- SENATE: Nov. 1: Senate passed the following statement about noise in Student Residences:

"The distinction between warranted and unwarranted noise in and around student residences has been a recent topic of discussion in the Senate. It was generally agreed that any level of noise which has the possibility of annoying others should be reduced or eliminated. Ideally the curtailment of unnecessary noise should be governed by the residents themselves, either by being considerate of others' right of privacy or by a willingness to respond to the request from those who are bothered. Less than ideal situations do occur, however, when noise is created by the unconcerned while others remain hesitant about lodging complaints.

It was also generally agreed that a major source of offensive noise is unres-trained stereo music, especially when complaints have been ignored. In such instances when cooperation is obviously lacking, the Senate believes that it would be necessary for other authorities, including Campus Security Officers, to exert controls.

Normally, Security Officers respond from complaints, but we expect that they will also react directly when in their judgment, the sound is blatantly and unquestionably offensive. So, in addition to the Security Officer's judgment about the extent of the noise, he must also determine if the matter can be best resolved by simply making a request to the offender, or by reporting the student to the Dean. The Senate expects that the Security Officers will always give students the first opportunity to handle matters, and will make requests and reports only when all others efforts fail."
