Battle proposes new seat

James Ray
Senior Staff Reporter

Senior Class President C-Co Battle expressed her desire to see a multicultural coalition formed by various groups "underrepresented" or "unrepresented" by Ohio State's Student Council meeting.

Such representation would take the form of an appointed seat. It is undecided exactly how such a seat would be formed, what the form of it would be, and if such a seat would have a vote, but Associate Dean of Students and Student Council Advisor Cheryl Steele and council members conceded its creation would require amendments to the Campus Government Constitution.

In Article III, Section 3 of the constitution, the various seats of the Students Council are listed. All of these represent various factions of the college, with the purpose of "recognizing ... the student enterprises, organizations, and social events and ... their operations." (III, 1 b)

In accordance with Battle's proposal, a representative from the coalition would be so different, it would recognize a student organization enterprise, organizations, and social events and, "supervising" their organizations. (III, b)

A position in the council, Battle explained, might lessen the feeling of underrepresentation among these groups. Members discussed the nature of such a seat, agreeing that it would have to be similar to that of the Greek Council president, who has a voice in Student Council proceedings but no vote.

The Greek Council President does not sit on the Student Council, but has a liaison who fills that position. As the coalition is proposed to be a government unto itself, members said a liaison might be appropriate.

The coalition, currently nonexistent, is composed of the Black Student Union, Brothers Union, and other multicultural-oriented campus organizations. Like Battle's proposal, its formulation is in the preliminary stages.

Final Senate, class committee election results announced

Lisa Conway '98 and Flora Kiefaber '99 will represent the classes on Campus Senate, a governmental body composed of student representatives, student council officers, faculty and administrators this year. The election results were announced Friday, May 2.

Class committees were also elected Friday. Maggie Allen, Madline Bode, Cindy Costeka, Shultz D'Silphets, Becky Hoyt, Grace Luxe, Nadir Quinam and Jessie Savage were elected from 17 candidates for the Sophomore Class Committee.

Eleven candidates—Malcolm Auchenbach, Shannon Conrad, Brian Eiler, Michael Garvey, Laura Hensley, John Ivey, Clark Nelson, Stuart Rice, Mark Rich, Ian Schwab and Melanie Sproatfall—sought election to the Junior Class Committee. As there were

ARARAMARK cuts employees hours to save money

By Matt Brenner
News Assistant

ARARAMARK, Kenyon's food service provider, has recently cut employee hours in an effort to save money.

"The first thing that I did upon arriving here was to reduce employee hours," said John Darmstadt, Kenyon's new food service director. "This is never a popular move, but it had to be done in an attempt to be more efficient. We were not meeting company standards."

ARARAMARK's contract with Kenyon ceased that despite the fact that worker hours have been cut, none of the ARARAMARK workers at Kenyon will lose their jobs. "To do what we do takes time and effort," he said. "It takes a lot of coordination and timing. We feel we could better the program if it was all on one floor."

Darmstadt mentioned that one of the changes might be bringing Philander's Pub pizza upstairs.

Also, he added, "we wouldn't have to bring all the trays and dishes back upstairs after the meal." ARARAMARK workers, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said that worker hours had been cut. "We as employees don't want the cuts to affect students so that we can't do our jobs well. The students are the reasons that we have jobs," the cuts in hours, they said, have caused some areas of the programs to suffer.

Another worker said sanitation in the kitchen was suffering because there were no people to cover jobs. "One part-time employee lost a union job," the worker said.

Overall, the cafeteria workers were concerned with how the cuts would affect students. "The stress and time are getting to us," they said. "It is a high energy level all the time."

In both Prince and Grand dining halls, food is prepared for about 700 students at each meal. "We work very hard. The lack of sanitation and stress is because of the job hazards," the employees felt that students could help save money by not wasting food. "One student asked for three sandwiches," reported a worker, "and then sent it back to us with one bite in each sandwich."

ARARAMARK workers also said if glasses and coffee cups were not taken to students' rooms, cows would not be as much of an issue. "Twelve coffee cups cost $9.80," said one worker. "So far this year, we've lost 87. They've either been broken or taken out of the cafeteria. Kenyon spent $15,000 on new dishes this year, they said.

The Student Life Committee of Student Council has formed a subcommittee to investigate student concerns about Kenyon's food service, according to subcommittee chair Lizzi Pannill '97.

"It's ARARAMARK's contract with Kenyon that will expire this year, and the college is reviewing the decision to determine if another food service provider should be chosen," the committee, which has not yet met, solicited student comments.

The committee was formed in response to a letter distributed earlier this year requesting general student concerns as opposed to the specific suggestions in the suggestion boxes in the dining halls.

Loreta Montgomery, liaison to the student body, said she received approximately 150 responses, many of which requested more vegetarian options and later dinner hours. Students offered a "lot of creative suggestions," Pannill said.

The committee will meet weekly. ARARAMARK food service director, periodically to express student concern. Pannill estimated that the committee will meet with Darmstadt approximately once every three weeks.

She said the committee will represent general student concerns as opposed to the specific suggestions in the suggestion boxes in the dining halls.

Allison Black, who has been the area coordinator for the Student Affairs Center for the last two years, will be leaving Kenyon on Oct. 25 to take a job at Wright State in Dayton, Ohio. Black, a senior at Kenyon, supervises resident advisors and other first-year resident issues such as roommates, first-year council and orientation. At Wright State, Black will become the coordinator of the Senior Living Program, which hopes to allow students to be more involved in governing their school.

