Wake Up Week

By Eric Harper
Senior Staff Reporter

I would expect that early next week [President Robert A. Oden, Jr.] will get in touch with [the Collegian] personally," said Secretary of the East Wing Association B. Price, addressing rumors that a tentative settlement to the Alpha Delta Phi lawsuit against Kenyon was recently reached. The East Wing Association is the alumni organization for the Kenyon chapter of Alpha Delta Phi sorority.

Price said "I cannot say any-thing about the lawsuit. It has been agreed that Oden will speak for all parties concerned."

President Oden said "So much positive activity took place this summer, we hoped to have an agreement to present to the Board of Trustees. It doesn't seem like that is now possible."

"I wish the rumors were true," said Oden. The Board of Trustees convenes tomorrow. They will not meet again until January.

Oden said any settlement would be non-binding and will not affect the Trustees and Alpha Delta Phi fraternity had agreed to; Oden said that open talk of the litigation would be inappropriate.

"There is a lot going on right now," Oden said. "The lawyers [representing Kenyon] say that I cannot be specific."

The lawsuit was filed by Al-pha Delta Phi and the East Wing Association in Knox County Court of Common Please on Aug. 30, 1994. The suit alleged that the college violated a 1996 agree-ment with the fraternity allowing the AIs exclusive rights to the East Wing of Old Kenyon.

The policy was in response to a study which found that female students and male students unaffiliated with campus Greek organizations did not have equal access to housing in Hasma and Leonard halls and Old Kenyon. The policy does not allow fraternity members to enter houses and during a special set hours in the historic dorms.

Price said I am not autho-rious access to more than 50 percent of the rooms in the his-tory dorms.

"An agreement could be reached in 15 days or 6 months," said Oden.

State liquor enforcement agents file charges against students after Oct. 12 hayride party

By Steve Lannen
Editor-in-Chief

Charges have been filed against five Kenyon students and more could follow after an annual hayride party on Oct. 12 at a rural residence nears east of Gambier. State liquor enforcement agents are considering filing charges against Kenyon's chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity in connection with the raid.

Following the Knox County sheriff's office, the party at the Jefferson Robinson property at 10431 Quarry Chapel Rd. was raided by sheriff's deputies and agents of the Ohio Department of Public Safety Liquor Enforcement After a state under agent went witness beer distributed and consumed without a permit. The agents also witnessed drinking by underage students, officials said.

Eyewitness Andy Ochti "said agents and sheriff's deputies handcuffed and detained a few students."

"The cops seemed pretty calm and didn't seem out of line at all, but a couple of (Delta Kappa Epsi-lon) fraternity members were out of control and trying to pull their brothers away from the cops," Ochti said. "Agents and com-mu-n JAVA氢 dye chargedt off the beer truck almost immediately and called it a crime scene."

ODPS-Liquor Enforcement agents charged seniors Peter Biegel and Peter Foreman with selling or furnishing beer without a permit and keeping a place where beer was kept with a permit. Both charges are misdemeanors. Biegel pleaded not guilty. Foreman will be se-ENHIVE page three

Visiting assistant art professor resigns unexpectedly

By James Ray
Senior Staff Reporter

Pamela J. Brown, visiting as-sistant professor of art who was hired for the 1996-97 academic year, left Kenyon unexpectedly last week.

Brown taught four classes Tuesday, Oct. 15; her students were notified of her resignation via e-mail in the late afternoon of the following day. Real Baldwin, spouse of Wendy MacLeod, assist-tant professor of drama, who has taught stage action at Kenyon in the past, will fill Brown's position for the remainder of the year.

Initially, the department was told she had resigned due to illness. During classes this past week, students were told that she had resigned for per-sonal reasons.

"Pam Brown has resigned due to illness," Associate Professor of Art Claudia Ebling, head of the studio area, explained. "She has left us current grades and Read}

Fire at OWU fraternity house leaves one student dead

By Kristen Filipe

A fire in the Phi Delta Theta fraternity house at Ohio Wesleyan University early on Saturday left Corey Polaniez 96 dead.

The fire was localized in a second-floor bedroom in the fra-triety house, but the cause of the fire is still under investigation, Pam Bost, director of public rela-tions at Ohio Wesleyan University, said.

Nine other students were in the home at the time of the fire, according to the Associated Press, but there were no other injuries.

This weekend's incident is Ohio Wesleyan's first fire-related death, Bost said. "It certainly is the first event of this nature of this magnitude."n

In light of the fire, Ohio Wesleyan is reviewing its policies on fire prevention and smoking, Bost said.

The Ohio Wesleyan counsel-ing center is working to help the campus deal with its grief. "People are trying to be there for each other, support each other," Bost said.

A memorial service for Polaniez will be held at noon on Thursday in Gray Chapel on the Ohio Wesleyan campus.

Documents attached to the suit claim that President William P. Peterson (1996-1997) entered into the agreement that gave the AIs exclusive rights to their division in return for a $6,000 donation to a college renovation project. The suit claims that following the fire which destroyed Old Kenyon in 1949, the agreement was reviewed by President Gordon Keith Chalmers (1937-1956).

In 1991 Kenyon imple-mented a housing policy that provided equal housing access to all campus residents, Lannen said. The policy was in response to a
Crowded exercise facilities not working out for 450 students

Kenyon's athletic facilities are in higher demand than past years, leaving many students frustrated with the situation.

