Dubious future

Co-ed fraternities

& Matthew Winkler

I be months ago, the Psi Upsilon illeralty and the Peeps, in an meedented appeal, submitted similar puls to Senate requesting permission scept women as member-residents of but fraternities. The issue of co-ed heraities at Kenyon has evoked much in both the Inter-Fraternity-Council M.Senite It is not likely the growing loversy will cease in the wake of the bull's recent Housing Proposal. What min to be seen is how cooperative the alemities might become, if co-ed housing

It is proposal to Senate, Psi U stated "the addition of women to our Imitation is a natural development in the of the College. . Women are an "mal part of the Kenyon experience, and missiour organization is another essential etofKenyon, we have therefore come to caelusion that we must expand to rience and include women in our Diration as a natural development in the "They proposed converting "Leonard Hall into a women's section. he Peeps had hoped to continue their of the East Division of Old Kenyon allowing women to be housed on the allowing women to be housed on the ally allowing women to become members, re will be new life instilled into the matraternities ... and the coeducational askenyon is attempting to achieve will be

This both the Psi U's and the Peeps would how be recognized as co-ed fraternities, is not possible according to present se policy. Dean Edwards pointed out that "All fraternities were originally chartered as male organizations and no change has ever been made in this condition of recognition." In order for a fraternity to receive the new status Psi U and the Peeps have requested, they must "ideally" receive indorsement from the L.F.C. and then make a request to Senate. After the Senate has considered the matter, a recommendation can be made to the College's administration, through the Vice-President. The Senate has not yet received an official statement from the LF.C. One senator stated in a Senate meeting that the LF C felt the fraternities membership should include men and women, but women members should not receive housing privileges in the residence halls assigned to the fraternities. This ambiguous statement only confused the issue.

Dean Edwards suggested procedure for those fraternities (the Peeps specifically) who wish to become co-ed. This would be to "declare that the particular fraternity no longer wishes to be recognized as a fraternity and to request that it he designated officially as a co-ed residential group. The opportunity for such an arrangement has already been advocated by the Senate in its Housing Proposal." This course of action has been taken by the Peeps.

In an 1 F C. meeting on February twenty fifth, the Peeps presented another proposal which will be submitted to Senate. The proposal reads: "We the Peeps of Kenyon College, wish to be recognized by the College as a coeducational residential organization, as described in our constitution. In addition we wish to add the following: 1) the privilege to live as a unit in East Division and, if needed, a provision for contiguous housing. 2.) retention of a voting seat on the organization now known as the Inter-Fraternity- Council." At this meeting, the L.F.C. voted against co-ed housing and tabled the retention of a voting seat for a residential

Rev. Grimm named Associate Chaplain

The Rev. Joan P. Grimm has been appointed Associate Chaplain of Kenyon College for a two-year period beginning July 1, according to Kenyon President William G.

The Rev. Ms. Grimm will be associated with the College Chaplain the Rev. Richard L. Harbour in the coordination of religious activities on campus, conduct of religious services in the Church of the Holy Spirit, and counseling of students. She will also work with other members of the academic community to arrange visits to the campus by leaders in religious affairs.

The Rev. Ms. Grimm last June was ordained to the Diaconate of the Episcopal Church after receiving a Master of Divinity degree from Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass. While in Divinity school she specialized in pastoral theology, including counseling, hospital chaplaincy, group work, spiritual direction and worship.

She previously attended Miami University, Oxford, and Allegheny College Meadville, Pa. The Rev. Ms. Grimm is now working toward her masters degree in geology and archeology at the University of Arizona Tuscon

The Rev. Richard L. Harbour, the Rector of Harcourt Parish, will continue the functions he has assumed the past two years in the Kenyon College Chaplaincy.

debators, clockwise: Susan Barker, Wood, John Salvucci, and Fred Tiffany.

Debaters return with stuff

Justas Philander Chase sailed across the stormy seas to England, the Kenyon Debate team voyaged to the Cuyahoga Community College Debate Tournament last Saturday; both returned with the stuff. For the second time this year the Lords walked off with the first place trophy and thus re-established Kenyon's name in the debate circuit after an absence of several years

The Lords outdistanced their nearest opponent, Cuyahoga, by 92 speaker points, for a team total of 386, both teams had a 6-2 record for the day. Third place was taken by the Kent State-Heidelberg combined unit Other top competitors at the tournament were Wittenberg, Baldwin-Wallace, Clarion, Akron, and John Carroll. A total of thirteen teams participated in the novice tournament. Individually the squad also took top honors Freshman Susan Barker took the first place speaker trophy, her second this year, with 101 points, while her partner, Fred Tiffany, with 96 points, received the fourth place speaker certificate, With 97 points, Tony Wood took the third place speaker trophy while his partner, John Salvucci, chalked up 93 points.