“There will be a lot of group decision making. I hope to integrate student leaders into the faculty and staff,” she said. She will report directly to the president of that university.

A graduate of Kenyon, Black will become the academic advisor, will be responsible for finding an interim replacement and will finish this year. This will most likely happen within the next few weeks, so he can work closely with Black before she leaves.

Black feels that this transition will not adversely effect this year’s resident advisor program. “We’ve started the year off well. I feel the RAs have a good base and an enough confidence we can find someone

 Monday evening brownout inconveniences campus

Many Kenyon buildings experienced a brownout of electricity on Sunday at approximately 8 p.m. The power was fully restored just over two hours later with help from Ohio Power, Kenyon’s maintenance department and the Office of Public Safety.

Similar brownouts occurred last year, too, but the cause of these power losses is still unknown. Greg vanFreymann, security officer, said, “We really don’t know why it happens, but the power goes off and then comes back on by itself sometime later.”

Ascension Hall, Hill Theater, Bolten Theater, Peirce Hall, Capples Residence, Matter Residence, McBride Residence Health and Counseling Center, Wetherhelm Fieldhouse and Duncan Field have all lost 50 percent of their power. The Art Barn and Craft Center experienced total power loss.

“A tremendous crowd cheered when Dole mentioned his proposed 15 percent tax cut. Dole said he would not be discouraged by President Clinton and co-sponsors of the measure. ‘I say it cannot be achieved while balancing the federal budget.’ ‘It’s all based on one simple principle: it’s your money,’ Dole said. ‘It’s not my money, it’s not his money, it’s your money.’

Clint Ross, 32 of Newbury, said she was a bit skeptical that the tax cut would work, but she still planned to vote for Dole.

Ross, who voted for Clinton in 1992, said government is too big and taxes are too high. “I’m very concerned about what future my kids have,” Ross said. “I’m not for Ross, a mother of three. “What are they going to inherit?”

Dole and vice presidential nominate Jack Kemp have made 11 visits to Ohio this year, trying to close Clinton’s lead in the battleground Midwestern state. No Republican has ever won the presidency with- out carrying Ohio.

Clinton and Vice President Al Gore have visited the state seven times.

Dole may return for a bus trip through Ohio after Sunday’s debate with Clinton, said Jim Lynch, Dole’s Ohio campaign spokesman. Details are expected later this week.

Dole used this visit for a sharp attack on the president, likening him to a used-car salesman.

“He makes promises that are lib- eral and promises that are conservative,” Dole said. “But the only promises he keeps are his liberal promises because he is a liberal.

George Stephanopoulos, senior advisor to Clinton, accused Dole of using harsh words because he is trailing in the polls. He expected Dole to be more measured during Sunday’s debate.

“It’s not surprising that as he falls so far behind, that he feels the need to blast out with these negative attacks,” Stephanopoulos said in a teleconference.

A couple of Clinton supporters accused the Dole campaign of pushing them out of the rally even though they had tickets. One woman filed a complaint with campa- ign police, but she could not identify the man she said pushed her.

Lynch said he had not heard about the complaints, but said no campa- ign volunteer would act that way. But he added that only printed signs may be brought into a rally.

Also Tuesday, Dole attended a coffee in the backyard of a suburb- an schoolteacher and his wife in Willoughby before going to the rally. After leaving the college, he stopped at a hospital to visit two police officers who were injured when their motorcycles collided while escorting him to the rally.

The extent of their injuries wasn’t immediately known.

Increased internet access creates possibilities of plagiarism

KEENE, N.H. (AP) — Like colleges everywhere, Keene State College is seeing a surge in student use of the Internet. But a top official acknowledges there are problems as well as benefits.

"The Internet poses challenges we haven't fully grappled with," said Robert Golden, vice president for academic affairs. "Let's be honest about it."

When students arrive for the new school year a month ago, about 250 brought computers with them — more than 10 percent of those who live in dormitories. From researching term papers to dropping e-mail to friends and family, students find the ability to plug into the Internet — a world-wide connection of computer networks — indispensable.

"Sometimes if it's late at night, I realize, 'Ooh, I could use just a little more information for a paper on [The Internet] is going to make plagiarism perhaps more tempting and somewhat harder to track...We'll have to put more emphasis on academic integrity,'" Robert Golden said.

"I didn't use any of that material, but the paper was right up on the Web," he said.

That concerns Golden.

The Internet "is going to make plagiarism perhaps more tempting and somewhat harder to track," Golden said. "We'll have to put more emphasis on academic integrity."

Keene State has a new policy on academic integrity and tries to track plagiarists, who can be expelled for repeat offenses. The emphasis on academic integrity begins "the minute students arrive as freshmen," Golden said.

Faculty member also are encouraged to talk about the subject. So far, such efforts appear to be working.

"What I've seen indicates creative, responsible use," Golden said. "Cases of abuse seem few and far between."

AROUND THE NATION

Welfare reform plans begin to take effect

WASHINGTON (AP) — America’s much-debated welfare reform plan formally began Monday when the Department of Health and Human Services approved plans Wisconsin and Michigan submitted to run their own public-assistance programs.

In the aftermath of the often-bitter debate that dominated Congress as lawmakers fought over the future of welfare during the past nine months, the formal certification was something of a foregone conclusion, guaranteed once President Clinton signed the GOP-crafted bill in August.

