This is a fragment of a scored censer lid. It is part of the rim. The rim is thickened and rounded. The paste is very coarse, light in color and with lots of medium and large inclusions of white, red, clear, which are also visible on the surface. The exterior is concave and has been indifferently smoothed. The interior was also smoothed before being scored. The scoring runs in ~~to~~ opposite diagonals creating the typical pattern of irregular ~~to~~ rectangles. The incision is fairly deep and med width. It seems to have been made with a single sharp pointed instrument. The right to left diagonals were made before the left to right ones. The scored surface is burnt.