This year the team has reaped the rewards of the ground work laid last year with the revitalization of the then dormant Debate Society. In addition to Saturday's trophy, the Lords have brought home the fifth place trophy from the Akron Tournament, and the first place trophy from the tournament at Heidelberg. The season ends this Friday and Saturday with the state championship rounds being held at Marietta.

The view from here/The flu from here

No fire sirens blared a warning; no special emergency announcements were broadcast on WKCO; the flag was not flown upside down. Instead it was announced inconspicuously, and without fanfare, in Newscope along with Yip Gaboo and Directions to Westerville.

It was forecast like a tropical storm, and seemingly as inevitable as a muddy Gambier winter. What is it that the prophets of doom have seen in their crystal balls that is arriving tomorrow? What has been sighted driving across Pennsylvania, turning South on 1-71 and entering Gambier? "A FLU EPIDEMIC IS EXPECTED TO HIT GAMBIER IN TWO WEEKS!!!" Our proverbial number comes up tomorrow. Those of you that think you have the flu already must be a) mistaken, you're not sick, or b) in the vanguard of the revolution

The flu is an integral part of the Kenyon Experience. Several years ago the flu forecast was so ominous that the Magic Mountain closed its ski slopes early for spring vacation. (Though lightning seldom strikes twice, if all those ailing report to the health center quickly, history might repeat itself.) But some students have signed nonaggression pacts by taking flu shots. These shots, however, are rumored to be not worth the syringes they're administered with. A flu shot is the injection of the flu virus into the body; some report that its only advantage is allowing you to schedule your serious illness at the most convenient time. Or perhaps the shots at least offer some psychological boost to our boys in the field; there is no USO or Bob Hope on the battlefield at Kenyon.

An alternative approach adopted by students is to face the onslaud philosophically with the aid of several so packs of liquid battlegear. Personally, thu cast my lot with Linus Pauling and Adel Davis: Protecting the flank, Vitamin C; wi front, the elite Vitamin B stress forms green beret. But alas, if all of these fall we onslaught of the merciless invader, then a contingency failsafe plan can always be into action-a good stiff shot of whisir Anyone know if nurse Payne gives out In Daniel's shots with her Sinutabs and gard

Frat women

After Kenyon's seemingly successing experiments with co-ed dorms, it appears to be only a matter of time before befraternities themselves would fall presi the onslaught of co-education and tate female members. But surprisingly, the pe to co-ed fraternities has been blocked to both "the College" and several frats, wi obstacles that may never be overcome

The official College line, according Dean Edwards, is that the college charm with each fraternity chapter specifies no membership; to take in women is to break! charter. But this is hardly an argund against co-ed fraternities, it is a technicall almost too trivial to be taken serious Kenyon was an all-male institution when the charters were drawn up-of course charters specify men; there was no other choice. Women now belong here at Ken so it seems a rather simple, even necessiti matter to amend any frat charter so " women may belong. This might amount little more than striking a single work 'men'. Numerous other previously if male colleges have taken this route with be problems. It should be noted, in fact, that is year's President of the Psi U. chapter Bowdoin was a woman.

At least two fraternities here at Kenni wish to turn co-ed, but neither of them have attempted to simply amend their charles Instead, they were given two options: 1) F co-ed but lose their status as a fraterol (i.e., no vote on I.F.C.), or 2) go through complicated procedure that involve drawing up a proposal and getting it appropriate by the I.F.C., the Senate, the Trustees in God knows who else. Of course, such i proposal will get snagged immediately in the

Which brings us around to the reobstacle on the route to co-ed fraternities seems that several fraternities (at least of in each frat dorm building) are strong opposed to the idea of allowing women to lin in their dorm. Although Senate has alread recommended that Old Kenyon be designally as a co-ed dorm, these fraternities in willing to take their fight all the way to the trustees - where they are more than likely win. The rights and wishes of the fraternities must, of course, be give serious consideration. Unfortunately, looks as though whichever way the issue decided, the rights of some faction will s violated. Someone has to give. Thus, the reimpasse. At the moment, the only logical solution would entail a reorganization fraternity housing arrangements (ef-moving the co-ed frats into the similar building)—something for fraternities think about, but a long shot at best.

