The background of the cover is a photograph of a large, multi-story stone building, likely a church or chapel, with a prominent square tower topped by a dome and a weather vane. The building is surrounded by trees with autumn foliage in shades of orange, yellow, and brown. In the foreground, a paved path leads towards the building, and a person is walking away from the viewer. The overall tone is warm and nostalgic.

Financial Aid: A Commitment to Opportunity

by Philip H. Jordan Jr.
President, Kenyon College

Philip H. Jordan Jr.

When he laid the cornerstone for Kenyon College in 1824, Philander Chase's intention was "to serve the poor boys of the West," enabling them to become educated, enter the ministry, and thereby answer the needs of the growing church that he led. Chase's whole enterprise suggested that his College would be open to people of ability regardless of economic circumstance. Over the years Kenyon, like most other colleges, has sought to follow that general guide. The College continues its mission of gathering talented people and enabling them to fulfill their promise whether or not they have the advantage of strong financial resources.

Arriving in Gambier in 1975, I soon learned that the success of people who had come to Kenyon on scholarships was part of the College lore. I heard stories of young men who had come to Kenyon and been helped when it was crucial, enabling them to finish and then go on to accomplish remarkable things. Since the College had recently become coeducational, I saw that financial aid to women was of course crucial too.

One of the aided students I heard about was Novice Fawcett, a young man from a modest Knox County family whose father died when Novice was a student here in the late 1920s. President Peirce simply told him not to worry, that the College would enable him to finish despite the crisis in his family. After completing his studies at Kenyon, Fawcett became a local schoolteacher and administrator and then moved to Columbus where he became the superintendent of schools. Eventually he was appointed president of Ohio State University, where there is today a Novice Fawcett Center for Tomorrow.

Fred Barry, a devoted trustee when I arrived here, attended Kenyon on scholarship in the Class of 1942. The son of a local barber, Barry went on to Harvard Law School, eventually to practice law in Mount Vernon with the distinguished firm of Zelkowitz, Barry, and Cullers. After his death in 1977, family and friends funded a scholarship in his name for the benefit of students from Knox County.

Allen Ballard of the Class of 1952 was a member of Kenyon's undefeated 1950 football squad. A Kenyon scholarship recipient, he graduated magna cum laude, then received his doctorate in political science from Harvard. Ballard became the first black man to be appointed dean at the City College of New York, where he served for many years before accepting another post recently at the State University of New York at Albany.

Among more recent scholarship recipients, a number of Kenyon women have distinguished themselves professionally. One example is Geraldine Coleman Tucker, a scholarship recipient from the Class of 1974 who majored in psychology, then decided to pursue journalism. Now she serves as Midwest managing editor for Gannett News Service.

Cathy Rollins, from the Class of 1976, earned an M.B.A. from the University of Chicago and went on to become a founding partner of Treasury Strategies, Inc., in Chicago, one of the nation's largest independent cash-management consulting firms. Since 1986, she has been a member of Kenyon's Board of Trustees.

Kenyon carries a long tradition of providing educational opportunities by the extension of aid. It is a tradition that we have honored since our beginnings and wish to enlarge. Now, wherever we seek funds for the College, we invariably request support for scholarships and loans—resources to help make Kenyon accessible to people regardless of their financial situations.

We are not yet fully able to realize our ambition of admitting with financial aid all students who demonstrate the ability to succeed at Kenyon. The College has not had the resources to meet that objective, and that is a matter of distress for us. But, over the years, we have in fact substantially increased both the proportion of the student body that is receiving financial assistance and the size of the average grant.

During my time here, we have moved from something less than a quarter of the student body receiving aid from Kenyon to more than a third. And of course the size of the average grant has grown very substantially as tuition and other fees have increased. Just over the last five years, the average grant increased from less than $5,000 to more than $8,000. Spending for financial aid more than doubled in those five years to more than $4 million. In only one year, from 1989 to 1990, while Kenyon's total expenses increased by about 8 percent, our spending for financial aid grew by more than 13 percent, including funds for grants, loans, and student employment.

A major factor in the growth of financial aid at Kenyon is the increasing competition among colleges for able students, regardless of need. In today's admissions environment, with its declining college applicant population, in order to attract many students we have needed to offer financial-aid opportunities to them as our competitors do. We remain successful in attracting an excellent group of applicants each year, but our willingness and ability to offer increasing amounts of financial aid has contributed to that success.

