seen her picture only, and I tell you it's like a fresh young rose!
They're coming to dinner this evening, so do your best to please her, my boy.
I'm not afraid of you liking her, but her father thinks she has a notion for some young jackanapes already, and you must do your best to cut him out. I tell you that on the day when you tell tell you that on the day when you tell me that girl is your wife I give you half my fortune. The other half shall come at my death to your first child. There! "To tell the truth, I am already married," said he solemnly, while Rose crept shyly to his side. "I thought to steal a march on you, sir, that's the truth, and so Rose and I got married this very morning. Allow me to present to you your daughter in-law."

The old man gave Rose a hug and a hearty kiss.

"You thought yourselves mighty smart," said he, "taking such pains to circumvent and oppose my wishes, yet fulfilling them all the time. Welcome home, pretty little wife!"

The Earl of Chatham.

William Pitt closed an extraordinary career in the most distressing poverty. His last appearance in public was when he left a sick bed to speak upon the motion to acknowledge the independence of the United States. On this occasion he appeared wrapped up in flannel bandages, and showing clearly the ravages of illness. He was listened to with deep respect, and continued his speech amid the most profound silence. Scarcely was it completed when he sank back in the apoplectic fit from which he never recovered. He died at his house in Putney, near London, alone, neghim, hearing of his illness, rode from London to see him. Arriving at his house he rang the bell, but no one came. Dismounting, he made his way to the hall door, and rang repeatedly. Still there was no response. Entering the house, he wandered from one deserted room to another, until at last he discovered Pit on a bed, dead and utterly neglected. It is supposed that they had absconded, taking with them

Lose or Win-

We all have at least one chance in life. There are periods in which every-thing is at stake—home, honor, competency, and happiness all are in the balance. They may be almost ours, or even be in our possession, while the events will shortly tell whether they shall be ours for life or be lost forever. No matter how dark it is ahead, we must go into the contest, or lose all without a struggle. It is upon himself that a man must depend in such emergencies. His friends have their own battles to fight or victories to enjoy. The quality that will help him most is aggressive force—the persisting and in-domitable energy that bears down all opposition. The man filled with this mbative spirit is the hero, the masterspirit of the world in which he moves. Impediments which would dishearten lected and in misery. How to Make a Poultice. Dr. Brunton, in Brain, the new London periodical, gives the following useful hints on this subject: The common practice of making poultices by mixing linseed meal with hot water and applying it directly to the skin is quite wrong, because if we do not wish to burn the patient we must wait until a great portion of the heat is lost. The proper method is to take a flannel bag, the size of the poultice required, to fill this with the linseed poultice as hot as it can possibly be made, and to put between this and the skin a second flannel, so there should be at least two thicknesses of flannel between the skin and the poultice itself. Above the poultice should be placed more flannel, from getting cold. By this method we are able to apply the linseed meal boiling hot, without burning the patient, and the heat, gradually through the flannel, affords a grateful sense of relief, which cannot be obtained by other means. There are few ways in which such marked relief is given to abdominal pain, as by the application of a poultice in this manner. A piper in a Northumbrian town was Notwithstanding the English Free Traders' boastings, it is a fact that England collects more revenue off American productions exported to her ports than we get in return by the tariff on York Tribune, he would be bankdelphia American offers some figures showing the following: For the five done. years beginning with 1873 and ending with 1877, the importations of unmanufactured tobacco into England by the United States averaged over 51,000,000 pounds, and yielded revenue to the British Government of more than $43,-000,000 per year. During the same time the importations of manufactured tobacco yielded them $3,000,000. The export of spirits from this country during 1880, amounted 10,112,598 gallons; upon this was levied a Tariff of $2.55 per gallon on all that went to England.

Summing up the whole matter the American says:

"As a result, necessarily approxi-mate but not far from the truth, it appears that the British tariff levies and collects at least $45,000,-000 on the produce and man-ufactures of the United States imported into England, and on the other hand, the United States tariff levies and collects about $40,000,000 annually on the produce and manufactures of the United Kingdom."