Iquasi-fraternal group

We were surprised and pleased to see that a Collegian now gives public exposure to ad-fraternal groups. Tradition is a solid n't of security here at our almost-ivy milition despite attacks made on it by who would have us changing things for better". Like the Ryebucks, our society telicated to the purpose of dedication to mose in a self-gratifying way. Although we usider ourselves too hip and comalistic to become members of stablished fraternities (and thus be supplied to negative stereotyping), we state the need for secret societies can our community as a necessary retion to misguided students who scorn all and good old-fashioned fun.

Wehope you will consider publishing our patetical history and group photo (taken the classical prep-school yearbook (SEE). We feel that the more exposure and care age cliques get, the better their inves for surviving in these antimemoralist times. Our rush starts next bub reference to Mr. Block's article of a 7 and Mr. Donahue's letter of Feb. 14, I must register my dissatisfaction with It Block's proposed plans for this year's brells, I realize that the yearbook is not distance and that the editor is under a saideal of pressure to produce a good arbook I also am aware that each editor Addiketostrive for a bit of individuality li hat his work may be somehow mbered. However I feel that if Mr. od is allowed to publish the senior thres by the method he proposed in his risto the Collegian, the memories of the of Reveille will be of a yearbook that regulated itself for its failure to be stetentative of Kenyon College.

Layonis unique because of its small size dedremely picture sque campus. To leave out of any part of the Kenyon shook is to slight its beauty. If the arbox is to represent the unique mushment which is Kenyon College, oldnotbe ruined by extraordinarily dull imaspired pictures from a photobooth. allerasenior or any one else is sitting in

Mr Block's idea of photobooth pictures Otaol be bad for publication in a yearbook tollege with a large senior class and an resung campus. Indeed, it might even payearbook for a school such as OSU, dimight be a neat idea for a high school stock instead of posed shots of students the into ties and jackets or dresses. here. I think to do this to a Kenyon thook would not only be a disgrace to butto Mr. Block's creativity as well as I must admit that I am a senior and refore am arguing from a biased position

However, I am far from alone. The only student, let alone senior, I have spoken to who has supported Mr. Block's idea is his brother. Many seniors have stated that they would rather not have their pictures in the vearbook than have one taken of them in such a depersonalized environment as the Big N photobooth. One of the purposes of the Kenyon experience is to promote the flowering of an individual. Therefore it is only reasonable that the yearbook be a medium for a senior to express himself as he has seen himself develop at Kenyon. If he desires this expression to take place via a photobooth picture-fine! If he does not he should not be forced to do so. Mr. Block's aim should be pictures of people rather than pictures with people in them. And, if he is so bent on his photobooth pictures, why has he singled out the senior class as his victims?

THE KENYON COLLEGIAN

Mr. Block correctly assumes that I do not need proof that I wasn't a failure, but after four years here I would like something which gave me a lasting look at my friends; something which does remind me of my friends and my stay here. pictures may give me a lasting look at some of my friends, but the pictures could just as probably have been taken in Atlantic City as in Gambier

I believe Mr. Block has a real misconception of the purpose of a yearbook. I, for one, feel that a yearbook is primarily for the senior, so that he can have a lasting memory of his college days. I have seen three Kenyon yearbooks. They have all been unique, yet all have been recognizably Kenyon. And, I must say also that they did not mean as much to me as does this year's Reveille Not because pictures of me or my friends weren't in them (many of my friends, seniors and underclassmen, were in the yearbooks), but because it wasn't the yearbook for my year. This is the 1974 Reveille and I am a member of the class of 1974. There seems to be a connection. I was not of the class of 1971, 1972, 1973, and 1974, thus the Reveille's of 1971, 1972, and 1973 did not mean as much to me. I think, not only from a traditional, but also from a realistic point of view, that the yearbook should give major consideration to the seniors. I do not wish to make an issue of this, but perhaps the fact that Mr. Block is not a senior distorts his estimation of the value the yearbook may hold for a senior. If he blows this he cannot make up for it next issue-it is a one shot