Financial aid has grown in response to the leveling off of federal financial assistance for undergraduates. Although only a small percentage of our students have participated in the federal student-aid program, nevertheless the program has not grown at a rate commensurate with inflation. We have tried to make up that difference.

Kenyon's financial-aid expenditures have also increased because we are affirming the value of racial and cultural diversity in our student body. That diversity embraces young people from small farm towns of Ohio, from inner-city communities, from other parts of the country, from ethnic and racial minorities, and of course from less affluent families. The financial-aid program has been an important means to support and increase that diversity.

Our principal incentive to enhance the diversity of the student body is for the purpose of richer education. While the relationship between student and faculty member is primary in liberal education, there also is powerful educative value in one's peers, the kinds of people with whom a student attends college. We believe that to draw people from across the country from families from different walks of life, from families with rather different kinds of experiences and backgrounds, is in itself an enrichment for the College community and therefore the quality of education we can offer students.

Additionally, Kenyon has always subscribed to the American conviction that schools and colleges ought to be opened up as much as possible to the broad population so that talent may be given the opportunity to rise. Jefferson addresses the idea in his notion of the aristoi, the natural aristocracy—people of great native talent and promise who rise from unpropitious circumstances. Society receives tremendous benefit when they are given the opportunity to fulfill that promise by means of a first-rate education.

And then of course Kenyon wants to welcome members of groups that have not traditionally had much access to educational opportunity, in the interest of admitting them to the promise of American life, insofar as education is the entrance ticket.

I think a further factor having to do with greater diversity is the demographic tendencies we are experiencing in which the largest growth in population at present is among African-American and Hispanic and Asian communities. Therefore, a college such as Kenyon needs to have access to those communities in recruiting students so that it can be prepared for the future when they will compose an increasing proportion of the age group that we serve.

Although our emphasis in financial aid is to assist students who might not otherwise be able to attend Kenyon, still we award a limited number of scholarships based solely on a student's academic credentials. These scholarships form an additional incentive for the most highly talented high-school seniors to consider Kenyon. In President Gordon Chalmers' day, the College offered prize examinations where talented people could qualify for a scholarship by sitting for an exam. A number of accomplished writers, including E.L. Doctorow '52 and James Wright '52, attended Kenyon with these scholarships.

More recently, in the 1970s, the College developed the Honor Scholars program, an effort to attract exceptionally capable young people by offering them a merit award of one-half the tuition. We then extended the program to include a special focus on science scholars, which brings students to Kenyon who have demonstrated a particular aptitude in science and mathematics. This past year we enlarged the program again to include African-American and Latino students of exceptional performance and promise. This fall we awarded these various honor scholarships to seventeen students; we hope by next year to increase the number to as many as twenty-five. The College also participates in the National Merit Corporation scholarship program and the Howard Hughes Medical Institute scholarship program.

Kenyon's Honor, Science, and African-American and Latino scholars are chosen on the basis of their academic and personal qualifications. Candidates present not only the ordinary application material but also a portfolio that illustrates their talent and promise. Each spring, we invite a group of finalists to campus for interviews with faculty members, and the awards are then made on the basis of their recommendations. The College considers only merit in selecting these scholarship recipients. When it turns out that recipients can demonstrate need beyond the amount of the merit award, we meet that need.

These programs have helped us to bring to Kenyon some remarkable students who have made contributions to the College not only in their academic performance but in their leadership and in other ways. Still, merit awards are in some ways problematic and controversial. Some educators hold the very strong conviction that financial aid should be intended simply to make the College accessible to people who could not otherwise afford it, that we are not in the business of offering "prizes" for academic accomplishment.

The issue for us is what significance should we give to merit awards, given our preference for emphasizing need-based aid.

Part of the answer depends, again, on an environment that is highly competitive for top students. Throughout the country, and in Ohio especially, we have seen an increased use of merit awards as a way to attract students of high ability and performance to a campus. In many cases the size of these awards has increased to include the entire tuition. And numbers of institutions, both private and public—at least in this region of the country—are using a full tuition award as a way to recruit exceptional students.