Brian Gibney '99, who had approximately 450 student disgruntled with the current situation sign a petition, claims the fitness facilities are poorly maintained, the equipment is limited and there is overcrowding.

"The lack of safe equipment and the presence of far too many people not only makes it a frustrating exercise environment, but a dangerous one too," Gibney said. Gibney added the separation of weight training areas between Ernst and Westheimer "promotes a lack of balance in the student's fitness." Bob Bunnell, director of physical education and athletics, said there is nothing wrong with the current equipment. However, Bunnell pointed out that Kenyon does not have a large area dedicated to fitness. Furthermore, Bunnell said, another problem is "everyone wants to use the equipment at the same time, mainly when the varsity athletes are practicing." Bunnell believes selling some of the low grade equipment for better equipment and initiating student fundraisers would help enhance Kenyon's facilities.

Bunnell believes Kenyon's space could be used more efficiently. Bunnell converted a conference room into a weight room, and believes such conversions would not make building a new facility necessary. Furthermore, "if Kenyon's space for facilities is doubled, it would only be fall between four and seven," according to Bunnell. He added that the athletic department is trading in old equipment for more modern equipment, but maintains Kenyon's equipment is always safe.

Bunnell added that students who have not been here in the past four years must understand how much improvement has been made. "It's really not too shabby," Bunnell said in an interview for the Collegian. "The only weightroom which existed was 'the one in Ernst, and it only had one weight on it." Nevertheless, Bunnell said "we could all use more money," but he maintained he is doing the best he can "using all the resources he allocated to the athletic department."

Maintaining and upgrading athletic facilities is important, Bunnell said, because "it attracts and retains students. When students look at this school, they want to know where they can play." Board of Trustees convenes on campus this weekend for annual fall meeting

The Board of Trustees of Kenyon College will convene in Gambier this weekend, from Thursday to Sunday. The meeting is the first of three scheduled for the 1995-1996 academic year.

According to President Robert A. Oden Jr., there is no single agenda for this weekend's events. Typically, the autumn meeting allows members of the Board's various committees to discuss issues which may require action later in the year. However, emphasis will be placed upon initial plans for the 1995-1996 academic year.

According to President Oden, the agenda includes an update of the college's operations, an address by the faculty, an update of the college's financial status and an update of the college's budget.

The meeting will follow a luncheon in the Board of Trustees' meeting in Gambier.

"We aim to present no surprises at that point," said Oden.

Oden added that the board may be asked to discuss a possible agreement to put an end to litigation with the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, which has been accused of hazing and preventing limp.

AIDS Symposium to stress communication and education

By Charlotte McGlothin

Staff Reporter

A member of the Columbus AIDS Task Force is scheduled to present an interactive demonstration on AIDS education called "Sex and Sex Toys" on Tuesday at 4:15 p.m. in Peerce Lounge.

The forum is designed to further communication skills with regard to modern sexual concerns, including a discussion of protection from sexually transmitted diseases.

Information incorporated in the presentation will include: how to put on a condom correctly, how to use a female condom, the safe sex 595 and how to address commonly asked questions with regard to sexual issues.

The forum is one of the events of the Kenyon AIDS Committee described as the discussion of "an opportunity for students and community members to learn practical steps for reducing the risk of HIV transmission."

According to Brixius, the topic is "one of the most important issues of our generation. It's a very frightening disease." Brixius said the question is "what can we do to prevent the spread of this disease?"

"The presentation is open and the public. The length of the talk is as yet undetermined, but should run for at least an hour or more."

The Columbus AIDS Task Force presented the same program at Kenyon last year as part of the AIDS Symposium, but the campus climate was low, Brixius said. The AIDS Committee hopes this year, more people will choose to come out and attend the forum since it addresses topics relevant to almost everyone, Brixius said.

"We [the AIDS Committee] think this is an important issue on campus especially because of the new academic year," and that, in November, "there will be another symposium which will be a panel discussion."

"Hopefully," Brixius said, "people from the task force will be coming in to talk about their experiences dealing with AIDS."

University of Cincinnati leads Ohio schools in income from patent royalties, survey says

CINCINNATI (AP) — The University of Cincinnati leads all Ohio schools in income from patent royalties, according to a national survey.

The university got $2.2 million last year, according to 22nd in the nation. The University of California is first with income of $59.2 million.

In their annual research funding report released this week, the university said it plans to hire a new patent attorney to help get university research onto the market.

"To do a really fine job of teaching students, a professor has to be doing important work, but studying what's out there and extending the knowledge base shouldn't be their only goals," said Norman Putlack, director of intellectual property. "We need to do things that can be applied, that can be put to practical use."

The university secures about 10 patents a year and has about 74 in effect, according to the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.

The school's patent productivity is part of a trend of decreasing government funding and corporate downsizing, administrators say. That encourages interaction between business and academia, Putlack said.

"It's harder and harder to get government money for research," he said. "At the same time, companies are reducing the number of people doing research to become more profitable, so they're relying on universities to come up with the ideas."

Among the university's patents is a radio imaging process that shows the heart's blood vessels. It has brought in $8 million since 1998.

Hayride: Fraternity may face charges after annual off-campus party

Omaha, Neb. — Alcohol consumption, disorderly conduct and trespassing have put the Kappa Epsilon fraternity at the University of Nebraska-Omaha into a hot debate.