As for the energy, manpower, expertise and money he claims are not available. I have three comments. If Mr. Block does not have the energy and the expertise he should not be attempting to do the yearbook at all. As for the money, he knows as well as I that it is more expensive to get three photobooth pictures than three pictures taken by hand. And, as for manpower, I know of an individual, a good photographer, on the yearbook staff, who told Mr. Block that he was willing to take every senior's picture. Mr. Block turned him down. I know that he could produce photographs of a quality far superior than any from the Big N photobooth. No. I do not believe that energy, manpower, expertise and money are at the root of Mr. Cont. on p. 5

by Steven Schaufele Official Critic. Kenyon College Music Club

On Monday, February 18, Kenyon College had the great pleasure of hearing a concert by the Ohio University Trio, presented by the Music Department. The Trio consists of Howard Beebe, violin, Leighton Conkling, violoncello, and Richard Syracuse, piano, all members of the music faculty at OSU. Having little more to say about them personally, I shall plunge right into my review.

The concert began with a trio in C minor by Beethoven, one of a set of three trios that comprise Beethoven's first appearance in print This was a bit of a surprise to a lot of people, who were expecting the later, better work. The performance interesting as well as enjoyable, in that the musicians took all the repeats, something which is coming more and more into vogue nowadays, but is still rare. The articulation on the part of all three was very impressive, the notes being played very clearly and cleanly. In the second movement, the piano took a very predominant role, which, since it was Beethoven's instrument, makes some sense. The violin squeaked a bit on some triple-stops in the last movement, but otherwise behaved itself fairly well. On the whole, I would like, on the behalf of the audience, to express appreciation to Mr. Beethoven for the music

The second offering on the program was the world premiere of "Three Pieces for 'Cello and Violin' by Karl Ahrendt (sounds like "aren't"), retiring professor of composition at OSU. The work showed a very interesting and satisfying use of counterpoint. A few notes in the first piece were not clear, and I doubt that this was intentional. The second piece was probably the most interesting: Mr. Conklin spent all his time either, plucking, tapping, or strumming his instrument, while Mr. Beebe improvised his part, with a lot of glissando and left-hand pizzicato. The piece was roughly in an ABA form, centering around G as a tonal centre. The third piece was characterized by alternation, in each instrument, between lyrical and tumultuous

After the intermission, the musicians returned to play the Trio in C major, Op 87, by Johannes Brahms. I must confess to a bit of impatience at this point, as I had another engagement that evening to make. And Brahms is not the music to listen to when you are feeling hurried. But the execution and articulation continued excellent, in spite of some rather overly-romantic music. The second and third movements were especially well done, with good spirit.

On the whole the musicians played together pretty well. The violin tended to over-emphasize himself a bit, though both he and the cello were properly subdued in the second movement of the Beethoven. And the cellist should not have let himself be so drowned out (an easy thing for a violin to do to a cello). But, otherwise, it was a very enjoyable performance, and we would like to thank the Ohio University Trio, and the Kenyon Music Department for bringing organization. This vote seems to contradict an earlier vote on February 11, 1974, which advocated the inclusion of all residential groups in the L.F.C.'s membership. No doubt the fraternities themselves do not all share the same goals. The D.Phi's, A.D's, Delts and Beta's are all opposed to coeducational fraternities and co-ed housing in any of the three fraternity buildings (Hanna, Old Kenyon, Leonard).

If the Senate recommends to the College the Peeps proposal, it still will not be a foregone conclusion that this new residential group will remain in East Division. For the moment, it seems the only way a fraternity can become co-ed is by relinquishing its status as a fraternity—jeopardizing its vote on the L.F.C. Unless the College changes its policy fraternities will remain all-male organizations even if the national affiliate allows female members. As Dean Edwards said, "the College is only concerned with the individual chapter at Kenyon, regardless of the policy set by the national organization." He believes "more important questions will have to be raised and a greater perspective taken of all the other things that allow and influence the make-up of the College."

