Paste ext 10YR 5/3

Fragment of a scored censer lid which includes a portion of the rim. The interior is too burnt to detect the presence or absence of a fire core. Hardness = 2.5. The surface of the scored portion is quite rough while the unscored side is smoother. The unscored side has brush marks which run parallel to the rim, some of which are almost incisions. The incisions on the scored side form a rectangular pattern and the vertical lines appear to have been made after the horizontal lines. The incisions extend to within .4 cm of the rim and are .3 cm wide and .2 cm deep. They are also quite jagged, and may have been made on fairly dry clay. There is no paint or slip. No applique.
