Strange man noticed on South End

A strange man has been sighted on the south end of campus, particularly around Leonard Hall. He is described as short and stocky, with sandy brown hair in a buzz cut. "He looks noticeably 'non-Kenyon'," said Dennis Bourke, Leonard house manager in an e-mail to Leonard residents. Anyone who sees this person around campus is encouraged not to approach him but to call Security immediately at 5109.

Grand opening planned

First-year, senior Senators elected

The senior class elected its class committee and representative to Campus Senate yesterday. The sophomore and junior classes planned to elect their class committees and Senate representatives as well, but those elections had to be delayed due to technical problems, according to Student Council Vice President for Student Life Edan Crosby. '97.

The sophomore class voted to have elections rescheduled from 4 p.m. yesterday to 4 p.m. today. The first-year students elected representatives to First-Year Council, Student Council and Campus Senate on Sunday. Kristin Meister is the first-year representative to Student Council and Emily Robichaud is the first-year senator. First-year elections are conducted by the Resident Advisors, whereas the other elections are conducted by the Student Council Committee for Student Life.

Jon Freed is the senior class's representative to Campus Senate, a governmental body composed of students, faculty and administrators. This academic year will be his fourth year representing his class on Senate. Freed ran unopposed and received 87 percent of the vote. Gretchen Baker, Lizzy Piattelli, Ken Schulte, Tony Tate, Peter Gold, Abby Fossom, Jessica Stockdale and Caroline Benedo will form the senior class committee. The class committee is responsible for coordinating class events.

One hundred twenty-seven seniors voted in this election.

Faculty approve new policy for sexual harassment cases

By David Shargel
Senior Staff Reporter

Kenyon's policy on addressing charges of sexual harassment against faculty members was revised at the May 1996 faculty meeting to provide a more fair and regularized process for all concerned parties.

The readjusted policy provides the victim, the accused and the college, a fair and confidential grievance process, whether formal or informal, according to Wendy Hess, the college's ombudsperson.

In the event that a student feels sexually harassed by a faculty member the student can either address the matter informally or formally.

Informally, the student has two options. First, a confidential conversation can be held with Hess or a sexual harassment advisor. The purpose of such a conversation is to explore the student's options, including whether or not to pursue the case formally. These conversations are strictly confidential and no written record is maintained.

A second informal option is to address the issue through media tion. This would require a written statement from the victim detailing the incident as well as a written request for the mediation to occur. The ombudsperson would then attempt to resolve the situation through a mutual agreement between both the victim and the accused.

If mediation does not resolve the situation, the complainant may choose to file a formal grievance. In this case the victim must provide a written statement which is submitted to the ombudsperson and subsequently forwarded to the provost. A copy of the complaint will be given to the accused faculty member who is then required to provide a written response. The Faculty Sexual Harassment Hearing Board is then notified and a date is set for a formal hearing.

The Hearing Board then comes to a decision based on evidence presented by the student and the faculty member in question.

One major change in the college's sexual harassment policy is that the hearing panel now includes student members. "This may make it feel more comfortable for the victim," said McClure.

Debate in St. Louis cancelled, but Perot to meet Dole there

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bob Dole may not want to date Rosalynn Perot, but he can't stop the Texas billionaire from following him around.

President Clinton's two main challenges will both be in St. Louis Wednesday. That's the day the first presidential debate had originally been scheduled for Washington University, only to be dropped in the skirmish over whether Perot should be included.

Dole, the Republican presidential candidate, had opposed a three-way debate with Clinton and Perot, the Reform Party candidate. After hours of negotiation Saturday, Dole won the battle. He and Clinton will debate, without Perot, twice next month.

The Dole campaign confirmed Saturday that Dole will come to town, anyway, on Wednesday. He will speak at 9 a.m. at Saint Louis University, said Dan Hubbard of Dole's Missouri campaign. Perot will be here, too, though the time and place have not been determined. Reform Party state chairwoman Sandy McClure said Sunday.

"Perot told Dole he'd meet him in St. Louis, so here he comes," McClure said.

McClure said it was doubtful Perot would show up at the Dole rally and try to start an impromptu debate.

"I don't think so. We don't want to disrupt campus function," she said.

Clinton and Dole negotiators agreed to debate — without Perot — Oct. 6 in Hartford, Conn., and Oct. 16 in San Diego. Vice President Al Gore and Dole's running mate, Jack Kemp, will debate Oct. 9 in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Perot announced Saturday that he would file a lawsuit today in Washington seeking an injunction against sponsorship of the debates by the Commission on Presidential Debates if the Reform ticket was excluded.

The bipartisan commission recommended last week that Perot be denied a spot in the debates because he has no "realistic chance" of winning the election.

McClure said she senses a backlash against Dole and Clinton for excluding Perot.

"It's amazing to me they'd be so foolish," she said. "This is just an outrage to so many people."
The vice president of the National Organization for Women said Monday that WMI was creating a hostile environment for women. Karen Johnson, who is also a retired Air Force colonel, said WMI spokesman Mike Strickler called Ms. Johnson's criticism "insane." She said he ruled on a "silly" basis.

Two women have verbally harassed me and then tried to deny me access to a library, said a student at the University of Virginia.

Karen Keane, a 17-year-old high school student in Christiansburg, said in a television interview Tuesday that the hostility and harassment she has been subjected to prompted her to abandon her goal of attending VMI.

"I was yelling at me, wishing I was dead, telling me they were going to hurt me physically if I did go," Miss Keane told WLOL-TV in Roanoke. "I had no clue where this would go."

Search for Vice President of Libraries, Information Services commences

By Ari Rothman
Senior Staff Reporter

The search committee for a new Vice President for Library and Information Services is reviewing applications, and will accept them until Oct. 30, hoping to complete the process by the end of the first semester. The committee has received 24 applications thus far.

The committee, chaired by Professor of Drama Harley Marley, added two students this fall. Along with the provost, Katherene Will, the committee has 12 members comprised of library officials, students and professors. Over the summer, the committee formulated and publicized a job description. Published in Keen's August edition of Forking, the committee states the vice president's responsibilities will include providing leadership, strategy, and overall management for the library, academic and administrative computing, and telecommunications.

"Because it is a new position, writing the job description was especially important and somewhat more difficult than usual," Marley said.

In publishing the new position, Marley said the committee is "cashing out as wide as possible," in hopes of attracting candidates "with a breadth of experience in different areas of expertise." Marley said that while VMI candidates do not have the "breadth of experience our cadets must have," he believes candidates "with a lot of management experience, and the ability to communicate with a variety of people, from the administration to the students," is what the committee is looking for.

students to come forward with a complaint such as this," Hass said.

The policy did not change in response to any one incident of harassment. Professor Timothy Shutt, chair of the faculty, explained, "The faculty decided to address the issue not in response to any allegation or set of allegations, but rather with a view toward regularizing and streamlining fact-finding and adjudicating procedures in the unhappy event that such a situation might arise."

