

In the News

The SALT II pact between the Soviet Union and the United States has been reached, and a summit between President Carter and Leonid Brezhnev for the formal signing may be held as early as mid-June. Carter has already begun campaigning for Senate passage: "It's a fair treaty. There is no advantage to either country." A final vote on ratification may not be taken until October.

The Senate yesterday passed President Carter's standby gas rationing plan with the qualification that he only use it in absolute national emergency. Proponents of the plan warn against a possible fuel supply interruption; opponents vilify the immense cost of a program which most probably will always be on the shelf.