Omaha police said the fraternity has been accused of three violations.

"It's a serious matter. This is best dealt with the individuals and local authorities," Omaha said.

Omaha said he has not ruled out the possibility of the college taking action against individuals or a group involved if the evidence warrants it. College policy prohibits unregistered, off-campus parties by student organizations. There is no clear-cut policy for individuals who hold parties off campus.

Omaha said he has not ruled out the possibility of the college taking action against individuals or a group involved if the evidence warrants it. College policy prohibits unregistered, off-campus parties by student organizations. There is no clear-cut policy for individuals who hold parties off campus.

"We want to be fair in this process," Omaha said. "If we're going to bring charges ... there has to be some strong evidence. If I don't feel the evidence is there, I'm not going to bring the [campus judicial system]."

It is still unclear to authorities who is responsible for the party.

Bepler is president of Delta Kappa Epsilon and Fromen is a member, but authorities are unsure if the fraternity is directly linked to the party.

Dean Omaha said, "The people charged were very careful to state it was individuals who threw the party. However, agent Hassenes said, "All the information my agents are getting is leading us to looking into charging the fraternity in the near future."

If the state liquor enforcement department determines Delta Kappa Epsilon was directly involved with the party, Hassenes said the fraternity could be charged with the same misdemeanor Bepler and Fromen are facing. If convicted as an organization, the fraternity could face a $5,000 fine.

AROUND THE WORLD

Wildfires destroy homes near L.A.

TUSTIN, Calif. (AP) — Homeowners frantically bailed water from swimming pools, rescued pets and fled with unsalvaged belongings Monday as fierce, wind-driven fires burned through exclusive neighborhoods in northern Orange County, destroying or damaging 13 homes.

Some residents fled but others stayed behind, battling flames with garden hoses, buckets and shovels as smoke pulsed by the season's first Santa Ana winds rolled through the neighborhood.

One home two people shovelied containers of water from a pool up to the roof to douse shingles lit by tongues of fire. Other residents hurled shovelfuls of dirt at a wall of fire.

"We have to leave everything. We still have water flowing. Our concern is to make sure the fire isn't ext." Orange County Fire Capt. Scott Brown said three hours after the blaze was reported.

Northeast storm sets rain records

BOSTON (AP) — a powerful nor'easter that pounded New England over the weekend and into Monday flooded basements and subway stations, swamped roads and broke rainfall records. Two deaths were blamed on the storm.

In Connecticut, local roads along the shoreline were closed over the weekend as water became knee-high in some areas. In Peabody, Mass., water up to 4 feet surged through the streets, submerging stranded cars and flowing into stores.

Boston posted the second-highest rainfall ever during a 24-hour period, with 6.66 inches falling by 5 a.m. Monday. The record was set in August 1955, when Hurricane Diane dumped 8.4 inches on the city.

Floodwaters flowed over the top of a subway station's escalators in Boston and knocked against an upper-level tunnel booth.

Yeltsin dismisses general staff head

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin dismissed the head of the general staff of the Russian armed forces on Friday, immediately replacing him with another top general.

Yeltsin relieved Gen. Mikhail Kolesnikov of his duties and suggested that leaders of the Commonwealth of Independent States appoint him head of their staff for coordinating military cooperation, a Defense Ministry spokesman said.

His successor, Gen. Viktor Samsonov, has served since 1993 at the same Commonwealth post that Yeltsin now wants Kolesnikov to take.

Samsonov headed the Soviet and then Russian general staff in 1991-1992 before surrendering the job to Kolesnikov.

The dismissal does not appear to have been politically motivated, Kolesnikov, 57, long has been rumored to be on his way out.

CIA chief secretly visits China

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA director John Deutch made a secret trip to China last week amid reports the Central Intelligence Agency was discussing technology sales to Pakistan and a new crackdown on political dissent.

Deutch was in China last Monday through Wednesday and then went to South Korea, spokesman Mark Mansfield of the Central Intelligence Agency said.

The purpose of Deutch's visit was "to exchange views on a range of important global trends and concerns, and to discuss transnational threats," Mansfield said, citing terrorism and weapons proliferation as examples.

If China agrees there will be follow-up visits by U.S. exports in weapons proliferation questions and by Lynn E. Davis, the undersecretary of State for arms control.

Hayride raid prompts questions

The Oct. 12 raid by state liquor agents and sheriff's deputies at an annual hayride party on Quarry Chapel Road and the subsequent charges brought against some Kenyon students have given Kenyon another opportunity to consider questions of responsibility and boundaries.

Charges pending against some students range from underage consumption of alcohol to furnishing beer without a permit to intoxicated and disorderly conduct. Though the college would never officially condone these actions for its students, such behavior happens weekly, if not daily, on our campus with usually little or no consequence. Within the culture of a rural liberal arts college they are pretty tame acts that are more or less accepted.

What makes the Oct. 12 events interesting is that they happened beyond the boundaries of the college, off campus.

In this instance, by heading off campus, students moved out of the jurisdiction of the college and its security and safety force and into the jurisdiction of state and county agencies who were not willing to look the other way. Although the Kenyon students sponsoring the party off campus obviously knew they were outside the realm of campus security and safety, they felt free to assume they were also somehow immune to state and county authorities, in large part because off-campus parties such as these have gone on for years without notice on private property.

Yet these students take their business and parties off campus, is Kenyon obligated to regulate behavior and actions? Kenyon school policy prohibits college-recognized organizations from sponsoring social events involving alcohol off campus. When individuals decide to host a party off campus, there is no clear policy.

Who is responsible for an individual's behavior? How far do the arms of en loco parentis reach?

The college cannot sit idly by and watch its students involve themselves with the law, or should it? Can it do anything else?

These are tough questions with no readily available answers. Once this incident sorts itself out in the local courts, Kenyon will also begin to sort out its policies regarding alcohol and responsibility both on and off campus.

Fault found with Beyond Therapy

The show on Oct. 13, 1996 featured many outstanding Kenyon actors and actresses who were artists and creative. Though many of the scripts were very funny; however, I feel that the last skit, depicting a boy in a wheelchair, displayed poor taste and was in bad judgement. If current student were wheelchair bound, would you have thought twice before performing this skit? People with cerebral palsy, or other diseases receive enough, patience; why should anyone contribute to their degradation.

I understand that you are raising money for a cystic fibrosis organization, and that is why I question your insensitive portrayal of these individuals all together. I sincerely hope that in the future your troupe will realize that some subjects should not be satirized.

Vacation becomes an adventure

I know how to take a trip; I do it all the time.

With this among other things in mind, I left Gambier and arrived at our destination after a dreary seven hours without incident.

The next four days were spent livin' I spent two nights on a couch, another two on a hardwood floor—sleep was not premium. Most of the people I visited were not on vacation, as work beckoned for them early. This, however, wasn't noticeable except in their absence.

I returned to Kenyon late Sunday, short on sleep, energy, and peace of mind; basically, mission accomplished. New home, I can revile in the spoils of Chicago. I can sleep and dream sweet things of my accomplishments with people. I care about. I resume my life here reviewed, eager to see the last of the leaves fall for the last time. Take comfort in what surrounds you daily, do not go elsewhere for you will not find it. Home is the place for such things, while vacation is the time for adventure and debauchery.

ELECTION '96

Dole keeps pressure on Clinton over foreign campaign contributions

SOMERSET, Kentucky (AP) — Presidential challenger Bob Dole is using a new Saturday for putting Democrats on the defensive over their acceptance of foreign political contributions, saying the stone wall is beginning to crumble.

The Republican pressed his charge last week that U.S. President Bill Clinton is contributing from Asian business interests during a campaign rally and in his weekly radio address.

"The ethical vacuum at the heart of this administration has been filled with foreign money," Dole told his radio audience.

Dole was trying to energize Republicans with campaign stops in Kentucky and southern Virginia, both Republican-dominated areas of the country where recent polls have put Clinton ahead with less than a month before the Nov. 5 vote.

The travel came as Dole aides said internal polls found that their nominee was beginning to narrow the gap and even move ahead in some usually Republican states where he had been behind. But separate Newsweek and CNN/USA Today-Gallup surveys released Saturday put the national polling gap at a broad 23 points.

Speaking from courthouse steps, in the heart of Kentucky's tobacco county, Dole told cheering supporters: "I think my head is screwed on right. I think I've got a lot of common sense."

"And we're going to win. I forget to tell you that." He continued his criticism of the Democrats over political contributions from foreign business interests. Citing news accounts of the questionable contributions, Dole drew laughter and cheers when he said: "We've finally got foreign aid coming in America."

"It's all going to the Democratic National Committee, India?" Dole asked. "What nation will be next to line up to give financial aid to this administration?"

"Bob Dole foreign aid to this administration," Dole said. "They're going to need it to pay moving expenses come Nov. 5."

On Friday, a top Democratic Party fund-raiser was reinstated following days of attacks by Dole and other Republicans for what they say were improper and possibly illegal contributions.

The fund-raiser, John Huang, has raised an estimated $4 million from the millions for the Democrats from Asian-Americans this year and organized a controversial fund-raiser at a Buddhist temple in California in April.

The party on Friday agreed to compensate the temple for expenses associated with the fund-raiser, which was attended by Vice President Al Gore. Dole, a spokesman, Nelson Warfield, said of Huang's re-signment: "This half-step is seeming more like an admission of wrongdoing."

Federal rules designed to keep foreigners from influencing America's political system contain significant exceptions. Foreigners who are legal U.S. residents are allowed to make campaign donations, as are U.S. subsidiaries of foreign companies if the money was earned in the U.S.

Democrats have countered by using instances in which Dole fund-raisers have been implicated in questionable money-raising schemes. "Bob Dole should take time to concentrate on the ethical problems of his own campaign," Clinton campaign spokesman Joe Lockhart said on Saturday.

Asked if he thought he was benefiting politically from the attacks, Dole told reporters: "They're not attacks. They're about the public trust."

Still, Saturday's Newsweek survey found that 48 percent of those surveyed thought Clinton had the better personal character to be president, compared to 36 percent for Dole and 10 percent who said it made no difference.

Dole campaign manager Scott Reed said "this strategy is starting to hurt Clinton." He said that new independent polls have shown Clinton ahead, New Mexico and Colorado, where polls suggested Dole has claimed the lead. Dole vised both states on Friday.

