Fragment of an ocarina which includes a sounding chamber, 3 openings, and three prongs. there is no fire core, fire clouding or burning. 2.3 = hardness. The surface is quite smooth and the three prongs blend into the remainder of the fragment smoothly and gradually - there are no abrupt lines. The rim surrounding the largest opening has been specially prepared - it is thinner than the rest of the fragment and appears to have been the surface along which this portion broke from the rest of the ocarina. The prongs extend from 1.1cm to 1.8cm from the base of the fragment and they are about .9cm wide. There is no slip, paint, applique, or incision. The prongs were probably mold-made.