AROUND THE WORLD

Israelis press for continued control of Hebron

HEBRON, West Bank (AP) — With Hebron’s Palestinians under curfew, thousands of Jewish settlers danced and sang near the Tomb of the Patriarchs Monday to press for continued Israeli control of the city.

The more than 5,000 settlers celebrated the Jewish Sukkot holiday and appealed to Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu not to withdraw troops from Hebron, the last West Bank town under occupation, as the peace accord called for Israel to do six months ago.

Many of the Jews traveled to Hebron from elsewhere — only 450 Jewish settlers live among Hebron’s 94,000 Palestinians. They said an Israeli pullout would endanger the tiny Jewish minority and Hebron’s Arab sites that are holy to both Jews and Muslims.

"Hebron is not a personal asset — it is not yours and it is not Clinton’s,"" said nationalist lawmaker Rehavam Ze’evi, addressing his opponent in Netanyahu.

Investigations of Bosnian mass gravesites postponed

KRAVICA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Investigators who peeked through skeletons and shreds of clothing for evidence of war crimes have ended excavations of eastern Bosnia’s mass graves until next year.

Four hundred to 500 bodies have been recovered. But the approaching winter snow will conceal at least until spring answers to a broader question: the exact fate of the mass of the 7,000 people missing from the former Muslim enclave of Srebrenica. Investigators dug up mass graves this year searching for evidence to help build cases against suspected war criminals.

But human rights officials say excavation of all mass grave sites is necessary for Bosnians to begin looking to the future.

Disputes over holy sites spark violence in Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House summit is being held against a backdrop of volatile disputes between Israel and the Palestinians, involving holy sites in Jerusalem and the West Bank town of Hebron.

Israel’s decision last week to open a second entrance to a tourist tunnel near Muslim and Jewish holy sites sparked protests and violence. The issue is whether Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu’s decision conflicted with a 1993 understanding that the future of Jerusalem and religious sites would be taken up by the two sides in final-status negotiations.

On Hebron, the Palestinians accuse Israel of foot-dragging on a commitment to redeploy Israeli troops in the town, so they guard only some 440 Jewish settlers and keep their distance from the overwhelming Arab majority.

Students should be included in town meetings

Saturday morning's town meeting for parents in Bolton Theater with President Robert A. Oden Jr. and his senior staff was a unique and effective way for leaders of the college and its primary investors to meet and communicate.

President Oden used the first half hour to report the state of the college, and its plans and concerns. The upcoming capital campaign, design, tuition, curriculum review and the latest U.S. News & World Report national rankings were only a few of the topics he addressed.

The second half of the program was turned over to parents in the audience who articulated their concerns to the president and senior staff. Housing, smoking, academic honors, faculty quality and drug and alcohol abuse highlighted their concerns. Oden and staff members fielded the questions.

No new policies or earthshaking ramifications emerged from this meeting. It was basically as any other town meeting. People came together to communicate concerns and state positions and let it be known that they were concerned about issues. In the end, everyone better understood how others felt and what they considered important.

It was an hour well spent.

If parents, who are on campus for a weekend once a year, can have a town meeting with the president and his staff, why can't the students who are on campus for nine months?

One town meeting a month or even only once a semester would be a wonderful chance for students and administration to come together and articulate concerns to each other.

Putting themselves before the students would only improve the administration's image and reaffirm the adage "Students come first." Attendance by students would remind upper-level staff that students really do care about Kenyon and its future and are interested in making it better.

It would be an hour well spent.

Students Council looking for student input

The Student Council is currently soliciting student responses to the recently completed Repro of the Campaign Planning Committee. The upcoming capital campaign, which will run between the years 1996 and 2001, is expected to yield more than $100 million for the college. In the report, the Campaign Planning Committee recommends that the campaign be divided for the following reasons: Endowment for financial aid: $35 million; for professorships: $18 million; for faculty development and support $4 million; for collaborative research $5 million; for international student initiative and scholarship fund $2 million; for interdisciplinary teaching fund $2 million; for prevent's special initiatives fund $1 million; for land acquisition $3 million; total: $70 million. Facilities for the natural sciences $28 million; for the department of music $4 million; total: $32 million. Operating support: unrestricted giving (1996-2001) $13 million. Grand total: $115 million. Endowment expenditures would raise the school's endowment for scholarships and other forms of financial aid to $50 million and support twelve new faculty positions, as well as fund the specific programs listed above. Facilities expenditures would fund the construction of a new chemistry building and the renovation of Samuel Mather and the Biology Building. It would also support the remodeling of Philip Hall for the use of the Department of Music.

The committee also addresses the secondary needs of the school, which include book purchase funds, summer institutes for secondary teachers, an interdisciplinary studies center, an intercultural center, lectureship funds, an art gallery and improveitions to Rose Hall and the athletic buildings. The committee believes that these areas are worthy of further attention. Copies of the complete report can be found at the Student Affairs Center and on course reserve at the library (under Professor Student Council). The Student Council welcomes any and all student input regarding distribution of campaign funds. Please forward any questions, concerns or ideas to Eva McClellan (MCCLLELAN, Mather 408) or myself (DENNING, McBride 316).

Hypnotist will do anything but put you to sleep

By Leah Grenwald
Staff Reporter

Even the most mild-mannered Kenyon student can become an纽带ly enraptured under the hypnotic gaze of Tom DeLuca. Unaware they are capable of speaking in front of large crowds, let alone crying because Tony Tiger died, Kenyon students will reveal their most embarrassing sides.

At 8 p.m. on Friday in Rosse Hall, DeLuca will amuse and baffle the audience with his mind-boggling hypnotic show. After gathering his volunteers and turning them into a trence, DeLuca will ask them to imagine themselves in a variety of hilarious scenarios.

Three-time recipient of the National Association for Campus Activities' "College Entertainer of the Year" award, DeLuca has a distinguished reputation on the Kenyon campus. In response to last year's performance, members of the audience were baffled by DeLuca's talent.

"I was captivated in suspended disbelief," chimed Anne Degar '97.

Laughing as he recited the night, Keith Fletcher '97 added that "people believe the things DeLuca made people do."

Months dropped in utter shock as the audience watched their fellow students fall prey to DeLuca's prompting.

-Danesh Chanduwandia '98

smiles. "I saw a side of my girlfriend I had never seen before."

Willing to risk humiliation in order to provide entertainment, those who volunteered were later informed of their embarrassing actions.

Low-riding Cathy Demos '97 "licked off" the student who DeLuca claimed was a police officer who had just pulled her over for speeding.

In another scene, Jen Stevens '99 took off her sweater, undid her suspenders, and began to take off her shirt after DeLuca told her that she was very warm.

Hypnotist subject Peter Bepler '97 remarked, "You feel like making up things, but you don't know why you are doing them."

First used by an Asarian doctor in the 18th century, hypnosis is the act of leading subjects into a trance-state of altered awareness where they are very relaxed and open to suggestions.

Today, DeLuca takes hypnosis to creative levels, forming an entertainment show.

DeLuca earned a masters degree in psychology from Sanganon State University. While working as a therapist, he began appearing before local civic groups where a prominent businessman recognized his potential and encouraged him to become an entertainer.

Refining his act in nightclubs in the Midwest and establishing himself as one of the most unusual performers around, DeLuca has popularized hypnosis on the college circuit.

The results of DeLuca's show are fascinating, hilarious, at times even pognant," praised the New York Post. "Don't miss it."

Soundtracks by primarily non-soundtrack artists are generally disappointments, and this one is no exception. Petty, never brilliantly blinding even on his best days, is best admired for his relaxed, straightforward attitude toward pop craftsmanship.

The difference between his good albums (Full Moon Fever, Wildflowers, Damn the Torpedoes) and his mediocre albums (You're Gonna Get It, Long After Dark, Into the Great Wide Open) is therefore a matter of consistency, rather than highlights.

Petty albums contain at least two catchy, enjoyable songs, as well as at least five utterly forgettable ones.

She's the One, adhering to those strict guidelines, includes "Walls (Come Crashing)," perfectly composed, effectively melodic single, and "California," a jangling, harmonica-driven tune that makes up to sheer numbness what it lacks in lyrical content.

Along with those two eminently playable tracks, Petty offers instrumental, formula filler, cover versions and alternate takes, all of which are listenable, but none of which ever registers as anything more.

Artist John Giarrizzo '77 returned to Kenyon next week to lead a drawing workshop and present a slide lecture in Olin Auditorium at 7 p.m. on Tuesday.

Using a live model and focusing on the figure as a subject, Giarrizzo said he plans to conduct the workshop emphasizing composition to communicate an idea. The workshops will be held in Coffman on Tuesday through Friday, from 4 to 6 p.m.

For Giarrizzo, coming back to Kenyon is a return to his starting place as an artist.

"What I learned at Kenyon is absolutely the foundation of all I've gone on to do," said Giarrizzo. "It taught me how to ask questions and how to let just accept. I learned that everything wasn't black and white; there are varying shades and degrees of perspectives."

An art major and political science minor, Giarrizzo said he intended to be a lawyer. After taking an introductory drawing class with Professor of Art Martin Garhart, Giarrizzo realized that it was time to change his plans.

"[The art class] unleashed a passion that had been burning in me for a while," said Giarrizzo.

While his need to be an artist was clear to Giarrizzo, it was not so clear to his family back in Cleveland, who were pleased with the idea of their son becoming a lawyer.

"When I told my father that I was going to major in art, I remember a silence fell over the entire house," said Giarrizzo.

Later in Giarrizzo's freshman year, Garhart went with Giarrizzo to Cleveland to convince his family of Giarrizzo's potential and the necessity of his pursuing his newfound interest in art.

Since his first class with him at Kenyon, Garhart has been influential in Giarrizzo's career as an artist. Giarrizzo recalled an experience his junior year when he spent his entire second semester on painting for his junior honors project.

"I was determined to create a masterpiece. I wanted to make it and I wanted it beautiful," said Giarrizzo. "I made me and the painting miserable."

Having witnessed Giarrizzo's semester-long struggle, Garhart was determined that Giarrizzo would get something painted in a week in order to create a series of paintings for his senior project. As Giarrizzo worked on this project, Garhart taught Giarrizzo the importance of knowing when to let go of a work.

"It's foolish to say I've ever finished a work," said Giarrizzo.

"We have a tendency in overwork a piece, especially the ones we love. But when a work achieves a level of balance, and the overall piece seems to work, I know I have to abandon it because if I do anyway, I'll hurt it."

A running theme through Giarrizzo's art is the use of subjects that are real to him.