Perot advisors say speeches to students part of long-term strategy

During a recent speech at Yale Perot criticized Clinton and Dole for not addressing the national debt

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Speeches to church pulpits at Yale University last Friday, presidential candidate Ross Perot looked to students to revitalize his stumbling campaign and in the long term, to replace the nation's two-party system.

"This is our country. It is in your hands. We can make it anything you want it to be, but the thing you can't be is cynical, disillusioned or turned off," Perot told about 700 students at Battell Chapel.

"You have to have that same spirit the pioneers had."

Perot's concentration on the youth vote in a series of campaigns stops this month marks an evolution of campaign strategy, his advisors acknowledged.

Realizing that his chances of winning the presidency are becoming more and more remote as the election draws near, Perot is seeking to sow the seeds of future support for a viable third party in the United States, said press secretary Sharon Holman.

"That's our goal. If we get 25 percent of the vote in the election, in the year 2000, we're entitled to full funding," Holman said. "His appeal is geared toward the next generation."

Welfare reform to challenge public education system

TOPFEK, Kans. (AP) — Department of Education officials are wondering how the state can train a large number of welfare recipients for the workforce.

That is because the federal welfare reform measure is putting people back to work.

Deputy Education Commissioner Dale Dennis told legislative panel Oct. 17 the federal reform measure will be a challenge to high schools and vocational schools.

“Ideally, they should have 70 percent of a student’s education in the classroom and 30 percent out in the workplace,” Dennis said.

“The emphasis of the new welfare law is back to work,” Dennis said. Schools will be required to prepare students adequately for work, in part through vocational and school-to-work programs.

Schools also will need to be involved in economic development efforts to make sure adequate opportunities are available for students to prepare for and gain employment,” he said.

With one year, the state must have 25 percent of its Temporary Assistance to Needy Families (TANF) recipients engaged in some kind of “work activity” under the reform measure. That percentage increases by 5 points each year until it reaches 50 percent in the year 2002.

“The bill allows the state to count vocational education training as an allowable work activity,” Dennis said, although such training cannot be called work for more than 12 months.

“People are going to go back to work for training because they’ve seen the advantages of it,” Dennis said.

The welfare reform bill could end up requiring the state to provide expanded child care services and early childhood education programs, Dennis said, adding that a majority of schools do not provide on-site day care.

Economists predict Clinton re-election after strong economic showing

Here are the answers of the major presidential candidates to the question: “Which steps can Washington take to create well-paying jobs over the next four years?”

Bill Clinton: “I will balance the budget while providing targeted tax cuts for education, child-caring and home-buying. I will continue to insist on fair trade policies that open foreign markets to American goods. And, most important, I will continue to invest in the American people. We know that each year of education beyond high school increases wages by between 6 and 12 percent a year. That is why I want to make two years of college universal.”

Bob Dole: “Washington can get the tax collectors out of our pockets and the regulators off our backs so the economy can grow faster and create more good jobs. Our plan has six key points: 1. A reduced balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution. 2. Balance the federal budget by the year 2002. 3. Cut taxes across the board and replace the current tax code. 4. End the IRS as we know it. 5. Reform education and job training and, 6. Cut government regulation and reform our civil courts. The extra bonus is that it does not require cuts in overall government spending from current levels.”

Ross Perot: “Washington has an adversarial relationship with business. We must change it to a supportive relationship. The fastest way to stimulate growth in jobs is to create an environment where small businesses can grow and prosper. Today, they are burdened with unnecessary government regulations and they do not have access to credit on equal terms. We must change the tax laws to give investors incentives to invest in small businesses, and change the banking regulations to allow banks to loan them money. In addition, we need to have an environment that encourages businesses to create jobs in the U.S.A. not move jobs overseas.”

Gambier Folk Festival: 25 Years

By David Shargel
Diversions Editor

Joe Wilson, the Executive Director of the National Council for the Traditional Arts, once said of the Gambier Folk Festival, "I submit that if folk festivals were animals, Gambier would be neither a lion, thresher, nor eagle. It would be a garden rabbit, trying out lettuce and beans, passing in the herb garden, paying close attention to new delicatessens from Asia, Africa, Mexico, the Caribbean, and South seas, not hyperactive, but always moving, nearly impossible to catch and hold, a happy rabbit with a good nose."

Now celebrating its 25th anniversary, the festival and its creators are still on the run and are still sniffing out some of the best and brightest performers in the country with a nose that has clearly not left its sense of smell! This year, the rabbit has come across five nationally-acclaimed American performers.

As always, the festival will open with a concert on Friday night in Rossie Hall, this year featuring the Howard Armstrong All-Stars and AsaDife. On Saturday night, the festival presents two concerts featuring the Armstrongs and the Del McCoury Band, after which fiddle player Kenny Stidie and Friends will lead a square dance in Lower Dempsey beginning at 10:30 p.m. Both concerts begin at 8 p.m.

On Saturday, there will be four music workshops in Gamb Commons including "The Missouri Barn Dance" by the Missouri All-Stars at 1 p.m.; "Blues, Pop, and Swing" by the Armstrongs at 2 p.m.; "Caribbean Carnival" by AsaDife at 3 p.m.; and "Bluegrass Breakdown" by the Del McCoury Band at 4 p.m. The festival will close with a craft demonstration and sale in Gamb Commons on Sunday from noon to 4 p.m.

