New Journal Announcement: Home Cultures from Berg Publishers

Victor Buchli, Alison Clarke, and Dell Upton are editors of Home Cultures, a new interdisciplinary journal that is the first forum wholly dedicated to the critical understanding of the domestic sphere across timeframes and cultures. Heavily illustrated and handsomely designed, the journal will address a range of topics, including the relationship between body and building; design and new technologies; politics, domesticity and social change. It is published three times a year. The first issue appeared in March and the second has just appeared. You can access the first issue FREE ONLINE through Ingenta at:

<http://zerlina.ingentaselect.com/vl=9045847/cl=15/nw=1rpsv/cw/berg/17406315/contp1.htm>

Home Cultures invites submissions from design practice, design history, architecture, anthropology, sociology, archaeology, urban planning, contemporary art, geography, psychology, folklore, cultural studies, literary studies and art history.

See Berg's website for more information, as well as for subscription inquiries:
