Fragment of a scored Censer lid which does not include a portion of the rim. The scored side has been burned, while the unscored side has not been scorched. There is a fine core, which extends from the burned, scored side to within 2 mm of the unscored side. Hardness = .8. The burned, scored side is quite rough, while the unscored side is smoother. The grooves are quite deep - 1.5 mm, and the edges are jagged. The vertical grooves appear to have been made after the horizontal. There is no paint, slip, or applique.