Admission to all daytime events is free, as is the Friday evening square dance. Admission to evening concerts is $5 at the door, and is free to Kenyon students and children under 12. AsaDife, an Afro-Dominican percussion ensemble, was founded in New York City in 1991, by a group of musicians from the Dominican Republic. Since that time, they have struggled to preserve the musical traditions of their homeland.

Professor of Sociology and co-founder of the festival Howard Sacks said, "We're really excited about AsaDife, I think they're going to be extraordinarily high energy. They bring a Caribbean influence, which is something that we haven't brought to the Gambier Folk Festival before."

Following in the tradition of the Caribbean carnival parade, AsaDife will lead the audience after the concert from Rossie Hall to the square dance in Lower Dempsey in a true carnival format. The Missouri All-Stars bring Gambier the dance traditions of Missouri, which differ slightly from those of the Ohio area. The group features pianist Pat Plunkett and fiddlers Bob Holt and Charlie Walden, who have been key figures in maintaining the traditions of Missouri fiddling.

"It was amazed by the fiddlers, by how precisely and fast they played and how the dancers moved so incredibly fast and with such amazing precision," said Sacks. "It's one of those things you have to see to believe."

The concert will be joined by the Douglas County Dancers and led by caller Edna Davis.

Louie Blue brings to light Armstrong

By Bruce Wallace
Music Critic

For any art to be considered "folk" art must, among other things, reflect the time in which it originated; it necessarily speaks the social and cultural influences in which it was formed.

This is particularly true of American folk art, which arises from a uniquely varied collection of human histories and experiences. The true test of folk art is its ability to reflect these vastly diverse social strata in a common medium and in a way that is honest and vital.

The music of Howard Armstrong's recent album "Louie Blue" represents an unusually large amount of disjointed influences, but it's clear that Armstrong manages, with the skill and ease of a true master, to mold into a sound that is as relevant today as it was when the songs originated.

There is no doubt that Armstrong, master of more than twenty instruments, comes about his somewhat eclectic roots honestly.

Growing up in southern coal-mining and iron-smelting towns in the 1920s and 30s, he was in constant contact with immigrant working-class families, both as a child and later touring as a musician. He learned people's stories, histories and music along with becoming fluent in languages ranging from "tennessee Spanish" to "cotton field Polish."

Playing in string bands throughout the south, Armstrong developed a catalog of songs ranging from blues to country, from vaudeville to popular, a trait that was necessary in order for a musician to survive.

Although Armstrong struggled through relative obscurity for much of his career, taking up odd jobs and at various times retiring from public performance, he remained true to his craft.

In recent years, due in large part to a 1985 documentary film also titled "Louie Blue," Howard Armstrong's album "Louie Blue" has brought back into the spotlight the fascinating career of the versatile American folk musician.
Armstrong is more than a musician. He is one of the most memorable characters I have ever met in my life. He is almost 90 years old, he speaks nine different languages, including Mandarin Chinese," Sacks said. "He is also a story-teller extraordinary, so to hear him perform is to hear him perform his stories as much as anything else."

The Del McCoury Band
Del McCoury has been performing bluegrass music for over 40 years and played for many years with the originator of the genre, Bill Monroe, who recently passed away. McCoury has been titled the International Bluegrass Music Association’s Male Vocalist of the Year three times and has released numerous recordings.

Sacks said of McCoury, "It's people like Del who are really the direct connection back to the tradition. He is one of the carriers of traditional bluegrass music."

Kenny Siddle, a frequent performer at the Gambier Folk Festival and a native of central Ohio, is a master fiddler who, among his many accomplishments, has received a National Heritage Award. Siddle, who will lead the square dance, is joined by Ohio state-champion fiddler Adam Jackson, guitarist Troy Herdman and Frank Hoy on bass. Lynn Frederick, who specializes in Eastern-style café, will be calling the dance.

The craft demonstration and sale on Sunday will feature a diverse range of crafts including Amish art, gunsmithing, Hmong needlework, instrument making, Native American painting, quilting, and rug making.

This year we have some new folks coming, including an African drum maker, so there's a chance to reacquaint yourself with older traditions that have been here, but we also try to have some new folks as well," said Sacks. "As a celebration, the festival 25th anniversary, the Otha Art Gallery will be presenting 'The Work at Hand: Ohio Craft Traditions from the Gambier Folk Festival.'"

This exhibit, which will run through Nov. 12, will feature exhibits and crafts including American country furniture, Amish crafts, Hmong embroidery, mandolins, Native American paintings, origami and rugs.

After 25 years the Gambier Folk Festival is still going strong, and each year its sponsor, The Gambier Folklore Society, brings in Gambier top-notch performers who never cease to impress audiences. "It's worth noting that there are very few festivals in American traditional arts that are older than this," said Sacks. "There is the National Festival, and the Smithsonian, and then there's us, which makes this little festival here in Gambier pretty rare."

The Kenyon College Dramatic Club will present Molieré's comedy "The Learned Ladies" on Friday and Saturday, as well as on Nov. 1 and Nov. 2 at 8 p.m. in the Bolton Theater. Written in the 17th century, "The Learned Ladies" depicts French society in the wake of the new scholarship open to women. As staged by production stage manager Melanie Liechtemair '98, the play poses fun at people "too educated for their own good."