He said it has been a formal complaint lodged against a faculty member in over 11 years, the college does see approximately three or four complaints each year. Hass said, "None of them involve invocations or overtures to engage in sexual activity. Mainly the allegations have been of verbal sexual harassment in which the attention received felt unwelcome and unwarranted."

"Ah, we also have reasons to believe that more incidents occur than are reported," she said.

Faculty approve new policy

The "faculty decided to address the issue not in response to any allegation... but rather with a view toward regularizing... procedures in the unhappy event that such a situation might arise."

Timothy Shutt argued that they involve invocations or overtures to engage in sexual activity. Mainly the allegations have been of verbal sexual harassment in which the attention received felt unwelcome and unwarranted.

"I also have reasons to believe that more incidents occur than are reported," she said.

Several reasons for this, including embarrassment, fear of being blamed, lack of privacy and concern that the complaint process could be more painful than the harassment itself.

Because of the lack of formal complaints however, Shutt said, "You could say that there are many criminals that are high in their potential impact and low in frequency, I am happy to be able to say that this is the situation here.

Regardless of any changes made, Hass concluded, "as matters of policy the college continues its formal system of sexual aggression and oppression, and I must point out that the process is not a means of harassment."
University of Minnesota faces housing crunch, converts dormitory lounges into residences

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — For the second year in a row, the University of Minnesota has had to convert dormitory lounges temporarily into sleeping quarters for 251 students, mostly first-year students. Officials believe the problems stem from the university's commitment last year to provide a room for all first-year students.

Colleges and universities throughout the country are dealing with the same problem because they don't have the space to accommodate all of the students.

In the past, students were placed on waiting lists, which meant many would have to wait out a quarter, said Laurie McLaughlin, assistant director for residential life.

"Our goal is to provide them with an option," McLaughlin said. "Even if it's temporary, at least they will be part of the university community."

Bill Ceccwich, a first-year student, said he shares a lounge with three other students.

"I'm not sure what I would have done if this wasn't here. It's too far too commute from Nebraska. It's not perfect, but it will do," Ceccwich said.

Beds and desks have been moved into the lounges in several dorms, which would normally be used for watching TV and making phone calls, said Nancy Lee, assistant director for administration and operations.

Three to six students will share the converted rooms until a permanent space is found. That will probably happen within the next three weeks when those students who have dormitory reservations cancel.

"We alerted the students this summer by letter or phone, explaining that they would have to stay in a temporary space in order to start school on time," Lee said.

President defends decision to raise taxes in 1993

FREEHOLD, N.J. (AP) — In a state seized by tax-cutting fever three years ago, President Clinton pushed through legislation to raise taxes in 1993, saying Tuesday his supporters cast "the right vote for America."

"In the end, I believe," Clinton told an audience in New Jersey that he had raised taxes enough to help the economy. "I believe we got it right."

Clinton urged voters to consider whether the war against illegal drugs was "fair, and complex" in view of what he called the tax increases.

Clinton accused Republicans of backing his tax package "by and large" and said he would continue to urge it as a cure for "this bloated budget." The Bush administration had sought a smaller increase.

"That one vote, they say, was the biggest tax increase in history. Of course it was," Clinton said. "I think in the debates he [Robert Dole] said that about every two years, including this year, something was passed that increased the deficit, that increased government spending."

Carrel bemused by student ‘ingenuity’

I have been a carrel for ten years now, as that is the age of the library I inhabit. Two Thursdays ago, I observed the gradually increasing line of students gathering before dawn, blury-eyed, so that they may acquire a good number for our selection. I was concerned, at first, because the individuals whom I wished to occupy had not yet arrived. There existing an ample number of students preceding this person, I worried if I would have the opportunity to select me.

Perhaps his mind drifted in the loving and tempting embrace of sleep, (a commodity reached by the queue ahead of him). Maybe he indulged in a breakfast, the rigors of waiting in line requiring of him more stamina than an empty stomach could endure. At any rate, as the line formed I noted he was not numbered within it.

Such was my joy to see that, as the doors opened, the queue began to move, that my chosen occupant did arrive, superceding the precedent of the line, he managed to enter the building and obtain a number within five of the front.

Let me say that I immensely enjoyed watching the spectacle. By steadily walking ahead did my man manage the obstacle of the swimmer who arrived six, hair still damp from practice. Artfully he dodged past the philosophy major that meticulously organized and nummerated the order of the entire mob.

Let’s not automatically accept those decisions which are based on politics. In the end, the whole Kenyon community will benefit.

Student elections need reform

How did you, as a student, select Kenyon College? Had you put up an informed decision making all the information you had available?

Or did you choose Kenyon based on the number of times you heard the name?

The second approach to college selection is, simply, a bad one; it is an ill-informed decision based on unrelated and unimportant factors. It fails to make use of any important information (since it was never gathered in the first place) and it fails to take the future—your future—into consideration.

As questionable as the last approach is, however, it seems eerily similar to the third of this series of elections: the candidates—few as they were (especially for the senior class, where Jon Freed ran unopposed)—were announced Friday, and their letters of intent posted on the campus on Monday evening. The election then ran from Tuesday to Wednesday. And by today, one of the most important bodies of student government has been formed.

Yet how much did these candidates discuss various issues relevant to this campus? Such as the campus capital campaigns, curriculum review, grad school prep courses, or parking? And how attentive was the student body to any exchange of ideas between these candidates? How many students took the time to read those hard-to-find packets of letters of intent—often thrown away or studied with food soon after their placement on Gundy’s and Peirce’s tables—and thus make an informed decision? And would those letters have even helped to do so?

Certainly junior Brian Elser’s letter made the closest approach to a discussion of “the issues”: his two “great ideas” (his own words) are 1) “the Kenyon Monorail...no more of the long walks for those of you who live up north in the cold of winter” and 2) “an underground (parking) complex spanning from beneath Caples to Old Kenyon to finally correct this parking shortage.”

A joke, certainly (or at least, we hope). But at least he offers some concrete ideas—no matter how flippancy—in his letter of intent. The rest of the letters were certainly sincere in their pledges to serve various classes, but all identical in doing so. They merely turned the election into a popularity contest, an opportunity for the voters to decide whether they like the typeface of sophomore Crosby Wood’s letter better than that of sophomore Eli Kirklaber’s.

We suggest that future Senate and Student Council elections be far more issue-driven. The time between the announcement of the candidates and the actual election needs to be lengthened so the voters can make a more informed decision. During that extended period of time, several debates or open forums should be held so as to allow students to gauge their potential representatives on the issues. Letters of intent should be placed in the dining halls and posted on the VAX in an easily accessible manner.

These elections may not be as crucially important as your selection of Kenyon as the school where you will go your B.A. But, if we are to believe all of this year’s letters of intent, your general welfare for the year hinges crucially on the students you select as representatives. You should, therefore, be given the chance to make an informed decision.