And yet the Democracy asks the American farmer, part of whose products are taxed so heavily by the English tariff laws, to vote for a repeal of the American tariff laws that have given him a better market for his products than ever before known.

If the following course could be adopted in every public school in the land, a very unpleasant bone of contention concerning public schools now existing between the Catholic and Protestant Christians could be buried : A petition, signed by a number of the citizens of Chicago, has been pre-sented to the school-board of that city asking that instruction in "unsectarian ethics"—in honesty, sobriety, fidelity, charity, etc.—should be given in the lower grades of the public schools. The petition adds: "In the schools. The petition adds: "In the next grade they could be given a systematized course of ethics. Theoretical instruction should be supported and illustrated by stories and examples while classical sentences and aphorisms, sayings, and verses from the poets, could be explained to and memorized by the children."

The Mobile Register (Democratic) has this to say: The President has the boldness to call Congressional attention to the worst features of the Pension Act, but it is very doubtful whether there is enough courage in the country to demand a repeal or modification of a measure which proves to be the worst job ever foisted upon a people in the name of patriot-ism. This is one of the cases which go to sustain the sarcasm of Dr. John-son, that patriotism is the last refuge

of Hon. H. B. Banning

The remarks of Col. Cooper at the recent Bar Meeting held in honor of H. B. Banning were so highly complimented by all who had the pleasure of hearing them, that at the request of many citizens, Col. Cooper has furnished the REPUB-LICAN with the manuscript of the address, which we print in full:

MR. CHAIRMAN:-I shall not delay this meeting in the attempt to add anything to what has been said by otherstas to the distinguished, legal, military and civil career of Gen. Banning.
We all know that he was eminent as a wyer, and would have been more so had given his entire attention to his proion. His patriorism and brillians military career in the late civil war, are now parts of the history of the Republic; and with his valuable services and hor orable position in the civil affairs of the nation, we are all familiar, but in his death I have lost a life-long and dear friend. No death outside my own household, has,or could tear up by the roots, so many of the hallowed memories of my childhood, boyhood and early manhood, as his death has. Henry Banning and I were born very near to each other. His parents and mine lived within a "stone's throw" in a country neighborhood, where the two families were compelled to, and did depend almost exclusively upon each other for society. Our parents were intimate could be, and the children were constant ly together. Gen. Banning's father possessed intelligence, judgment and inluence in the community far beyond that of ordinary men, and Mrs. Banning was a noble, christian woman, intell gent, educated; devoted to her family, strict in the performance of all her duties. always amiable, but dignified, gentle and affectionate, but serene and decided. She was my idea of what a matron should be, and for many pleasant years she and my mother were most intimate friends.

In early childhood Henry Banning and I were almost always together. We attended the same school and sat in the er, in the old country school house, go ing to and from school together, with h older and my younger brother, year alter ing the few social entertainments and amusements the region afforded. After school hours and in vacations, when compelled to work, we managed, when we together in both work and play. Afterward we attended together the academy of Mr. Sloan, that most excellent and beloved teacher, in this city, walking to and from our homes in the country, through the mud and snow of winter, and dust and sunshine of sum mer, and this new adventure tended only to make us nearer to each other. We were country boys standing together against the airs and rails of our fel-low students from town.

Finally both families moved from the

We finally agreed that he should be Captain and I First-Lieutenant, which was afterward approved by the company. After we left this company our paths were separated, but our friendship continued, and especially in later years with increased strength. The last time I saw him was at the fo neral of his eldest sister. How well do I remember that sister—the fairest, brightest vision of my childhood. She was indeed a most beautiful and attractive woman, and for many years as familiar at my mother's hearthstone as the was a daughter of the house. At her funeral, being one of the last to leave, I noticed Henry waiting at the grave to him. We sat down on the grass and conversed long of the scenes of our early life and life-long friendship-tender memories, even then tinged with sadness Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Bostwick, of Coshocton, made a brief visit with friends in this city the latter part of the week.