Philomante, the overbearing mother of young Henriette, is out to teach her this learning opportunity. Despite Henriette's love for Clistandre, Philomante wants her daughter married to M. Turgot, who is in Philomante's eyes at the height of wit and accomplishments.

This theme of young lovers struggling to overcome conventions of their parents which keeps them apart is a favorite of Moliere's, and remains true for today's audiences.

IF YOU GO

What: "The Learned Ladies"

When: Friday, Saturday, Nov. 1 and 2, 8 p.m.

Where: Bolton Theater

The play, directed by Professor of Drama Thomas S. Turgot, was agreed upon by drama students and faculty during the process of planning KCDC's 1996-97 season.

"The suggestion came from me, largely for personal reasons—I did play this as an undergraduate. I felt curious about it. I wanted to try it," said Turgot. "I've enjoyed the revivish very much."

In rehearsal since Sept. 4, the play features a very talented cast, said Liechtemair. Cast members include Anne-Marie Healy '97 who will play Philomante; Genevieve E. Zwig '97 will play Henriette; Matthew L. Robinson '00 will star as Clistandre; and Samuel Halgren '99 will play Trissotin.

"Get a bunch of imaginative actors together with an intriguing text and start rehearsing; unique and particular perspectives inevitably arise," remarked Turgot about this production. "That's the fun of it."

Liechtemair wholeheartedly agreed, stating that she has seen the play in pictures many times, yet still finds herself laughing at the same spots. "There's a lot of talent in this show," Liechtemair said. "It's great, it's hilarious!"

Costumes for "The Learned Ladies" were designed by Visiting Professor of Drama Janice Fleming and Design Assistant Jennette Pemo '97.

The rich, elegant, historically accurate apparel is based upon Broun's extensive research, and realized by costumer Deborah K. Clark and her assistants and volunteers.

The set and lights were designed by Associate Professor of Drama Andrew Bennett and constructed by Technical Director Andy Johns and his assistants. Many of the crew for "The Learned Ladies" are underclassmen who are learning the skills needed to run a performance, which they turn in paid work as well.

"This is an educational theater," said Liechtemair. "That's the point, I guess."

"To see how a play has developed in rehearsal—come and see play;" added Turgot. "There's the development right before your eyes—the result of the exploring we have all done together as we were rehearsing."

Tickets are $5 for general admission; $2.50 for each person in groups of 10 or more that make reservations; $2 for those over age sixty-five, non-Kenyon students, and children under twelve years of age; and $1 for Kenyon students. The Bolton box office will be open from 1-5 p.m. Monday through Saturday until Nov. 2, or call 627-5556 for admission information.

Dancers Cooperative, Kenyon's student-run dance troupe, will give their first performances of the year on Sunday at 8 p.m. in Gund Commons. Admission is free, but donations are welcome.

Sunday's concert will feature approximately 30 student dancers and will showcase a variety of dance techniques, but will mainly focus on modern dance performed to popular music.

"We're really excited about this concert," said Dancers Cooperative member Melanie Nance '97. According to Nance:

What: Dancers Cooperative performance

When: Sunday, 8 p.m.

Where: Gund Commons

Dancers Cooperative is interested in collaborating with other art forms. This idea will be incorporated into Sunday's performance with sets consisting of student art murals and music by Kenyon's a capella groups.

Dancers is a student-run organization designed to promote and facilitate student interest in dance.

"As an alternative or supplement to Kenyon's dance department, Dancers was founded last year by Meda McNeal '97. The group provides Kenyon students with different dance workshops throughout the year. Approximately two workshops are offered per month, including an Afro-Cuban workshop which will be offered this Friday. Dancers gives one to two concerts per semester.

Dancers are always looking for more student involvement, said Nance, who described it as a "very inclusive" group that welcomes interests in different art forms.

Jakob Dylan of the Wallflowers has come a long way. His band's singularly unemphatic self-titled debut showed him following in the grandly pointed tradition of Julian Lennon, capturing the superficial elements of his famous father's song-writing approach while remaining unable to grasp the impetus behind him.

But with Bringing Down the Horse, he and the rest of the Wallflowers are writing and playing with a tightness and confidence that completely eluded them on their previous effort.

Songs like "One Headlight," "Eh, Adie Heartache" and "Invisible City" showcase that newfound conviction with relaxed yet driving musicianship and a sense of verbal timing and delivery that allows the lyrics, in the spirit of the elder Dylan, to signify far more than they otherwise would.

Few figures in popular music cast as long a shadow as Bob Dylan, and even if Jakob is still standing in it, at least his own figures has finally become visible through the darkness.
Kenyon students lend their help to Habitat for Humanity

By Ben Vorre
Senior Staff Writer

8:50 a.m. is doubtfully early for a Kenyon student, especially on a Monday morning. But three students are bundled inside the bookstore entranceway, watching the drizzle and finishing off bagels and coffee.

A car pulls up and Joyce Klein bends inside, notebook in hand. Klein, one of 15 members of the Habitat for Humanity (Habitat) board in Knox County, jogs down the students’ names; they are this morning’s volunteers. She waits a few minutes for late arrivals, but when the bell strikes nine, the group piles into the car where Klein’s husband, patiently waits to drive the crew to Apple Valley, a local housing development.