Pulitzer Prize-winning author Jane Smiley will give a lecture and participate in a discussion with Kenyon professor and fellow writer P.F. Kluge about life in academia

By Eric Harper
Senior Staff Writer

Pulitzer Prize-winning author Jane Smiley will present a lecture on Monday at Rosie Hall. The lecture, titled "A Writer's World," is sponsored by the Faculty Lecture Series. It begins at 11:10 a.m., followed by a reception in Peirce Lounge. Smiley will also take part in a discussion with Writer-in-Residence P.F. Kluge in Bolton Theater. Both are open to the public.

Said Faculty Lectureships coordinator Susan Spaid, "Smiley was one of the Committee's top choices."

Smiley received the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction in 1992 for her novel "A Thousand Acres." She recently authored the best-selling "Moo: A Novel."

"Moo," which satirizes university life, takes place at the fictional agricultural college known as Moo U.

The book, according to Publishers' Weekly, centers on the "hypocrisy, egomania, prejudice and self-delusion that flourish on campus—and also reflect society at large."

Initially, Smiley had been unable to accept Kenyon's invitation, said Spaid. When one of her speaking engagements fell through, however, Smiley contacted the college and agreed to speak.

According to Spaid, Smiley read Kluge's book "Alma Mater" and Kluge read "Moo: A Novel." Spaid said the authors thought it would be fun to conduct a discussion on their books both of which comment on life in academia.

"When speakers want to do something fun, outside the norm, books are "The Age of Grief" and "Ordinary Love and Good Will."

"The college feels this lecture series is a significant part of the students' education," said Spaid. "We want students to explore, to see that education doesn't stop once they have a degree...we want students] to constantly look at the news-makers in the world."

Of Smiley's visit, Spaid said "we lucked out. Her writing addresses a lot of constituencies at the college."

Due to limited seating in Bolton Theater, only the first 389 people to arrive may attend Tuesday's discussion.

"This is a sort of blind date...Not everybody who dreams of being a writer pictures being a writer at a college. But I'm one now and [Smiley] is one now. So we'll probably have a lot to talk about."

Kluge's 'Biggest Elvis' earns exceptional reviews

By David Shargel
Senior Staff Writer

On the 19th anniversary of Elvis Presley's death, eleven-dozen copies of P.F. Kluge's latest novel, "Biggest Elvis," were shipped to bookstores nationwide. That printing sold out and has been followed by a second printing from Kluge's publisher, Viking Press. A Penguin paperback will appear in August.

The book, which traces the rise and fall of a three-man Elvis act in the Philippines, has received high praise from the popular press. Suzanne Freeman of The Boston Globe wrote, "Kluge is a deeply talented writer. He can put a Presley act on-stage and show us a whole world we never looked inside. Elvis can never look the same again."

Similar strong reviews have also appeared in The New York Times, The Los Angeles Times, and New York Newsday, among others.

"The reviews, I think, are good," says Kluge, "not just because they are complimentary, but because in most cases they seem to have gotten the book. They understand that it's not just another exercise in Elvis nostalgia but that it's a sort of re-imaging of his life, his incarnation in other lives and other places."

Kluge, new in his ninth year as an English professor at Kenyon, stresses that the novel reaches far beyond "The King" and his impersonators. "It's about the Philippines," he says. "It's about the first world and the third world. It's about American power and popular culture, and I think most reviewers have gotten that."

Kluge's motivation for writing "Biggest Elvis" came from personal experiences he acquired while living in the Pacific. Kluge was introduced to the area while stationed in Micronesia as he served in the Peace Corps in the 1960s. He has returned to the region regularly since then.

On one visit in 1986, Kluge's best friend in the area, the President of the Republic of Palau, told him that an "Elvis Presley Show" had visited that island. The act was booked into a new five-star hotel with mostly Japanese clientele. But tourists and locals thought the show was a fraud because they knew Elvis had died years earlier. The show attracted few customers and...

Alums to perform ‘Footfalls’ in celebration of Family Weekend

By Elizabeth Hurt
A & E Editor

Kenyon College alumni Sara E. Piemonti ‘91 and Eric M. Ziegenhagen ‘91 will return to Gambier on Saturday when Penlight Theater presents “Footfalls,” a play by Samuel Beckett. Tickets are $14 with seating on a first-come, first-served basis.

Penlight will perform the play twice at 7 and 9:30 p.m. in Hill Theater to celebrate Family Weekend.

Penlight Theater, based in Minneapolis, Minn., was established last year when it debuted “Facts and Figures,” a play Ziegenhagen wrote while working with multilingual theaters in Canada and England as a Thomas J. White Fellow. “I found a huge loft owned by some dancers, and it did double as choreography,” he said. “I put my play, Ziegenhagen. ‘We sold about 200 tickets over four weekends. Some people liked the show enough to tell their friends or see it again themselves. We ended up breaking even on the show—and how Penlight Theater got started.”

In addition to being a Watson Fellow, Ziegenhagen won Kenyon’s John Crowe Ransom Poetry Prize and the James Michael Prize in Playwriting. His play has been produced off-Broadway in the “Drama’s Guild.” Young Playwrights Festival.

Piemonti, who has starred in “Facts and Figures,” is an Honor Scholar and a member of the Foots on the Hill. She played featured roles in several Kenyon College Drama Club productions. She is a member of the Peter Pumpkin Theater Company in Minneapolis.

“Footfalls,” directed by Ziegenhagen, will star Piemonti and Amy Steiger, a Macalester College graduate, who has worked with Minneapolis’s Margolis Brown Company and Bedford Theater. “It’s a ghost story about a mother and daughter,” said Ziegenhagen. “The twist is that it’s hard to tell who’s the ghost. The story of the play rests on who’s haunting who.”

Although “Footfalls” is ready to open in Minneapolis, a theater construction delay has prevented Penlight Theater from presenting the play earlier than October 4.

In the past, Kenyon’s drama department has presented a production starring Kenyon students during Family Weekend.

Due to this year’s scheduling of Family Weekend, however, the department did not have enough time to organize such a performance.

Professor of Drama Thomas Turgeson said, “We had an audience coming to see and to show while Penlight had a show and no theater...so we put two and two together.”

“Of our shows in Kenyon are a kind of out-of-town tryout,” said Ziegenhagen. “We’re really excited about performing in Gambier for our friends and professors who are still around.”

Kenyon’s Department of Dance and Drama and the offices of the President, Student Activities and Alumni and Parent Relations and Annual Funds sponsored Penlight’s performances.

Red House Painters deliver with latest effort

By Aaron Warshaw
Music Critic

Songs for a Blue Guitar, perhaps Red House Painters’ best and most accessible work, is an inspired and strong album. The bass, singer-guitarist Mark Kozelek’s music has been a soundtrack to his depression and extreme inner-turbulence, residing in the simple fact that music was the only means of communication for this horrific dysphoria.

Happily, Songs for a Blue Guitar illustrates a new-found sense of hope and self-trust, thus making it a much easier and more satisfying listen than the band’s previous albums.

The album’s first track, “Have You Forgotten,” is an hommage to childhood, loaded with melancholic lyrics as we “Listen low/ to Casey Kasem’s radio show.” The next track, “Sing for a Blue Guitar,” a catchy and charming cover of The Car’s “All Mixed Up.”