Next year we will offer a few full-tuition awards to see how helpful they are to us, but we are unlikely to start using merit awards as a major component of our financial-aid program. Largely this is for philosophical reasons; that is, we believe that our principal commitment ought to be to meet need. It is also simply beyond our resources to offer large numbers of merit awards. We are going to do somewhat more than we have done, but we will probably not develop this initiative into a major feature of our program.

In the process of planning for the 1990s, we see the decade as one in which resources will not grow as they have in the past. Tuition, gifts, and returns on endowment will probably not increase at rates that we have experienced at different times in the past. Therefore we have to choose our priorities carefully. We have decided that one of the very highest priorities must be financial aid, as a way of investing in something very fundamental, the quality of the student body.

Our sources for this investment are not as abundant as we would like. About 14 percent of our financial-aid budget is made up from funds given to the College annually for financial aid or contributed as endowment to generate income for that purpose, often for scholarships named for the donor. This figure rose quite significantly during the recent Campaign for Kenyon, when generous contributors gave almost $5 million for scholarship endowment, including a $500,000 gift from the George Gund Foundation, which doubled the size of the Gund Scholars Fund.

But by far the major portion of funding for financial aid—more than 85 percent—must come from the general revenues of the College, that is, income we receive from unrestricted gifts and income that we receive from tuition and fees. These are the resources that make up our operating budget.

One of the critical aspects of our economic situation is that endowment gifts fund a smaller proportion of our financial-aid program than is the case for the institutions we compete with for the same very talented students. Even after the successes of the Campaign for Kenyon, our endowment remains very small for a College of this stature. In consequence of that fact, we simply have more modest amounts that can be designated for financial aid, less than $600,000 this year. Despite raising financial aid to a top level among our priorities, we must not make such a large investment in scholarships and loans that other parts of the institution cannot be nourished.

Kenyon is not instituting a radical departure from a long-standing tradition of providing financial aid where it is needed and where we can best afford to give it. But we do want very much to decrease the margin between what is needed and what we have available to give.

We are deeply grateful to the people who have made contributions to this purpose in the past, and we are very eager to encourage increasing contributions in the form of endowed scholarships and annual gifts for financial aid. Such donations can generate an immediate effect on the quality of students Kenyon can recruit.

Each spring, as we assemble the files on students we wish to enroll at Kenyon, we come to a line beyond which we cannot offer the assistance necessary to allow capable young men and women to join us here. Our ambition is to push that line farther and farther, eventually arriving at the year when student ability becomes the sole criterion for forming our freshman class.

A scholarship brings Heather Ringwalt into an

Heather Ringwalt '93 had not expected to spend four years as a student at Kenyon, at least not quite so soon. Growing up in Mount Vernon, Ohio, "I had been exposed to Kenyon early because my mother used to work there and my sister and brother-in-law graduated from the College." Despite plans to travel to exotic places in the year following high-school graduation, she submitted an application to Kenyon anyway. As travel plans changed, the College presented "the most sensible option," and Kenyon became a kind of "unintentional Ringwalt family tradition."

Both student and College have reaped benefits from Ringwalt's decision to attend. As a student, Ringwalt observes, "I look at Kenyon as a perfect place to study. I've had several really wonderful professors since I've been here, and I feel like I'm getting different perspectives in a lot of different areas, which is going to be valuable to me. I've also met and learned to deal with people from a variety of backgrounds. They've taught me a lot, and I hope I've taught them something, too."

From the College's perspective, the community is enriched by students such as Ringwalt who involve themselves in a myriad of activities. Her contributions to the community include babysitting for the children of faculty members, data entry for the psychology department, and working as a server with the College caterers and for the president's office ("I wander around with hors d'oeuvres").

She also entertains, through small parts in dramatic presentations ("I was a maid in You Can't Take It with You last year—I didn't serve hors d'oeuvres, though!")

More rewarding still is her volunteer work with second-graders at Gambier's Wiggin Street Elementary School: "I do story editing, and I listen to children read their books and help them with difficult words. I got interested through the Off-Campus Activities Program in Psychology; the group as a whole does a lot of community service-type work. I'm also a member of the Peeps O' Kenyon. It's similar to a fraternity except it's male and female. We do community-service projects, like raking people's yards in the fall; the Peeps are also in charge of Homelessness Awareness Week."