"I find roots in my own life's experience. The only thing I can paint with conviction is what I really love and know."

—John Giarrizzo

—John Giarrizzo

Giarrizzo '77 will bring his experiences back to Kenyon next week in some way," said Garhart.

Garhart decided to use a portion of the money to bring Kenyon alumnae who are pursuing careers in art, such as Giarrizzo.

"Students have a special connection with young artists," said Garhart. "He [Giarrizzo] has kept his vision in sight and done well. It's a good thing for all students to see."

Giarrizzo lives in Wyoming, Montana, with his wife, Kenyon graduate Rowene Weems '79, and their two children. When discussing his future plans, he draws upon the humanist tradition he was educated at Kenyon.

"I want to build upon my dreams and make contributions to make a better world," said Giarrizzo. "I'm a die-hard idealist in the midst of a pessimistic world."

Catholiced Gods, a series of films showcasing various cinematic portrayals of religious scholars throughout the Department of Religion, will continue on Sunday with Fitz's Continues. All films are shown at 7:30 p.m. in Olin Auditorium.

"We're actually talking about a film festival," said a professor of religion Miriam Dean-Otting.

Other films to be shown include "Happy End," Oct. 13, of Montreal on Oct. 27, Babette's Feast on Nov. 3, On The Waterfront on Nov. 10 and Malcolm X on Nov. 17.

Mean Streets and 2001 Space Odyssey were shown in September.

According to Dean-Otting, the professor of religion, the films were carefully selected. Each faculty member in the Religion department selected movies he or she felt would be appropriate for the occasion.

"We narrowed the field by various means," said Dean-Otting. "We didn't want all Western-made films."

"Religion is a real common theme in films. This may raise awareness so that people are more apt to see this universal phenomenon in places they might not be looking for it."

—Miriam Dean-Otting

As a result, modern-classic American, Canadian, Danish, Indian, and Italian films will be viewed.

As accounted by the series' producer, Just Kids, "Films have been a powerful tool, either as ideologue or as utopian-realism, for expressing in creative images both a mandate against concrete moralism sometimes unveling fresh meaning of the essence of life. Thus whether with overt or covert religious imagery and vocabulary, can be profoundly religious."

The religious department plans to continue the festival into the second semester.

Possible films selected for viewing are: Black Robe, Brother From Another Planet, Moon, Million Year to Earth, The Bourne Hard, The Fixer, The Mission, The Rapture and Wicker Man.

Kenyon hosts Macedonian Ambassador today

Ljubica Z. Acevska comes to Kenyon to shed light on one of the lesser-known countries in the geo-political world.

By Stephanie Adams Senior Staff Reporter

The Republic of Macedonia's Ambassador to the United States, Jursinic, arrived earlier today at Kenyon to shed light on one of the lesser-known countries in the geopolitical world.

From 9:40-11:00 a.m., Acevska spoke with Kais Schoenhals' East European Fascism and Communism class and John Jursinic's Russian 11 and 13 classes. During Common Hour, Acevska gave a speech entitled "Women's Issues in Contemporary Macedonia." Her main lecture, "Macedonia in International Affairs," is scheduled to take place tonight at 7:30 in Peirce Lounge.

Acevska's visit, sponsored mainly by the Offices of the Academic Dean, Multicultural Affairs, President, and the Department of Modern Languages and Literatures, has been pending for several years.

Jursinic has been the primary impetus for her visit. He credited a newspaper article he read about her in 1993 with giving him the idea to bring her to Kenyon.

Several interruptions, including an unsuccessful assassination attempt on Macedonia's president, delayed plans for Acevska's visit until now.

Jursinic sees Acevska's visit as quite relevant to the Kenyon community. He said, "Basically... there are 550 American soldiers in Macedonia as peacekeepers..."

Excelling in both the public and private sectors, Acevska has a wealth of experience to speak about. Although a Macedonian by birth, she moved to Mansfield, Ohio, in 1966 and eventually became naturalized. She earned her undergraduate degree in International Relations from Ohio State University, where she also taught upper-level classes in the school of international management and introductory courses in East European politics and economics.

Around this time, she researched material for her textbook, The Other Europe, which deals with the history and nationalism of Eastern Europe from 1919 to 1945. She worked in business throughout the 1980s, mostly with international trading companies in Washington, D.C.

After Macedonia declared its independence from the rapidly dividing Yugoslavia, Acevska became Macedonia's principal representative in Washington, D.C.

As representative, Acevska's main goal was to get the U.S. government to recognize Macedonia as an independent country at a time when the Yugoslavian war was becoming increasingly complex. Compounding her difficulties, Greece's government placed considerable pressure on the U.S. not to recognize Macedonia; Greece was concerned that, if fully independent, Macedonia would try to stake a claim on the north-east province in Greece of the same name.

In 1995, Greece and Macedonia settled their disagreements, and the U.S. lifted the economic embargo against Macedonia and established full diplomatic relations. Having already spent the last several years as her nation's diplomatic representative in Washington, D.C., Acevska became the first official ambassador.

Now that her country has full diplomatic status, Acevska spends considerable time promoting economic investment and aid for Macedonia.

She is also a frequent speaker on the lecture circuit, aiming to inform audiences about the Balkan region.

Wednesday, in conjunction with Acevska's visit, the Kenyon Film Society showed "Before the Rain," a Milcho Manchevsk directed, award-winning film which deals with ethnic conflict in Macedonia.