Kozelek’s musical style, best described as folk-rock, transcends genre into the difficult-to-describe territory of pure expression. His voice, vaguely reminiscent of David Byrne, is the band’s best and most powerful instrument, rich and emotive throughout. At recent shows in Ann Arbor and Cleveland, when technical problems threatened to end the show, Kozelek sang and played without the P.A., and with almost more power than before.

Given the band’s history of popularity waning today, news like the Red House Painters, who honestly express the darker, saddest and thus most human aspects of existence, deserve more attention than they receive. Anyone interested in music for more than just entertainment will find Songs for a Blue Guitar, with its successful balance of accessibility and honesty, very worthwhile.

Six ways to keep Mom and Dad occupied this Family Weekend

By Elizabeth Hurt and Ben Keene
Staff Writers

Over 300 families will travel far and wide this weekend to see their children in fair Gambier. While Kenyon is an undeniably enchanting place, the thought of entertaining a family for an entire weekend is a village of 2000 may be a bit overwhelming for some.

For this reason, the Collegian, with the help of long-time Ohio-dwellers Professor of Sociology Howard Sacks and Professor of English Tim Shatt, has compiled a list of activities in the Gambier area that will introduce visitors to the variety of opportunities available in this part of Ohio.

Bike and Skate Rentals
For those eager to explore the immediate Ohio countryside, the Gambier Deli offers bike and rollerblade rentals. A possible route to follow in the Kokosing Gap Trail which runs the nine miles between Mount Vernon and Danville, passing through Kenyon at Waid Field. In addition to the scenic view along the Kokosing River, the Gap Trail has an added advantage: formerly a railroad, it is completely flat.

Rental rates for bikes and rollerblades is $4 an hour, and $16 for a 6-hour day, including safety equipment.

Amish Country, Holmes County
If the chances of your father domino knee pads and heading down Gaskin Avenue on rollerblades slim, then another option is a tour through Amish County.

Millsburg, the county seat of Holmes County, is less than an hour northeast of Kenyon. Holmes County has one of the largest concentrations of Amish farms in the United States.

According to Sacks, it's hard to go wrong if you're headed there. "The big part is the beautiful rolling hills along the way, and the almost all Amish farms," said Sacks. "It's going to make you feel so much fun as getting there."

Sacks also recommends stopping in Berlin, Ohio, which houses Rattensifer's, a genuine wool mill run by the same family for six generations. Berlin also has Boyd & Wurtmans, a restaurant offering family-style food and a variety of homemade Amish pies and the Helping Hands Quilt Shop, which offers a selection of quilts, fabrics, stitches and quilting supplies, also in Berlin.

Another popular draw to Amish Country is Lehman's Hardware. "It doesn't sound very exciting," Sacks said, "but Lehman's is good for everybody."

Lehman's, located in Kidron, Ohio, is an old-fashioned general store that has served the local Amish for two generations. The store features cast iron cookware, unusual hand tools and non-electric lighting objects. Ohio's largest selection of wood stoves and an antique supply. There are several other attractions in Kidron, including the weekly farm machine sale on Saturdays.

Malabar Farm
Movie buffs may enjoy this farm in Richland County where Lauren Bacall and Humphrey Bogart married in 1945. Near Lucas, Ohio, Malabar Farm was owned by Pulitzer Prize-winning writer Louis Bromfield. In addition to writing novels and screenplays, which led to visits from stars such as Bacall and Bogart, Bromfield is considered, said Shatt, "the founder of organic farming."

An added attraction to Malabar Farms, this weekend in Ohio Heritage Days, the largest free festival in Ohio. Ohio Heritage Days will feature live music, over 70 craft vendors, vintage farm machinery, and a bowling competition. For more information about Malabar Farm, call (419) 892-2784.

Dawes Arboretum
Built in 1929 by Berrie and Boman Gates Dawes, Dawes Arboretum features an assortment of trees, nature exhibits, a bird-watching area and an indoor beeche.

L. o. c. ated fifteen miles south of New-art, Dawes Arboretum's most popular attraction is a Japanese garden designed by landscape architect Makoto Nakaomura. There is also a preserve of an original climax forest, which provides visitors with a taste of what Ohio would look like had it not been developed.

Also on the property is Daweswood House, which was built in 1867 and features portraits of famous Dawes family members such as William Dawes, who rode with Paul Revere, and Charles Gates Dawes, who served as vice president to Calvin Coolidge.

Dawes Arboretum is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1-5 p.m. Sunday. For more information, call 1 800 44 DAWES.

Hocking Hills State Park
Located in Logan, Ohio, this park may prove to be a pleasant escape for outdoor lovers. Six beautiful geological formations, including a waterfall, are points of interest which can be reached by numerous hiking trails. Additionally there is a bike, picnic area, dining lodge and a nearby scenic railroad. The park is open from dusk to dawn and is free of charge.

For more information, call (614) 585-5441.

Raccoon Village
One can find a 19th century reconstruction of an Ohio-Friesian ca-tal town in nearby Coshocton. Open Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., the village offers shops, exhibits, craft demonstrations, canalboat rides and two restaurants. Tours are $7.95 for adults. For more information, call 1 800 877-1850.

‘Bittersweet’ history focus of Kenyon alumna’s return

In a two-part series, Janette Thomas Greenwood ’77 will present a historical lecture along with her methods of research to the Kenyon community. Entitled "Bridges and Barriers to Interracial Coexistence: Women of the New South and Its Relevance to Today’s America," her lecture will be held on Sept. 30 at 7 p.m. in Philanthropian Hall.

told in Greenwood’s book, which details the relations between black and white southerners from 1850 to 1910. Born into slavery and eduluted in freedmen’s schools, the blacks of this period experienced the brief gap of freedom between the end of slavery and the restrictive measures of the Jim Crow laws.

"The broad topic is the relationship between black and whites in the 19th century and its effects on today," said Professor of History Roy Womrant.

"Her book has helped us, as American historians, to discover the black middle class. Class is socially determined. The story of the black middle class is probably more important to the future that the history of black slavery or ghettos dwellers."

Scott further pointed out that 60% of the black population of America is middle class. Yet the race is almost always seen as member of the inner city community, destitute drugs, and impoverished.

Greenwood was an honor Histomy major at Kenyon and obtained her M.A. in 1978 from University of Wisconsin, Madison.

For her Honors Thesis, Greenwood delved into church, school, court and land records from her hometown of Johnston, Pa. to research the history of the local African and Memounce communities.

"What she was doing was looking at what would have been one of the most traditional cultures in America, and how it existed in a culture that was always changing," said Scott. "She examined how they dealt with the Civil War, compulsory education, Social Security taxes, and conscription."

Scott added, "She was looking at her history in a sense," since Greenwood had grown up in a family and community with such a background. "It seems to me it would be easier to appreciate what was close at hand if you had grown up in an atmosphere that saw the local area as the most important," said Scott.