Has she regretted her decision to attend Kenyon rather than visit exotic foreign locales? She is unhesitant. "I receive lots of financial aid, something like $11,000 this year. If it weren't for that, I probably would have ended up at a state school, which isn't where I would want to be. Now I'll probably have a better opportunity to get a good-paying job, and that means something to me. This is really generous of someone, whoever's footing most of my Kenyon bill, and I'm really grateful."

Kenyon Science Scholar Stephenie Liu intends to make an environmental impact

In deciding on Kenyon, Stephenie Liu '94 left the big city behind. A native of the Westchester area of Los Angeles, California, she considered colleges closer to home, such as the University of California at Berkeley or San Diego, but the friendliness of the Kenyon community drew her to Ohio.

"Kenyon was more attentive to me as an applicant," Liu explains. "Other colleges were not as helpful. It's friendlier here. And the air is a lot cleaner!"

Concern for the air typifies Liu's interests. Still in her first semester of study, she is already planning to major in biology en route to a career in environmental science. She is a member of Active Students Helping the Earth Survive (A.S.H.E.S.) and a social member of the Archon Society, a community-service fraternity. Liu also plans to take part in Kenyon Environmental Committee programs. Her involvement in environmental issues helped lead Kenyon to name her a Science Scholar.

Kenyon's Science Scholar program provides qualifying students financial aid equal to half their tuition for four years. Students are chosen on the basis of test scores, high-school records, and evaluation by faculty members. Science Scholars must maintain a 3.5 grade-point average. "Kenyon was my pick of all the colleges," says Liu, "but I wouldn't have been able to come here without the scholarship. It's great that my preference for a small, intimate college and the financial aid came together for me."

The heartland has a hold on Kenyon Honor Scholar
Darrin Pratt

Liu is taking introductory courses in chemistry and in population and environmental biology. "Other bio majors have tried to scare me, saying that it's going to be very hard," she admits. "I want to help out with the earth's situation. The write-ups in the labs are not easy, but it's good scientific training."

The air in Los Angeles is hazy now. Perhaps one day people in her hometown will breathe easier because of the efforts of environmentally conscious—and environmentally educated—people like Stephenie Liu.

Darrin Pratt '91 likes the Midwest. When he was considering colleges, those in New York and California held no appeal for the Toledo, Ohio, native. Cincinnati and Cleveland are cities he's considering for launching a career in teaching English, but at present it's Gambier where he's chosen to live and study.

Pratt counts himself lucky that Kenyon named him an Honor Scholar at the end of his senior year in high school. The Honor Scholar Program grants qualified students a scholarship equal to half of their tuition for four years. Without the scholarship, Pratt admits, he would not have been able to come to the College. Soon after his arrival as a freshman, Kenyon also awarded him one of the first John Dana Kushan Memorial Scholarships, established in memory of the College's long-time dean of admissions. Pratt received $500 a year for four years from the Kushan Fund.

Herman Holt finds the right chemistry at Kenyon

Pratt wanted to spend his college career at a small institution. He chose the rural atmosphere of Kenyon because, as he puts it, "Although there is still as much distraction as you allow, the isolation can help you concentrate when you want to get serious." A lover of books, Pratt finds that the environment encourages exercise of the mind. "There's an intellectual atmosphere on campus. You're free to sit around and think about academic things without being put down for it. The students here work a lot."

Pratt plays on the College's Ultimate Frisbee Team, an activity he deems "extra-curricular." During his freshman and sophomore years he performed with the Chamber Singers; now he's also learning to play the guitar. Pratt spent his junior year abroad, studying at the University of Exeter in England. His scholarships took care of that experience, too. "I'm so grateful for that," he says. "It's something I never could have done otherwise."