Orphins of the storm

hy Jne Giois

A fairly amusing windstorm slid through Gambier last Friday. It inconvenienced many as it swept hats from heads, papers from hands, and debris from trees. Two larger examples of the latter: one tree snapped down the power lines for the north end of campus, and the other cushioned the impact of its fall on the back of a car belonging to Professor Daniel. We visited Professor Daniel in his office and discovered unsurprisingly, that the incident has left him unruffled. In a calm, quiet voice he told us that he first found out about the accident in "a rather brutal fashion. As I was coming out of my two o'clock class, Mr. Crump came up to me and said. 'I have some good news and some bad news for you." The good news was that he didn't have to attend that afternoon's English Department meeting

The trunk of his car was crushed and the tail lights torn off. The weight of the tree lifted the front tires off the ground, and according to Professor Daniel, "at least ten dollars worth of gasoline went bubbling into the gutter." He suggested that the Collegian hold a contest to find the reason why it is funny for a tree to fall on an automobile. "No one can help laughing—including me. It only hurts when I laugh, as the old joke goes."

Cut the brake

When the power lines went down, the Dorm 3 elevator ground to a halt between the first and second floors; two students, Diane Goforth and Ann Robinson, were trapped inside for half an hour. Security, Maintenance, the Gambier Fire Department, and Don Omahan rushed to the scene. Between them there was one flashlight. The inside doors were pried open by the girls, but the outside door's can only be unlatched on the first and ninth floors. Mr. Omahan's idea of releasing the brake and pulling the car up (it can't go down) to the ninth floor was quickly vetoed by the girls. The problem was solved by one Tom Leply, electrician, who dramatically slid down the cable from the ninth floor and unlocked the doors from atop Award winning poet Louise Gluck will hold reading at 8:30 p.m. on April 14 in Pent Hall Lounge. Her poems have appeared to the New Yorker, The Atlantic, The National The Yale Review, Poetry and other periodicals. Her first volume of poems. Firstborn, was published in 1968. A second book, The House of Marshland, will be published soon.

Writing contests to be held

by Robert W. Daniel

Needy students, as well as those in search of glory, should know about the awards give for writing, both verse and prose, on Hosor Day—which this year falls on 30 April 0 four of these the winners are decided a competitions that are administered—but significantly the Department of Englis Pages 36-37 of the Student Handbood describe all the awards, but I will be summarize the conditions for the competitions in hopes of stimulating as multinterest as possible.

The Propper Prize, a cash award, is given for a poem or group of poems by a freshmator sophomore, whereas only jumiors as seniors are eligible for the John Cross Ransom Poetry Prize. This prize is a autographed copy of Ransom's Selected Poems.

The other two competitions call essays. For the Ogden Prizes (first, see and even third ones have been given, she are also cash awards, the essays may be any subject. The George Gund Awards it limited to topics that "illuminate the naw of American life, culture, or principles government." The amounts of the sawards vary with the varying income investments, but this year the Gund Awar will probably be the same as last year is and $200.

Class papers and parts of these may submitted, but those decorated instructors' comments are likely to disqualified by squeamish judges as ubmissions must be signed all pseudonyms, and an envelope having pseudonym on the outside and the writereal name and class numerals on the instruction of the work is being submitted should accompany each one. The competitor which the work is being submitted should be deposited with the Fard Secretary in Ascension 101 by Saturdal April, From there they will find their earther chairman of the proper committee.

Yes, the entire school should be represented in this year's Reveilleespecially the senior class. They should not be marked apart from the rest of the school by strikingly unartistic photographs. I want to remember Kenyon College, not the Big N photobooth! I think it is my right (and the right of any other senior who feels as I do) to have my picture in the yearbook, and to have It taken at Kenyon, so that I may have a far more aesthetically pleasing and memorable picture of my days at Kenyon and of my friends as well.

In recent times the Student Council has encountered the problem of no quorum for meetings. The two most often cited reasons keeping the legislators from attending are snow and the Wizard of Oz. However, between the two quorumless meetings Council discussed an issue of concern to the student body at large and particularly to campus organizations.

Mr. David Barrie, treasurer of Student Council, presented a proposal to change the procedure under which the Student Activity Fund operates. Presently the Fund is part of the General Fees paid at the beginning of each semester. From the General Fee, $51.00 per student is allocated to Student Council for funding organizations, the social committee, films, etc. Inflation, however, has caused ever-increasing demands to be made upon the Council, and it now seems apparent that this $51 00 is insuffcient to many campus adequately supply the organizations.

Dennis Pannullo's "Rembrandt Misunderstood" in the February 14 Collegian is an extraordinary piece of writing. It seems to me a model of what a critic should do in summing up a lecture (David Smith's "Rembrandt and the Narrative Tradition"). Might we have more from this perceptive person?