From 1978 to 1981, she taught at a private school. Upon marrying W. Merritt Greenwood, a divinity student, she moved to Charlotte, NC. She worked for the Charlotte Mecklenburg Historic Properties Commission on the Charlotte Neighborhood Survey, which studied the city's architectural and historic re-

Worcester, MA. True to form, she looked into the history of Worcester, which she sees as the center of the abolitionist movement.

Scott noted that professional men and women often follow different career patterns when women decide to raise a family and pursue a career.

"She really juxtaposes her career," Scott said. "She started late, but has ended up on top of the heap. Such women bring to [the study of history] a maturity and experience. They may write fewer books, but they are writing better books."

Greenwood received the Seymour N. Logan Fellowship at Clark in 1995, and designed a class exploring the effects of the Civil War had on the New England area, especially in Worcester.

"She has [a] gift for the writ-ter word, and a stunning ability to think critically and analytically, and her book is very good, but she’s her teacher first and foremost," said Womrant.

Maintenance joins ASHES in revamping recycling program in dorms

Due in part to the confusion concerning available recycling options on campus, plans are being made to improve Kenyon's recycling system. Active Students Helping Earth Survive (ASHES), a student-run organization committed to environmental issues, is working together with the maintenance department to educate students and increase awareness about campus recycling.

Emily Sprwod ’97, a co-leader of ASHES, commented on the phenomenon of students who would like to recycle more but are unaware of their options.

Sprwod believes within Kenyon’s current recycling program ‘there’s a lot of room for improvement.’

Currently students have the ability to recycle aluminum cans, #1 and #2 plastic bottles, and paper, brown and clear glass. These items can be deposited in the large, yellow bins located throughout campus, many of which can be found in the trash close doors in dorms.

Students are currently unable to recycle paper in the dorms, a fact which concerns some people. Audrey Swanson ’90 said, "It quite disturbs me that there isn’t paper recycling in the hall, since a lot of paper will be used in writing essays."

However, Kenyon is in the process of switching recycling companies, thereby allowing students to recycle white paper. Boxes will be distributed within approximately two weeks for the collection of white paper, which includes computer and notebook paper.

Other improvements are in the making, including the sale of plastic bags by ASHES in the dining halls to alleviate the problem of the use of styrofoam cups.

ASHES also hopes in the future to begin collecting Newspapers and issues of the Collegian.

Upstart Shoppes takes on Cove in battle for student money

By John Jordan
Staff Reporter

With its new name scheduled to go into effect tomorrow night at 10:15 p.m. at its grand re-opening, the newly renovated Shoppes is making an aggressive appeal for the Pirates' Cove business.

According to ARA Manager John Albrecht, the college agreed to rechristen the Shoppes at a cost of "about $70,000." The new Shoppes also has more lighting, a pool table, comfortable furniture, a bar, a stage, and extensive memorabilia on the walls. "It looks great; it's a brand new, clean and fresh," he said.

Despite the changes, business has been less than brisk during the week. Debbie Lee '97, who meets with the A.S.A.L. club at the Shoppes, feels it's "half of what it's meant to be around the winter." Assistant Food Service Manager Graham is in charge of the new Shoppes. Although she feels everything is running smoothly, Graham said, "I don't think the word's really out yet; once we have our grand opening people will know what's available to them and how well it's been filled." Graham said, "Business is getting better; student organization meetings and Monday-night sports special ($5 16 ounce pizza) have helped during the week." She also believes Friday and Saturday nights are "starting to pick up." Graham said, "You don't have to come down here to buy something; it's a nice place to hang out too."

"It's a great place for meetings, studying, and socializing."

The new Shoppes' pizza is different from that of the Cove's. In terms of which pizza is better, Geoff Loose '99 said, "The Cove is so good, you never know if it's going to be good or bad. Shoppes is more reliable." Tim Hanor '97 said, "The Shoppes should offer more of a selection of sizes, but it's a much better pizza than the Cove's."

Cat shelter adopts new care program

By Shannon Farney
Staff Reporter

The Mount Vernon Cat Shelter recently adopted a new program designed to better provide for its animals.

The cats are in playpens, not cages, and are allowed time outside. They are all spayed or neutered, receive their shots and are treated for sickness. The shelter rejects the idea of animal euthanasia as a solution for its overcrowded facilities.

This sort of specialized care gets expensive. The community of Mount Vernon provides donations to help support the shelter. Hattie Slwon, the board volunteer at the shelter, has designed the Adopt-A-Cat program to reduce the need for community support.

For $5 per month individuals can adopt a cat and will receive a photo of the cat, its history and regular updates. This $5 donation will help pay for the cat's care and allow us to remain at the shelter. Cats can be adopted for any length of time, beginning at six months and ranging upwards.

The cat shelter has a higher adoption rate than many shelters across the United States; 50% of its cats find homes compared to roughly 10% in other shelters.

Once a month the shelter will set up a booth at the Washington economist to unravel environmental policy

By Maggie Brevling
Senior Staff Reporter

Sometimes the nice and dour mentality of politicians fails to reconcile the eternal-like quality of the natural world. Paul Portney, president of Resources for the Future Inc., unravels worldly environmental policies into comprehensible language.

With a bachelor's degree in economics and mathematics from Alma College and a doctorate in economics from Northwestern University, Portney strongly supports a cost-conscious approach to controlling Smith's called environmental economics.

He began his work with the Federal Communications Commission in 1972. As a non-partisan group, the FCC sometimes receives disapproval from environmental advocates. Yet the FCC identifies economics as its primary research discipline.

Although one might associate the term economics with the "shifty" type, an article in the National Journal dissolves this myth. In the article Portney "bemuses the way Washingtonians tend to duck their heads when they pass one another on the street" as he sits in the interview "with feet propped on an orderly desk."

His ability to breathe life and understanding into the written word has succeeded in promulgating communication between the public and the governing body in regard to changes in environmental laws.

Portney's talent of explaining FCC's message upon environmental issues is a quality he seems to have always possessed. In the late 1970s, he taught environmental economics at the University of California at Berkeley. In 1992 he served as a visiting lecturer at Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School of Public Affairs. In 1979 Portney served as chief economist on President Carter's Council on Environmental Quality.

He has written a number of journal articles and books, the most recent titled "Feeding the Bill for Superfund Cleanup: Who Pays and How?"

He takes the stage at Kenny at 4 p.m. in the Omni Library and 7:30 p.m. in the Rio Auditorium on Thursday, Sept. 26.
This Crew is on their way to the MLS Playoffs

With its 1-0 win over New England last Saturday, the Columbus Crew earned a MLS playoff spot and a shot at knocking off the Tampa Bay Mutiny

Associated Press

A capsule look at MLS play-offs pairings:

EASTERN CONFERENCE

Tampa Bay Mutiny (28-12) vs. Columbus Crew (15-17)

Columbus is easiest the hottest team in the league, having won nine of last 10, a turnaround that started with the replacement of Timo Liekoski with Tom Fitzgerald as coach. It's only loss under Fitzgerald was last Wednesday against the MetroStars on artificial turf. Also part of the resurgence is Brad Friedel, who is 8-1 since transferring from his Turkish club and allowed only three goals in last 544 minutes. The Mutiny are riding a six-game winning streak. Their offense is the best in the league (66 goals) and led by league-leading scorer Roy Lassiter (27 goals) and league MVP candidate Carlos Valderrama (four goals, 17 assists). The teams split their series (2-1), one of Columbus' victories coming at home on Pete Marino's controversial goal.