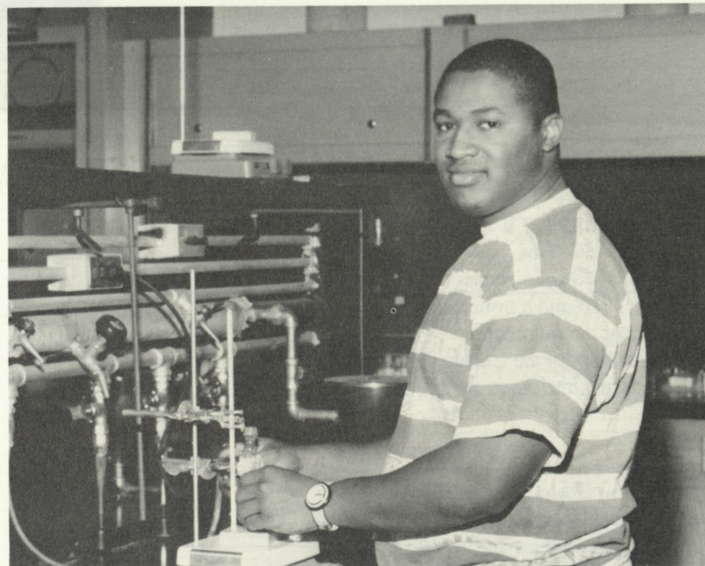

Now, during his senior year, Pratt's time is taken up mostly with studies as he strives to maintain the 3.5 average required to keep his Honor Scholarship. His hard work has paid off—he was recently inducted into Phi Beta Kappa.

Pratt's favorite area of English is twentieth-century literature, especially modernism. After earning his doctorate, Pratt expects to stand on the other side of the podium, talking seriously about books with the next wave of Midwestern scholars.

"Determined" is a good word to describe Herman Holt, a junior from Akron, Ohio. Determined to get the best education, determined to play the best football, determined to reach for the best opportunities, Holt chose Kenyon over other colleges at which he was accepted because of the College's academic reputation and the generous financial-aid package he received. "Financial aid had to be the main factor in deciding where I was going to go to college," recalls Holt. "Kenyon offered me the best package, and I jumped on that."

Now a chemistry major, Holt spent the past summer immersing himself in chemistry and other scientific pursuits. He and seven other Kenyon students spent a week at Duke University under the auspices of the Carolinas-Ohio Science Education Network (COSEN), a consortium (of which the College is a member) of institutions committed to increasing participation by women and minority students in the sciences. His exposure to "hands-on" science helped cement his intentions to attend graduate school or obtain work in the field of chemistry.

Holt spent the rest of the summer as a Howard Hughes Medical Institute special grant recipient, receiving instruction in calculus and organic chemistry from Kenyon faculty members. He is realistic about the rigors of his chosen major: "I still have to complete organic chemistry this year. That's one of the tough ones; it's going to be hard." But given the support of the faculty and other students, he is confident of his ability to complete the major requirements successfully.

Outside the classroom, Holt devotes himself to excelling on the football field. He philosophizes about playing football at a college that emphasizes academics over sports. "There's no lack of competition. In Division III, academics come first, so people don't have to be out there playing football, but they are, and they want to do their best. And that's what Kenyon's all about—everyone wants to do his best. You can't go wrong with a Kenyon education."

To the Alumni .....

Congratulations on a record-breaking year of contributions to the Kenyon Fund. Over $1.07 million was contributed to the 1989-90 annual drive, representing a 4 percent increase over gifts received in 1988-89.

While this percentage increase may seem modest, we are proud that Kenyon alumni have not just sustained but added to the dramatic growth in annual giving experienced during the recently completed Campaign for Kenyon. This has not been the case at many of our peer institutions in years following major campaigns. And this year's increase is particularly noteworthy in that it was achieved in a national environment in which gifts to education are decreasing as a percentage of all charitable giving.

During this past year, a new giving society was introduced. The Philander Chase Society recognizes donors contributing $10,000 or more to the Kenyon Fund. I am pleased to announce that there are twenty inaugural members of the Philander Chase society, representing an almost ten-fold increase over previous gifts at this level.

Your continued support of the Kenyon Fund is a key factor in preserving the tradition of a Kenyon education, an education in the liberal arts and sciences that is second to none.

Thank you,

William P. Russell

On December 4, 1989, came news of the death of William G. Caples '30 H'61, president of Kenyon from 1968 to 1975 and a principal architect of the successful transformation of the College from a men's institution for six hundred to a coeducational one for fourteen hundred. As John Crowe Ransom Professor of English Galbraith Crump remembered at a campus memorial service, "Bill Caples never ceased to reaffirm and joy in the role Kenyon had played in his development, and he always saw the role he played in the College's growth as a natural part of a bargain struck long ago in the early years of the Great Depression, when he first encountered this pleasant rural retreat."

Charter Members

In 1989-90, following the successful completion of the Campaign for Kenyon, a new Kenyon Fund giving society was introduced to acknowledge the substantial increase in financial support received from alumni and friends during the campaign. The Philander Chase Society recognizes donors to the Kenyon Fund of gifts of $10,000 or more in any fiscal year. Kenyon is honored to recognize the charter members of the Philander Chase Society listed here.