The burlesque comedy of Sean O'Casey and the subtle; compassionate comedy of Anton Chekhov have been blended-with that special Kenyon touch-into a double feature of short plays to be presented at the Drama Annex on Friday, March 1 at 8:30 and on Saturday, March 2 at 9:30, Nannie's Night Out by O'Casey and Swan Song by Chekhov will be directed by senior Dan Wilson. Swan Song, one of Chekhov's most popular short works, is a sad but humorous look at an aging actor who, after his final performance in the theater, tries to escape from loneliness by telling the story of his career to an old prompter. Nannie is a burlesque featuring three elderly men who attempt to marry a middle-aged widow. It is typical O'Casey, mixing serious Irish themes with finely tuned comedy. The Kenyon performance of Nannie's Night Out will be only the second production of this play in the United States.

Tickets are available at the Hill Theater box office from 2-4 p.m. daily, through Saturday. Free with I.D.

At UNC Chapel Hill, a candidate for Student Council is a marxist calling himself "El Libre". The colorful candidate has announced that "The time has come to kick the ass of the ruling class and return the University to the people." El Libre's campaign promises include an end of organized classes, because the class struggle has led to the exploitation of the students; a raise of minimum grades from "F" to "B", to give weekly tequila parties in the pit; to nationalize all student stores; to socialize examinations; to reduce the work week from 15 to 6 hours; and to promote streaking.

At Ohio Northern U. the Letterman's Club will elect its new queen for this coming year. The club plans to crown the queen at a wrestling match between ONU and Urbana College. The elaborate ceremonies will take place during the intermission, but no mention was made as to the relation between the match and the election of the queen, we can only wonder.

What you knew in fourth grade, you may not know now . .

An Oberlin Alumna conducting a survey as part of a Women's Studies program has found some startling answers to that age old question asked of fourth graders; "What are you going to do when you grow up?" One young lad answered, "I'd go to work and play hard to get with my secretary." Young ladies answered more along the lines of, "I will sleep until noon, then read a book, at five cook dinner, and then go to bed." When this question was recently posed to a Kenyon senior he replied after much thought, "I don't know." It is amazing what 12 years of formal education does to one's aspirations.

Higher education and the Police .

The Ohio Highway Patrol Academy has announced that it has 35 patrolmen enrolled from other police forces, i.e. municipality, village, university, etc. These officers are enrolled in the basic training program of the school, but officials note that many return to take higher level courses. The officials are also pleased to note that this return is not unusual, as 16 out of the 35 have had college experience, and six of them have degrees.

Finance referendum next week

The new proposal calls for the Student Activity Fund to be freed from General Fees, and itemized separately on the bill. The student body will then be allowed to vote each. year on whether the Fund's per capita charge is to be increased, decreased, or left unchanged. The Student Council Finance Committee, after reviewing past expenses and predicting future costs, will submit a recommendation to Student Council. After finalization and approval, the Council willrelease the recommendation to the student body; a referendum will follow two weeks later. The final vote will be binding, provided that at least 25 percent of the student body votes on the issue.

The new plan will give students more direct control over activity funds. Mr. Barrie feels that it will force a desirable increase in student involvement. 'Students are going to want to know because it is a tax on them. The tax will be imposed by themselves on themselves.'

On March 4, 5 and possibly 6 a student referendum will be held in order to gauge student reaction to this plan. Students will vote simply on whether they would be willing to accept the responsibility of levying an activities tax upon themselves. The results of this vote will then be taken under consideration by the Trustees, who must approve the plan before it can be instituted. According to Mr. Barrie, Dean Edwards and Vice President McKean have expressed the opinion that the trustees would be receptive towards such a plan. At present, the Trustees are hesitant about increasing the General Fees charge; they would prefer a separately designated Student Activities Fee which would be under student control.

La Strada (1954), Fellini. With 185 Quinn, Richard Basehart, Giuliette 1958 Music by Nino Rota, B & W.

This story of a callous, fractioning the strongman who buys a half-witted pagirl, abuses her until she loses her and then leaves her—only to suffer a later—is perhaps the most being profoundly moving of Feilini's films in combines his poetic humanism an energalistic background to create which, when fused with Rota's his music, produces an unbearable endrama. The performance by Massa-Basehart are astonishing. La Stradaum the best films this semester.