This series was also split. The Aug. 21 game in Giants Stadium was marked by a fight, spark led when MetroStars midfielder Tab Ramos was butted by United's Marco Etcheverry. Ramos then spit in the face of John Harkes, a childhood friend and U.S. national teammate. The teams averaged 5.7 yellow cards in their four games, well above the league average of 3.4. Most teams say the MetroStars have an advantage on the artificial turf at Giants Stadium, but they're only 3-2.

WESTERN CONFERENCE

Los Angeles Galaxy (19-13) vs. San Jose Clash (15-17)

The Galaxy have won four of their last six, winning the conference a midfielders' four game. After winning their first 12, Los Angeles won only three of the next 13.

Los Angeles is balanced on both ends. Jorge Campbell led the league in goals-against average, allowing only 1.20 per game, while Eduardo Haradzo was third in goals with 21. San Jose has yet to beat the Galaxy (0-4), but two of the games were by one goal and another was in a shootout. While finishing sixth in scoring with 30 goals and 13 assists, Clash forward Eric Wynalda hasn't scored from the field since July 20 (14 games).

GAME RECAP, SAT., 21-CREW 1, REVOLUTION 0

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) – Brian McBride's goal in the 37th minute Saturday night gave the Columbus Crew a 1-0 win over the New England Revolution before 36,633 fans at Foxboro Stadium.

The loss enabled the Crew to gain the final playoff berth in the Eastern Conference of Major League Soccer.

The Revolution needed to win the game in regulation time to gain a playoff berth. Columbus would have had the edge in any tie-breaker had New England won in a shootout.

McBride made it academic: when he blazed what appeared to be a harmless cross from Brian Masenich in left off the hand of diving Revolution keeper Alan Henevy.

Malonevee brought the ball down the right side and sent a roller into the box. Revolution defender Alex Lauer rallied the ball and it rolled right to McBride who got off the shot.

Just minutes earlier, the Revolution had suffered a major set back when Mark Watson was issued a red card for violent conduct after he shoved Columbus' Ricardo Inbaroon, knocking him to the ground.

FOCUSED to play the rest of the game with just 10 men, the Revolution managed to apply continued pressure only to have Columbus goalkeeper Brad Friedel make save after save.

Columbus helped ease the pressure on its goalie with several counter attacks in the closing minutes.

MARINER'S VOW FOR FINAL WEEK: NO SURRENDER

SEATTLE (AP) - If Ken Griffey Jr. says it's good enough for his Seattle Mariners teammates.

"You never give up," Griffey said. "Anything can happen. That's just the way the club goes about things."

The Mariners figure they didn't come close in their chase of the Texas Rangers to finish second in the AL West. Not after closing their deficit from nine games on Sept. 11 to one game - before a 13-11 loss in their home opener to Oakland on Sunday.

"It's not all over yet," Griffey insisted. "I'm not packing up my locker until it's all said and done. That's the best way to think.

Added pitcher Chris Bosio: "We've overcome a huge deficit. That speaks a lot for these guys. And we've played great baseball on the road."

The Mariners travel to Oakland for a four-game series starting today. If necessary, they'll make up a rainout next Monday in Cleveland.

With their postseason hopes hinging on a six-game, season-ending road trip, they aren't about to argue with the schedule-makers.

"We're going to have to be road warriors," reliever Jesse Orosco said after the Mariners lost 8-7 in 10 innings to the Milwaukee Brewers on Monday, remaining four games behind both New York Yankees and the American League East race.

Baltimore closes the season with a four-game series in Toronto, starting today.

And the Orioles aren't 'afraid about leaving Baltimore, where they are 43-38. In fact, they relish the road, where they are 42-33.

"Maybe the road is for us to win games," said right-hander Mike Mussina, who failed for the third consecutive start in his bid to become the first Orioles-20 game winner since Mike Boddicker in 1984. "Maybe it's a good place to be if we need some wins."

BALTIMORE MORE COMFORTABLE ON THE ROAD

BALTimore (AP) - The Baltimore Orioles can't explain why they are more successful on the road than in the creamy surroundings of Camden Yards.

But with their postseason hopes hinging on a six-game, season-ending road trip, they aren't about to argue with the schedule-makers.

SEITZER ADDS NEW DIMENSION TO CLEVELAND INDIANS

CLEVELAND (AP) - Kevin Seitzer doesn't run like the wind, walks like a grandpa, is more like it. With Kenny Lofton hitting in front of him, all Seitzer has to do is hit.

The former Milwaukee Brewer can still do.

With a 12-game hitting streak and a knack for bunching behind a squeeze, Seitzer has been a valuable addition to the Cleveland Indians' lineup. Seitzer is batting .380 since Cleveland got him in a trade with the Milwaukee Brewers. What's more, the Indians are 16-5 since the trade.

"I don't like people making a big fuss over me, if you know what I mean," Seitzer said. "Because these guys were awesome when I got here."

Seitzer has added a new wrinkle to an already powerful lineup. He can hit-and-run, take a pitch while Lofton steals a base, and hit the ball to the right side. The Indians tried to build their way to a World Series title last year and failed. The lineup isn't one-dimensional anymore.

"His style of play fits right in with ours," said Lofton.

In sports, players like Seitzer can bring out the best in their teammates. He can also make those who don't play hard look bad.

Seitzer insists he's just a piece of the puzzle.

"I'm just a prospect that the Indians can add to their already strong team," he said. "I'm just doing what they told me to do."

"All I really care about is winning," said Seitzer. "I'm not here to collect a paycheck."

On the Hill Race for the playoffs comes down to last weekend

The final weekend of the baseball season caps off one of the most exciting Septembers in recent memory. With both wildcard berths at stake and two division crowns yet to be decided there are several interesting series, with the marquee matchup being a three-game set between the Los Angeles Dodgers and San Diego Padres in L.A. to decide the National League West title. In addition to the Dodgers-Padres series, the Montreal Expos take on Atlanta in hopes of clinching the NL East and for NL West loser for a wildcard berth.

In the American League, the surging Seattle Mariners play the A's in Oakland in an attempt to elbow Texas in the AL West race. Baltimore squares off against Toronto in a four game set to try and hold onto the AL wild-card spot.

The multitude of intriguing games this weekend makes baseball 1994 decisive to switch watching to the World Series look better and better.

When Major League Baseball adopted the wild-card format in 1994, it was hailed as a three-divison, wild-card format, but didn't exactly meet the optimistic forecasts of baseball fans, Bob Costas - explained during the about the division championship.

"It would seem the importance of the grouping - 162-game regular season." For the sake of comprehension, let's try to explain how the 1996 playoffs would have shaped up in Cleveland.