Since 1986, Kenyon seniors have pledged their support to the Kenyon Fund for their first four years out of college. This year, 80 percent of the members of the Class of 1990 made four-year pledges to the Kenyon Fund. Kenyon College is pleased to recognize these newest members of the alumni body and to thank them for their pledges of support.

After more than thirty-five years as dean of students at Kenyon, Thomas J. Edwards retired in June. Among the many acknowledgments of his importance to the College was the 1990 William A. Long Award, presented at Honors Day. "You have championed the proper role of athletics at Kenyon," noted President Philip H. Jordan Jr. in making the award. "You understood how athletics for college men and women should complement their academic endeavors and how college sport should be both serious and fun."

The Kenyon Parents Fund 1989-90

To the Parents

Parents of Kenyon students and alumni have once again expressed their appreciation to the College by their contributions to the Kenyon Parents Fund. This year's total of $263,616 included a record number of participants—1,091 current and former Kenyon parents.

This generous support will help Kenyon to maintain its prominent position among America's finest liberal arts and sciences institutions.

I would like to extend special thanks to those parents who donated their time to the Kenyon Parents Fund as members of the Financial Resources Committee of the Parents Advisory Council and as volunteers at the phonathons. Their dedication is a reflection of the commitment to excellence in education of Kenyon's faculty, administration, and staff.

Sincerely,

Yolanda Wolf P'90
Chair, Kenyon Parents Fund

Yolanda Wolf P'90

"We must rebuild America!" was the rallying cry of the Reverend Jesse Jackson when he spoke at a special convocation at Kenyon—and received an honorary doctor of laws degree from the College—on April 26, 1990. During his day on campus, Jackson also visited classes, spoke at an informal forum, and met with students and other members of the community in the Black Student Union in Peirce Hall.

Corporate Matching Gifts

In 1989-90, Kenyon received 576 matching gifts for a total of $269,462. There are more than a thousand companies that will match employees' charitable contributions; many will also match for directors, retired employees, and spouses of employees. All alumni, parents, and friends of Kenyon are encouraged to ask about the matching gift program at their personnel or employee benefits office. The individuals listed under the name of each company are those whose gifts were matched in 1989-90.

Alumni Admissions Program

Volunteers 1989-90 .....

The past year was an exciting one for Kenyon's Office of Admissions. The 410 freshmen who arrived on campus Sunday, August 26, are an academically talented, strongly prepared, and actively involved group. The admissions staff is proud of the fact that more alumni contacts were made during the year through college fairs, interviews, letters of recommendation, social gatherings, and telephone calls than ever before.

The admissions staff thanks the following alumni for their valuable assistance in making 1989-90 a most successful admissions year.

1989-90

As in previous years, Kenyon provided excellent career development programs and services for its students in 1989-90. The involvement of alumni in a variety of these programs and services has been, and continues to be, an essential component in shaping the expansion and progress of career development initiatives.

More than two thousand graduates of the College participate in the Kenyon Career Network, offering to discuss their occupations with students. The Extern Program, with over four hundred alumni participating, provides sophomores and juniors with the opportunity to spend a week of spring vacation with an alumnus or alumna to learn more about a particular field of work or study. In addition, outreach programs in the forms of career-day interviews and social gatherings are scheduled to bring alumni, prospective employers, and students together in various cities.

The interest and dedication of alumni in assisting students with career decision-making has also been evident through on-campus programming. Many alumni return to campus to participate in career talks, panel discussions, and other presentations of occupational information. The annual Department Alumni Program is especially exciting in that it involves faculty members, students, and graduates in open discussions about career options possible with each academic major.

The increasing institutional commitment and the support of alumni for Career Development Center services have continued to enhance Kenyon students' educational preparation and eventual employment in challenging, rewarding, and successful jobs. Through the efforts of Career Development Center staff members and alumni volunteers, more graduates have realized the great marketability and potential of their education at the College.

The Year in Review

A Trio of Anniversaries

The 1989-90 academic year found Kenyon celebrating a trio of anniversaries. During the year, the College observed the fiftieth year of life for the Kenyon Review, the twentieth birthday of the Black Student Union (BSU), and the twentieth year of women as students at the College.

