

2013

14th-Century Bishop's Seal Found in Field on Display at Museum

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digital.kenyon.edu/perejournal>

Part of the Ancient, Medieval, Renaissance and Baroque Art and Architecture Commons

Recommended Citation

. "14th-Century Bishop's Seal Found in Field on Display at Museum." Peregrinations: Journal of Medieval Art and Architecture 4, 1 (2013). <https://digital.kenyon.edu/perejournal/vol4/iss1/15>

This Discoveries is brought to you for free and open access by the Art History at Digital Kenyon: Research, Scholarship, and Creative Exchange. It has been accepted for inclusion in Peregrinations: Journal of Medieval Art and Architecture by an authorized editor of Digital Kenyon: Research, Scholarship, and Creative Exchange. For more information, please contact noltj@kenyon.edu.

DISCOVERIES

14th-Century Bishop's Seal Found in Field on Display at Museum

A 14th century Bishop's seal discovered by a metal detector is on display at the Manx Museum for the first time. The silver seal, which was discovered by Andy Falconer, is described by historians at Manx National Heritage (MNH) as "incredibly significant." Curator of archaeology at MNH, Allison Fox, said: "It is a very rare find and an important part of Manx history." Mr Falconer said: "I've found a few coins over the years but this is by far my most important discovery and I am over the moon that it is on display." "It's been my ambition to find something that will change history."

The silver seal measures about three centimeters in length, illustrates two saintly figures under carved canopies with a third figure below, kneeling in prayer. The Latin inscription identifies the two saints: "Let the prayers to God of Germanus and Patricius help us." Artifacts on the Isle of Man from this period are exceedingly rare.

Rewritten from <http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/world-europe-isle-of-man-20204111>