Baltimore already has clinched the East and it would come down to Texas and Seattle in the West. The importance of the Baltimore-Toronto series would be null and void.

The NL pennant race in its pre-1994 form would also be different. Montreal would hold head-to-head with St. Louis in the NL East and Atlanta would be well ahead of both San Diego and Los Angeles in the West, making the Padres-Dodgers series a less than marquee event.

If the idea for expanding the playoffs wasn't a big hit, certainly has, case in point being last weekend's Padres-Dodgers series, which drew about 200,000 fans in San Diego's Jack Murphy Stadium.

Many of this weekend's key games feature teams with nothing to play for except the prospect of spoiling the playoff hopes of contenders, a scenario which promises for well-played, hard-nosed baseball and a playoff atmosphere.

The Rockies have put a hole in the latter; this is the regular season and many of this weekend's games are far from being meaningless.

Cross country squads compete at Friendship Invite

Ladies win their third consecutive meet; men battle injuries

By John Egan

Staff Writer

The Kenyon cross country teams turned in strong efforts last weekend at the Friendship Invitational at Cedarville College. The Ladies won their third meet in a row, and the men placed well despite injuries. The Ladies and the Lads hope to keep up their momentum at Otterbein and Miami University, respectively, this weekend.

The men ran well, finishing seventh in a field of ten, despite missing their injured number four runner, Mickey Minnemeier. '97. Kenyon finished with 148 points, only 21 fourth place Spring Arbor. Dan Denison '88 was the top runner, finishing third with a time of 23:49 after a strong kick to the top of the field. Ryan Snyder '99 finished fifth with a time of 22:26. Jason Miles '88, James Sheridan '00, and Rudy Leal '99 also posted their best times. Using a strong final kick, Sheridan passed five runners in the last four meters.

With Minnemeier out, the 6th, 7th, and 8th runners carried the slack well. Leal, Charles Walsh '00, and Brendan Wilson-Barthet '99 all finished within ten places of each other, each under 33 minutes.

Denison admitted the team must be healthy to have a realistic shot at making regionals. Minnemeier is expected back for this weekend's Otterbein Invitational. Miles and Sheridan have also been ill, but should be healthy for this weekend.

Denison said, "We need to have our top five runners healthy in time for conference.

The Ladies had a strong meet, defeating all ten of the teams in the division by a single point. Top runners were Cheryl Baker '97 and Beth Blecher '99, who finished fourth and fifth with times of 19:02 and 19:11, respectively. The two through five runners also formed a close pack near the top. Annick Shae '97 and Christine Reiner '99 took eighth and ninth, while first-year runner Ashley Lynx took 11th.

Lynx edged out two runners from Rio Grande in the last 150 meters, which gave Kenyon the win by one point. This is Lynx's first year in cross country at any level, and she is emerging as a solid force in the number five spot.

The Kenyon Ladies made sure, said "She [Lynx] has great natural ability. Her dedication and determination will have her on an outstanding future here."

The six through eight runners also ran exceptionally well. Abby Kennedy '99, Beth Schillier '99, and Beth Packe '99 all finished within three minutes of the race winner, who was the NAIA national champion last year. Having a group with such close times is tremendous boost for Kenyon, as the six through eight runners away pointed that they would have done to other teams.

All of Kenyon's 12 Ladies finished under 21:00 minutes, a first in Kenyon's running history.

Coach Duane Gomez was ecstatic about the team's performance. "In my four years of coaching at Kenyon, the women's team had the best team race today of any team that I've coached here."

This weekend the Ladies hope to keep their unbeaten streak alive as they travel to Miami University for the all NCAA Division I invitation, the Miami Fall Classic.

SCOREBOARD

Ladies soccer improves to 5-1-1

The Kenyon Ladies' soccer team, currently 5-1-1, will travel to Wooster this weekend in hopes of recording another conference win. On Saturday, the Ladies defeated the Earlham Quakers in an intense 2-1 victory in overtime.

The Ladies dominated the game. They had 27 shots on goal while Earlham had seven, but they could not get the ball into the net until the last 31 seconds of the game. Forward Amy Daniel '97 scored off her corner kick; the ball ricocheted off the goalie's hands and went into the goal, tying the game at 1-1.

Kristina Racek '98 commented, "We played hard, they gave more to the game and forced us to step up and play on top." After Daniel's goal the Ladies knew they wanted the victory, so they increased their intensity level.

Kenyon proved that they were in excellent shape, playing with full intensity in a half hour of overtime to defeat the Quakers. Emily Donovan '97 scored when the ball bounced off her face two minutes into the first overtime period and the Ladies held on to the lead until the final buzzer sounded.

"The game was certainly an exciting victory for the Ladies, because it was their first conference match. The Ladies continue to work hard to prepare themselves for their conference matches."

"I've been told this will be a challenge in the upcoming weeks for us to push ourselves to work harder. We can be good without even thinking twice about it, but whether or not we are great will depend on how consistent our play is. No matter how level the intensity is a practice game will be a conference game if we get beat. We can only beat ourselves."

-- Sarah Bozzo

The Ladies began on Friday with a win over Mount Union's 24-12, 16-14, 15-18. This was followed with an easy victory, Thomas Moore was Kenyon's next opponent and spoiled the Ladies' hope of a first place finish as they ousted the Ladies 3-0.

On Saturday, Kenyon played host to Earlham and lost in three hard fought matches, despite the play of Rachel Overwater '99 whose play on the right earned her All-Tournament honors. The strong John Carroll team prepares well for their next game against Baldwin-Wallace, however, as the Ladies came through 5 games (15-11, 15-10, 11-11, 11-11) 11-11 to win them a fifth place finish in a field of nine teams.

Senior Captain Alicia Gooley felt the win was a great confidence booster going into this weekend's tournament at Ohio Dominican.

MEN'S RUGBY

Both Kenyon rugby teams captured wins last weekend, and will look to do so at home again this weekend.

The Kenyon rugby teams travelled to the University of Dayton, where they took on a far more experienced team, according to Sally Tainter '97. However, the Ladies rose to the occasion and managed to defeat Dayton 10-0. Both teams were scored by Esther City '99.

"The entire team played their best, and the scrum team did especially a good job. It was an excellent game for the fall season," said Tainter.

This weekend the women will take on Wittenberg at home at noon.

The team then next host success at home, where they took on Denison's Rugby Club. The Lords jumped out to an early start, thanks to the momentum of Scott Dinger '97, who scored three tries in the first half. The Lords captured the victory easily, "defeating Denison 55-10. Other tries were scored by Will Valentine '97, Jay McNeill '99, Jamie Lester '98, John Saunders '97, and Keith Brecher '97. Lester also took points for the team with his "exceptional kicks," according to Brecher.

"We played better than we have this season," said Blecher. "The team did a great job."

"The team will take on Ohio at home this weekend, and hope to avenge an earlier season loss," said Blecher. "I'm not discouraged that we lost to them...that time was a beat them."