Profile: A religious group that offers something for everybody

By Amanda Loy Staff Reporter

Unitarian Universalists of Gambier (UUG), a liberal religious organization, returned to Kenyon after several years of relative inactivity. Its first meeting, organized by Laura Lind '99 and Karina Leppik '98, took place at the Crozer Center Sept. 15.

Seven principles summarize the Unitarian Universalists' beliefs.

Leppik said, "The seven principles are basically what sets U.U. apart from other religions... they're basic ethical guidelines everywhere where everyone and everything is respected."

"Seven principles are basically what sets U.U. apart from other religions. We don't have a creed, but we do have these seven principles, which are very much open to interpretation. They're basic ethical guidelines everywhere where everyone and everything is respected and everyone's ideas and beliefs are just as important as everyone else's. We stress the inherent worth and dignity of every person."

Unitarian Universalist's practice is to expose individuals to different religions and let them choose their own personal beliefs. Sermons combine readings from the Bible, the Koran and other religious texts with songs, poetry and children's stories which communicate specific themes.

Leppik, commenting on the varied nature of the sermons, said, "I like to think of [a service] as a potluck dinner."

Members do not subscribe to a single stance on issues; this is often reflected in their diverse sermons. The religion allows for individual interpretation.

"As a tradition," Leppik said, "we pull from different spiritual sources. Some members follow their own religion for life. Others find a religion presented in services preferable over all others and convert to it. Still others become atheists or agnostics."

This year, Unitarian Universalists will hold hour-long Sunday meetings at 9 p.m. Each participant will have an opportunity to design a sermon based on a theme of their choice, using any medium desired. Leppik said the group also plans to attend Columbus services sometime during the academic year.

Group provides support for female sexual assault victims

By Joanna Radnor
Senior Staff Reporter

Statistics indicate that one out of every four women will be assaulted in her lifetime, and one out of every four college women will be the victim of date rape. With this knowledge in mind, Camille Collett, the Health and Counseling Center college counselor, began a weekly support group for survivors of sexual assault in early 1995 called Breaking the Silence.

Collett said, "The effects of rape can be devastating to the survivors. Lowered self-esteem, loss of power, decreased concentration and motivation are but a few of the symptoms victims of sexual assault experience. Through talking with other survivors, the isolation and silence can be broken and the process of healing and empowerment begun. Breaking the Silence is a group where women are heard, believed, validated and respected in an understanding, supported and confidential environment."

The original Breaking the Silence group consisted of five female Kenyon students. Presently, there is a limit of eight people, all of whom are pre-screened before they can join.

Pre-screening allows Collett to both more accurately see the women's emotional levels and determine the potential effectiveness of group therapy.

According to Collett, there is a variety of experiences among the women she screens. "Some women were molested as children or in high school and are just now talking about it. They are not ready to talk with other people about their experiences. They need more individual counseling. Others have talked about it a lot."

Each member makes a commitment to stay with the group for six weeks. After the six weeks, the group collectively decides if the group, as a whole, should continue.

"While the group itself determines its specific needs and focus," Collett said, "issues addressed in the past have included: how to tell family and friends; changes in family/friend relationships; intimacy after violence; dealing with flashbacks; recovering power and self-esteem; assault prevention; and emotional, social, and legal concerns regarding reporting."

Breaking the Silence is purely confidential. It is limited to women only because, said Collett, "It is often more difficult for men to talk about assault. But, we would be more than willing to start an all-sexual assault support group should any feel comfortable talking about their experience."

Playoffs ready to unfold after entertaining baseball season

By Fred Bierman and MacAdam Glenn

Staff Columnists

The baseball season officially ended Sunday, and that signals the beginning of the good stuff. We would like to take some time to reflect upon the season that was, and then express our thoughts on the upcoming playoffs.

To start, we present the first annual Fred and Mac awards for outstanding achievement. Drumroll please...

AL MVP:
Alex Rodriguez, Mariners. No question: At 21, Rodriguez became the third-youngest player to win the AL hitting crown. Rodriguez's stellar defense and consistent hitting helped keep the the Mariners in contention.

NL MVP:
Ken Caminiti, Padres. In a tight race for the NL, West Caminiti was the difference. With a .326 batting average, 40 home runs, and 130 runs batted in, placed in the top five in the NL in all three categories. Given that man a Snickers... Most Feared Man NL:
John Smoltz of the Braves, who led the majors with 276 strikeouts, was automatic in the first half of the season, going 14-1. While he finished just 24-8, Smoltz finally had the year everyone in Atlanta expected from him. Rookie to look out for: Derek "D-Back" Jeter, shortstop, Yankees, who played more innings than Cal Ripken and consistently came through in the clutch; hitting .314 for the year under intense pressure from the New York media and fans. Rey Ordonez, Mets, who worked miracles with his glove across town at Shea; Todd Hollandsworth, Dodgers, who sparkled in left field and in the plane.

Picks for the first round:
Pads over Cardinals 3 games to 2. (Pads win a hot streak)

Braves over Dodgers 3-0. (No brainer; pitching wins)

Indians over Orioles 3-1. (Indians been here before)

Yankees over Rangers 3-2. (Mac abstains, hate Ford)

SHOUT OUTS:
Belated shout out to the Arizona State Sun Devils; we got to love for the Combuchers. To the Texas Rangers for making the playoffs for the first time since they moved to Texas; although they weren't much better in Washington... To the Orioles for going into South Bend and whapping Notre Dame; no love for the Irish. Eternal respect to Troy Davis who ran for 375 yards against Missouri—he has 917 yards through four games for a weak Iowa State team... To the Chargers for beating undefeated division rival Kansas City, and particularly junior Matt Stam for his two interception, and "Big" Al Pupunu, who had 81 yards receiving and has a great home... To the University of Miami coach of the D-5 Saints could be up...

