Fragment of a hollow mold-made figurine. There is a fire core which extends from the interior surface to within 1 cm of the exterior surface. There is no burning or fire clouding. Hardness 1.7. The surface is worn and the interior is rougher. There is also a rectangular groove or impression on the interior, .8 cm wide, 1.9 cm long which extends from the base of the fragment. The groove is smoother than the remainder of the surface and it may have something to do with the molding process. The exterior of the fragment is principally composed of a rounded summit which is surrounded by a flatter margin. There is no slip or paint.