The Kenyon Review celebrations centered on a weekend in November, when a number of leading contemporary men and women of letters gathered on campus for lectures, readings, and remembrances of the myriad people who shaped the journal as contributors and editors. From the time of its founding by critic and poet John Crowe Ransom under the auspices of President Gordon Keith Chalmers and his wife, Roberta Teale Swartz, to the current day, the Review has had a remarkable influence on the College—and on American letters.

Among those taking part in the festivities were writers Russell Banks, E.L. Doctorow '52, Ellen Gilchrist, Elizabeth Hardwick, and Review "biographer" Marian Janssen, as well as Review editors Galbraith M. Crump, Terry Hummer, David H. Lynn '76, Robie M. Macauley '41, Ronald A. Sharp, and Frederick Turner. The weekend also saw the announcement of the first winners of the annual Kenyon Review Awards for Literary Excellence, poet Rodney Jones, short-story writer Reginald McKnight, and essayist James McMichael.

Of course, the Review has had its share of ups and downs, the latter most acutely felt during its hiatus from publication in the 1970s. But the Review, unlike many other financially troubled journals, did come back, thanks to the support of faculty, administration, and alumni. In fact, 1989-90 marked the tenth anniversary of the "new series."

The BSU came to life in 1969 at a time when student activism was common at Kenyon and across the country. It was formed in response to what African-American students saw as a host of needs and problems best addressed by an organized group. In 1989-90, it could proclaim progress as well as continuity: the first chair of the BSU, Roland D. Parson '71, is the father of current Kenyon student and BSU member Tamara V. Parson '93.

The group's goals remain close to those it espoused in 1969, among them enlightening the community about race relations, educating it about the African-American heritage, recruiting students of color (in concert with the admissions office), and providing a campus oasis where African-American students can gather for fellowship.

Activities surrounding the anniversary ranged from special lectures to a March reunion of African-American alumni. At that event, the Black Student Union Lounge in Peirce Hall was renamed the Ujima Imani Lounge.

Throughout the year, the College marked "Twenty Years of Women Students at Kenyon" with a variety of events, beginning with an alumnae art exhibition featuring works by four members of the first class of women, the Class of 1973. Other activities included a special reunion dinner, lectures by prominent women scholars and writers, and symposia on topics ranging from the postgraduate careers of alumnae to men's reactions to the presence of women on campus in the early years of coeducation at Kenyon.

Almost certainly, no decision made at the College in this century has had such a far-reaching—and salutary—effect as the decision to admit women students. And although they were officially admitted to the Coordinate College for Women, the women who entered in the fall of 1969 became full-fledged members of Kenyon College with the demise of the Coordinate College in 1972.

Strange as it may seem, the majority of today's Kenyon alumni remember the College only as a coeducational institution. Because the student body expanded dramatically with the admission of women, more than 50 percent of the alumni body has graduated since 1973.

The 1989-90 academic year, like any other, ended on a high note, with the graduation of the Class of 1990 and the admission of the Class of 1994. Both classes boasted slightly more women than men in their ranks; some would say it was only fitting in the twentieth year of women students on the Hill.

Galbraith Crump, John Crowe Ransom Professor of English, celebrated his retirement from the College with an April 1990 show of his paintings, entitled "Turning the Corner," in Chalmers Memorial Library. He and his wife, Joan, now live in England, where he pursues his artistic avocation of the last two decades. A specialist in Shakespearean and seventeenth-century literature, Crump was a member of Kenyon's English faculty for twenty-five years and the first holder of the Ransom professorship. He also served as coeditor of the Kenyon Review for five years in the 1980s and published books on Augustan verse, Paradise Lost, and the poems of Thomas Stanley. Crump, a graduate of Hamilton College with a doctorate from Oxford University, was awarded an honorary doctor of letters degree by the College at Honors Day 1990.

This year, the Trustee Awards for Distinguished Teaching were presented to Harry Clor, professor of political science, and Ellen Furlough, assistant professor of history, for their superior work in the classroom. A veteran of twenty-five years at Kenyon, Clor was cited for "distinction in guiding generations of students to a richer understanding of the central texts of political philosophy." Furlough, a more recent arrival at the College, was honored for her "wide success in bringing home to students the excitement and value of the study of social history." Both students and alumni are encouraged to nominate professors for the awards.