OFF THE HILL'S NFL PICKS

Senior Staff Columnist

After last week's 10-3 showing, "Picks" is reminding some of people of expert prognosticating the "Swami," Jimmy the Greek, and Danny Sheridan. We here at "Picks" remind you that it's only been three weeks and once again warn that these predictions are for amusement purposes only, and that gambling is an insidious disease.

Detroit 28, Atlanta 23: The Falcons remain grounded at 4-0; the Lions are a good bet at home.

Minnesota 17, Carolina 10: Battle of tough defenses will be a low scoring affair, with the edge going to the Vikings in the Metrodome.

Green Bay 31, Chicago 21: This rivalry used to be a matchup of grind-it-out running games, but will be an aerial affair on Sunday.

Buffalo 21, Indianapolis 20: Could the Colts really go into Rich Stadium and leave 5-0? That seems too much to ask.

New Orleans 26, Jacksonville 16: A loss to the Jags and Jim Morris is too for not allowing a single offensive touchdown since the first game of the season (they allowed one that fateful day) (that one was all Mac)... and to the FIRST PLACE YANKEES (all Fred).
Ladies crush Bethany after back-to-back overtime defeats

Ladies end two-game losing streak with win
By Sarah H. Booth
Senior Staff Writer

The women's soccer team continues to face difficult conference opponents, and will continue with Allegheny this Saturday. The Ladies suffered a tough overtime loss to the College of Wooster on Saturday, coming off a similar loss to Case Western Reserve University earlier that week. Kenyon responded with an 8-0 victory yesterday over Bethany. According to Becky Sanford '99, the team continues to gain strength from each game.

Their Ladies are currently 2-1 North Coast Athletic Conference and 7-2-1 overall.

Wooster put Kenyon to the test last Saturday, according to goaliekeeper Giselle Milford '98. Ranked 25th in the nation, Wooster was a tough task to face; they shot the Ladies 32-8, but Kenyon played well up in the first half of competition and kept their composer under pressure, said Milford.

One misfortune was that a member of the Ladies' squad suffered an injury during the game; Kathryn Murchison '98 dislocated her knee cap. This will put a strain on the squad, which only has five substitutes.

Catie Geithes '98 scored the first goal, assisted by Laurie Danner '98 during the first half of the match. Wooster came back to tie the game, went into overtime and Wooster scored the final and winning goal of the game, capturing the victory 2-1.

The Ladies almost had the game, Ti-captain Emily Donovan '96, said, "it was one of the best efforts, in terms of how we played, and what our team was, we came as a team this season. We played hard and unfortunately we were able to score in the second overtime and we couldn't count.

Kelly Brando '99 said, "We worked hard to get the 20:300 balls in order to win. We've been working on passing and shooting to fire shots whenever and wherever we get the chance, not pass the ball off."

The Ladies have a lot of heart, according to Milford. "We need to work on finishing. We can get the ball up to the goal, but we can't get it into the net."

Each game teaches the Ladies how they can improve their game, and their confidence to ameliorate the problem as the season progresses, said Brando.

They are looking forward to their home game versus Allegeny this Saturday at 1 p.m.

Soccer: Lords tie OWU, 2-2

Gowin '97 had the lone goal of the first half.

The Lords were never down in the game, but they were far from comfortable with a one goal lead. "We needed to score more goals and we all knew it," said captain Jim Barry '97.

The Lords came into the second half with a lead as it was a new game and included a barrage of goals, beating the Wooster defense senseless. "Everyone got a crack at the goal in the second half," third-year velo- man Mike Vasiauropoulos said.

Leading the Lords was senior forward Tony Mohammed with two goals and two assists. With hisit points Mohammed added his totals, leading the Lords in overall points. "When we all play as a team the goals will come easily, especially against a team like Wooster," Mohammed commented about the performance.

Also contributing to the Lords scoring all with one goal were Biko Moyo '99, KheybeOlds '99, and Phil Sculley '99. Greg Stephenson '90, Wayne Allenby '97, Kalufanya and Moyo all had one assist each in the win.

In last night's game, Kenyon jumped out to a 1-0 lead at the half after a goal from Olds. Barry added a goal early in the second half to increase the lead to 2-0, but Ohio Wesleyan came back to tie the game. Neither team scored in 30 minutes of overtime.

The game was unevented in conference play with the tie. They will not meet again in the regular season.

Wittenberg hands Kenyon first loss of year, 55-14

Saturday, the Kenyon Lords football team travels to Otterbein University in an attempt to resurrect its winning ways after a lip-locked 55-14 loss to the Wittenberg Tigers last weekend.

After winning its first two games of the season, the Lords (2-3, NC North Coast Athletic Conference) seemed poised to give Wittenberg trouble. Lord's Head Coach Vince Arduini said, "Our players gave great effort, but it wasn't enough. [Wittenberg's] program is a lot better than our program."