HIGHLIGHTS FROM OTHER FALL SPORTS

Lords beat CWRU, improve to 6-1

The Lords improved their record to 6-1 overall and 3-1 NCAC when they defeated Earlham College 3-1 over the weekend, and Case Western Reserve yesterday 4-0.

Greg Stephanie '00 started the scoring for the Lords Saturday when he beat the Earlham goalkeeper with a nicely placed header had to the upper right corner of the goal. Stephanie's goal was his first of the year and his first career goal as a Kenyon Lord. Following Stephanie's goal, Jason Gooch '97 tallied his second goal of the year when he headed in a fine cross from the left side. Midway through the second half Tony Mohammad '97 volleyed in a cross from Gooch, giving the game for the Lords. The goal was Mohammad's sixth of the year and the assist was Gooch's third of the year. The Quakers scored a last goal to leave the final score at 5-1.

Yesterday the Lords faced Case Western Reserve looking to improve upon their season. Kenyon started early when Kelsey Ochs '99 deflected a cross into the upper right corner of the goal. Following that goal, the Lords went on to dominate a weaker Case Western squad. Mohammad tallied two more goals. Stephanie continued his exception play and added a goal to the back of the goal. With the help of strong defensive play by the Lords, goalkeeper Chris Schilling '98 recorded his second shut of the year. The Lords will host Denison this weekend, where they hope to take their conference record to 4-0.

Field hockey team hovering at .500 mark

The field hockey team picked up a win and a loss this past week, bringing their overall record to 3-3, and their NCAC record to 2-3. They hope to bring their NCAC record back to .500 with a win against Oberlin this weekend.

The Ladies defeated the Earlham Quakers 9-0 last Saturday to register their second conference win of the season.

Playing with poise and keeping their stance, this game showed the real depth of the team. Scoring and contributing as much as the starting line-up, the reserve players proved their tremendous value to the team’s power on the field.

Said tri-captain Sandy Diehl ’97, “In my three years of experience here, I think this team is the most cohesive and dedicated as a unit that I’ve played with yet. I’m really looking forward to what we can come.”

The Ladies came out hard in the first minute of play with Lisa McNally ’97 scoring just 43 seconds into the game. As they pressed up their intensity, the Ladies tallied five goals in the first half. Lindsay Buchanan ’97 added McNally’s first goal of the season with her own, with 29:11 on the clock.

Michelle DeTarmsky ’97 then registered her first goal of the season at 21:21. Phoebe Walker ’98 scored off an assist from McNally with 7:13 remaining in the half, and Buchanan added the fifth goal off an assist from Walker.

The Ladies scored four more goals in the second half, with an almost entirely different team on the field. Holly Clark ’00 scored two of those goals, with assists from Sara Reich ’98 and Jess Goldman ’00. Goldman also tallied her first goal of the season.

Carrie Moore ’99, “Our team is stepping up...we’re confident that we have what it takes. I think all we need to do is repeat the intensity and our performance will be great.” Though Moore had no goals in the Earlham game, she recorded 14 shots.

Ellen Pizzuto ’98 added, “We were all really excited at the fact that so many people come down to our game. We feed off their support...it keeps our intensity at a high level.”

On Tuesday the Ladies could not sustain their momentum as they lost to Ohio Wesleyan 3-6.

Hoping to avenge an earlier season loss to the Bishops, the Ladies tallied the first goal of the half after noon when DeTarmsky put the ball in after a penalty corner. The Lady Bishops came back strong, however, scoring four more goals before the Ladies could stop their momentum. Christina Rimenspach ’98 managed to score another goal for the Ladies with 12 minutes remaining in the half, with an assist by Buchanan in a last-ditch break situation. The Bishop added another goal before the half.

Said McNally, “At halftime we talked about resetting the clock; we talked about playing the next half as if it were an entirely new game. We went out on the field and played our own game, and we were much more successful.”

The Ladies tied the Bishops in the second half, as each team recorded one goal. Moore recorded a goal, assisted by DeTarmsky, early in the half. The momentum continued to swing throughout the half, but neither team could further generate the cagers.

Football squad looks to go 3-0 with victory over Wittenberg

By Heath Binder
Senior Staff Writer

For the first time in five years, the Kenyon Lords football team is 2-0.

The question is: will it reach 3-0?

On Saturday, the Lords will host Wittenberg. The Tigers, ranked number 12 nationally, are coming off a disappointing 26-14 loss to Allegheny, the North Coast Athletic Conference’s other nationally ranked team (8). Although it trails the Lords by a game in NCAC standings, Wittenberg, which beat the Lords 42-14 last season, should pose a tougher challenge to Kenyon than Oberlin, who fell to 0-3 with a 46-13 loss to the Lords last weekend.

Said Lords Head Coach Vince Arzini, “We’ve got our work cut out for us against Wittenberg, but we’re happy where we’re at.”

The Lords blistered Oberlin from all angles Saturday, rushing for 280 yards and throwing for two touchdowns.

Tailback Derrick Johnson ’97, who led the assault with 166 yards on 22 carries, said, “Carlos [Arzini] said we were going to open things up with different plays, and we did.”

One of those different plays was a half-back pass which Johnson worked out of perfection. He hit receiver Maurice Darden ’97 with a 35-yard touchdown pass 4:03 before halftime to bump the Lords’ lead to 26-0.

“(Oberlin) thought they’d match up little bit better,” said Arzini. “But we got out early. The first two times we had the ball, we scored.”

Just 6:10 into the game, Johnson took his eighth consecutive carry two yards into the end zone for the Lords’ first score.

Collin Winkler ’00 followed Johnson’s score with a fumble recovery at the Yeomen 22-yard line, and tight end Eric Arias ’98 hit paydirt two minutes later with his second touchdown of the season, an 8-yard pass from Terry Parmelee ’99 which bumped the score to 13-0 (the point-after try failed).

The Lords outgained the Yeomen in total yards, 366-244. That total would have been more lopsided, but officials called back a 73-yard touchdown run by Anthony Togliatti ’99 in the second quarter.

Togliatti responded in the third quarter with his first touchdown of the season, a 23-yard run. He carried the ball 12 times for 79 yards Saturday.

The defense also put points on the board. Carl Doney ’99 returned an interception 45 yards for a touchdown in the first quarter to boost the lead to 19-0.

I was pleased with our effort,” said Arzini, “You lock back on the years, it’s always been a struggle against Oberlin.”

Kenyon is the last team to lose to Oberlin (in 1992), but the Lords destroyed any Oberlin victory hopes by running up 19 first-quarter points en route to their highest point total since they scored 55 against Earlham in 1991.

Said Arzini, “We did what we needed to do.”

Arzini named offensive lineman John Lindsay ’99 offensive player of the week for effectively blocking fronts and protecting Parmelee.

Thayer Case ’97, who had six tackles (four for losses) and a sack, won defensive player of the week honors.

Arzini also named Steve Lien ’00 as special teams player of the week for effectively blocking kicks and protecting Parmelee.

The game will begin at 1:30 p.m. on McBride Field.