furnished rooms to proper parties, gather about him a set of people who will so harmonize in their tastes and ideas that his establishment will become a sort of "Home Sweet Home." He secures as tenants (after much consideration) an artist in water-colors, a composer of music, an author, a physician, a book agent, a college student, and a young lady who officiates as copyist and accountant for him. To superintend his household he procures a garrulous old lady, Mrs. Grumpy, as housekeeper. This venerable soul, inspired by a feeling of curiosity to know "just who lodgers are," rifles the author's trunk and discovers what she thinks is positive proof that the author murdered Miss Chandler's father and mother and is bent on summarily despatching the entire househo'd. It introduces many amusing situations, and creates intense amusement. Reserved seats at

Never-Ending.

To advise a tired housekeeper, in these days, not to work hard, but let things go, is about as useless a proceeding as can well be imagined. work cannot be neglected under any eircumstances. It cannot stop, it is not like the work in a machine shop, where, by slipping off a band, the humming heels are still and nothing is injured So long as there is a family to be fed and clothed and got to sleep, the work must go on. It may be lightened a little in various ways. One may do it by living simply, by having fewer rooms to care for; having fewer courses at ta-ble; dressing the children less elaborately, though not less neatly; learning to "save steps" and to economize strength (don't wait until you are old to do this, but begin while young, and thus form the habit so that by and by you will do it unconsciously), but not by leaving any necessary part of the work undone. No properly constituted woman could enjoy leisure gained by neglecting her home duties.

Lifting the Veil. A superstitious Frenchman, desiring to learn less of the future than he already knows, visits the seventh daughter of a seventh daughter and explains

"Twenty francs, please."
"Twenty francs! That's pretty steep. Say ten!" 'Rash mortal, ten francs wouldn't pay the spirits for the labor of lifting the veil of futurity, to say nothing of the wear and tear of the veil!"

Mandrake Elixir-For the Liver.

The greatest and most pleasant Cathartic known, taking the place of hard, nauseating pills. This remedy is composed of the best Cathartic known to science and combined in a pleasant nongriping Elixir. Unlike pills, it never gripes or makes one sick. It can be ta-ken and the usual work gone on with, thus making it a remedy for everybody, old and young. Manufactured by Baker Bros., Lower Main St., sign big hand. Mistaken for Consumption.

We have known persons to doctor for years for consumption, all to no effect. Though they had a cough, felt pains in the lungs, were depressed, weak, with many other symptoms tending to that disease, yet there was no structural unsoundness of the lungs. These symptoms were all the painful offspring of a torpid and diseased liver. We could fill a volume with testimonials of thousands so affected, who were permanently cured by taking Simons Liver Regulator.

"Oh! yes, said Mrs B., as she surveyed with evident pleasure her little parlor side-board covered with old china and decorated with highly colored tiles, "Mr. B. remarked last night that I was becoming quite an atheist," and the old lady's countenance fairly beamed with delight as her eyes rested on a sixteen-cent Japanese tea-pot.

TO GRATIFY HIS WIFE.

An Interesting Story—A Hopeless Case Cured—A Good Reason for Happiness.

Statement of Mr. Washington Monroe, of Catskill, Green Co., New York.

'For many years I had suffered from a complaint which the physicians called Gravel. I had employed some of the most noted doctors without obtaining any permanent relief, and for a long time my case was considered hopeless. All who knew the circumstances said I must die. Finally, my wife induced me to try a bottle of Dr. Kennedy's 'Favorite Remedy' which she had somewhere heard of or seen advertised. Without the slightest faith in it, but soiely gratify her, I bought a bottle of a druggist in our village. I used that and two or three bottles more, and—to cut a long story short—I am now as healthy a man as there is in the country.

Since then I have recommended 'Favorite Remedy' to others, whom I knew to have suffered from Kidney and Liver complaints, and I assure the public that the 'Favorite Remedy' has done its work with a similar completeness in every single instance, and I trust some other sick and discouraged mortal may hear of it and try the 'Favorite Remedy,' as I did."