The Tigers knocked out the half after accumulating 257 total yards. Lords running back Derrick Johnson '97 gained 95 yards on 26 carries. Arduini named him the team's "offensive player of the week."

Out Brigg '98, the defensive player of the week, made seven passes out of 10 at the Otterbein Invitational, but are looking good for its conference contention.

Our Deming '98 ran a solid race, finishing second. Jason Miles '98 and Ryan Snyder '98 also had good races, finishing in the top third. The Lords received a nice surprise with the arrival of John Johnson '99, a new addition to the team, the Jordan broke 30 minutes in his first race, and broke a solid number five or six runner. This will add to the team's depth in competition; Kenyon has suffered if any runners have been sick or injured, which occurs with some frequency. When asked what he hopes to add to the team, Jordan said, "I hope I can be an enthusiastic and hard-working contributor. I feel confident in my run and I feel I can improve on it."

"Wittenberg will be the site of this year's regional's, scrumming on the course gave Kenyon some experience, yet Otterbein is flat and fast, which could work against Kenyon. The Lords were hoping for a more hilly course, as that is what they are used to training on."

The Lords' next meet is Octo- ber 11, when they will also travel to the Ohio Intercollegiate Championships. - John Egan

Ladies at 4-4 after splitting NCAC games

The Ladies remained at 500 after splitting conference games against Oberlin and Wittenberg this past week.

Last Saturday, Kenyon faced up against the Yeowomen, and came out with a 63-2 win.

The Ladies started the game on top with a goal from Michelle de Tarnowsky '99 assisted by Phoebe Walker '98 in the first minutes of the game.

The Ladies responded to an Ohio 6-0 goal when Walker put a shot in off an assist from Sara Reiss '98. Jessica Goldman '00 added a goal off of an assist from Lindsay Buchan '97. Carrie Moore '99 tallied the Ladies' fourth goal.

Buchan, scored early in the second half on an assist by Chris- tina Ramirez '98. Lisa McNally '97 scored with eight minutes remaining assisted by Ellen Pizzuto '98.

Yesterday, Wittenberg handed Kenyon a tough 3-2 loss, the Tigers were coming off a Vic- tory over top-ranked Denison last Saturday.

The Ladies stack with the Tigers during the first half and went into the second half tied 1-1 after McNally scored off of an assist from Gretchen Muller '98. However, the Tigers broke away during the first minutes of the second half, scoring two goals in five minutes. The Ladies answered uncer- tainly late in the half with a goal by Ramirez, but could not over- come the deficit. All three Wittenberg goals were scored by Shannon Selby '99.

The Ladies play Denison on the road this weekend.

Volleyball team struggles through three-game skid after loss to Hiram

By Keith Blecher
Senior Staff Writer

"We are starting to come to a realization of what it takes to be successful and to compete at a high level," Coach Jimmie Bruening's reflective thoughts spring from her team's performance last weekend at Heidelberg.

In the first round of the tournament,
Kenyon faced well, defeating Sienna Heights College in four games (15-6, 15-10, 14-16, 16-10). The Lords captured the first game against their second-round opponent, Adrian College. Unfortunately, the team lost the next game 11-15, and was unable to regain its confidence, losing the next two games and the match 6-15, 11-15. The Ladies then lost their next match to Heidelberg, 6-15, 2-15, 9-15.

One factor could have been missing players. Kenyon hopes to see Reia Oberwetter
'99 and Krissy Surovjak '97 back in the lineup soon. Surovjak's sprained ankle and Oberwetter's problematic back kept the starters out of the lineup this weekend and may have disrupt the young team's growing chemistry.

On Tuesday against Hiram, the leadership of the two upperclassmen was sorely missed as Kenyon dropped a five game

Rugby teams sweep weekend competition with duplicate 17-12 wins

By Lindsay Buchanan
Sports Co-Editor

Both rugby teams had a successful weekend, as the men defeated Ohio Wesleyan and the women beat Wittenberg in front of family weekend crowds.

The men's team came out strong in the first half, hoping to average an earlier season loss to Ohio Wesleyan, according to Steve Lannen '97.

"It's never easy against OWU...there were a lot of skirmishes, pushing and shoving.
It was a tough game," Lannen said.

Agreed Kolbi Blecher '97, "It was the roughest game I've ever seen in a rugby game." The Lords bolted out to an early lead, however, scoring three tries before the half was up; Jamie Leiser '98, Clint Nash '98, and George Hawkey '97 were responsible for the trio.

The OWU squad gave the Lords a run for their money in the second half, however, scoring twice and coming close to a third try. "In the second half, we were playing really well, instead of playing to win," said Blecher.

Still, the Lords were able to hold the Bishops to capture the 17-12 win.

Said Lannen, "The backs played well, and the scrum did better in the second half. Blecher had a good game, too."

The women's team also had a good game, according to Tori Tate.
They also captured a 17-12 win, defeating Wittenberg for the first time in at least two years. Katie Hinsey '97, Eather Cely
'98, and Sarah Reading
'99 each scored a try; an extra kick was scored by Jamie Smith '99.

Tate gave credit for her team's success to the family weekend crowd. "It was a moral boost and really brought the team together on an emotional level," she said.

Tate added, "this is the most talented rugby team I have been a part of in my time at Kenyon."

The team is eagerly looking forward to their home game against John Carroll this Saturday at 1 p.m. "John Carroll is a tough team, but we're looking good," said Tate.

The men will also take on John Carroll on the road.