Today, these students are going to help with a lengthy project—building the Habitat house. Habitat, a non-profit, world-wide volunteer organization, builds houses each year for underprivileged people. Frequently builds one a year in Knox County.

On the roof, Klein briefs the students about the site where they will be working. After providing some background about both Habitat and the family whose house Habitat is-building, she asks the students if they have had any previous experiences with Habitat. Aside from this, the rest of the ride is silent; there is plenty of work ahead on which to concentrate.

Habitat has operated in Knox County for seven years and Klein has been involved for six. Kenyon students have been involved on a large scale since 1994, when Klein began to the Activities Mail and encouraging them to sign up.

Klein said, "I just knew we didn’t have enough volunteers. We go to the churches for volunteers and they are good, but they only come out once. There’s a big pool of students, and you’re always likely to turn up somebody to come and help.”

This year roughly 250 students signed up to volunteer, up from last year’s count of about 75. “The numbers is so big that had to break them up into three groups,” Klein said.

This year’s group has more experience with Habitat from other areas than previous groups. Klein said, “I’m amazed at how many of the 250 students who have signed up have been involved in Habitat before they come here. It really is a growing interest to people.”

About 20 other volunteers are busy performing tasks at the site when the Kenyon group arrives. Dave Gore, president of the Habitat board in Knox County, is the main coordinator. A middle-aged family man, he directs volunteers toward various tasks while keeping his missionary-like children in line. For Gore, this is another typical Saturday.

“Every Saturday starts about 7:30 a.m. I usually pick up materials, bring them out, work out here until three or four o’clock,” he said. “I’ve been doing this for 4 1/2 years. This is my Saturday, this is how I spend it.”

The Kenyon volunteers will stay until soon after lunch ends, but in that time they accomplish much: two students install several pieces of drywall, and another is busy painting walls. Several volunteers with construction experience assist the students when help is needed. Many of the tools used are donations from local businesses. The tasks are small and simple alone, but together they will eventually form a house.

Habitat is based on the simple premise of providing homes for families in need, but the process of building a house for a family is quite extensive. Habitat’s emphasis is for the family to lay as integral a part in building its own house as possible.

An interested family fills out an extensive application, and if it fits certain criteria then the family does some initial volunteering. Once its application is accepted, the family wills more volunteer hours with interviews. At this point, if the family is still both interested in and capable of building a house, it must distribute 500 volunteer hours with other families’ houses and the house which it will soon inhabit.

“I get a real satisfaction out of people who really want to have their own home finally getting it under the most difficult circumstances,” Klein said.

She added, “I think it’s possible to do something about a problem. All of us are concerned about all the problems, but you can’t do a whole lot about Bosnia, and you can’t do a whole lot about the inner city of Cleveland, but this is a specific problem with a specific family, and you do get a real satisfaction out of having this work out.”

The Apple Valley crew forms a circle on what will become the living room floor. Sitting on top of empty plaster buckets and eating lunch, people are talking, joking, and telling stories while some of the volunteers’ children giggle and make faces at one another. For Gore, this is lunch every Saturday.

Gore, who has been involved with Habitat for almost five years, says, “I like Habitat for Humanity, I like what it stands for, what its goals are . . . I get a sense of accomplishment when I assist someone else in helping them get a break.”

As lunch ends and work resumes, he adds, “(The families) come out of bad living environments into good living environments . . . it’s wonderful to see their lives change.”

Klein has many stories from her Habitat experience. She laughs as she talks about elderly man who nearly hit her with wooden boards. She chuckles as she recalls a young woman who “invited that there were witches and black magic at Kenyon.” She once worked with a legally blind man.

“Working with him is incredible because he just knows where everything is,” she said. “He can hammer, he can saw, he can do anything that a sighted person can do, and besides that he’s very talented as construction.”

Klein stressed the uniqueness with which one can get involved with Habitat.

“It’s so simple. It really is. You just turn up at a sight and work for a few hours, and feel like you’ve accomplished something,” she said.

Canadian poet named Kenyon's new writer-in-residence

Award-winner Beth Cuthand slated to be on campus until late November

Kenyon College is hosting writer-in-residence Beth Cuthand, a Canadian poet, until the end of November.

Cuthand's stay here was made possible by the International Program of the Arts Endowment Funded by the National Endowment for the Arts and Kenyon's Hewlett-Mellon Presidential Discretionary Fund. Her visit is part of a North American Cultural exchange that involves artists from the United States, Canada, and Mexico.

A member of the Cree Nation, Cuthand has been writing since she was 10. "I learned Cree from my grandmother," she said. Cuthand earned her BA from the University of Saskatchewan, and her masters in creative writing from the University of Arizona. She was a journalist for 16 years, wrote short stories in the 1970s (several of which were published), and has worked on a novel, but poetry is her main occupation.

"I'm just learning to write prose," Cuthand describes her work as minimalist.

She said, "I have a strong narrative line that runs through my poems which makes them not very obscure symbols." She added that much of her work's beauty rests in the language. "My poems have been translated into English, Spanish, and she said Cree to English," she said. Cuthand also said she "concentrates on performance, which is not a

Note political analyst Bode slated to visit Kenyon Wednesday

Veteran journalist and political observer Ken Bode, who has covered presidential campaigns for more than 20 years, will share his views on various aspects of presidential campaigns at Kenyon on Wednesday, October 30.

He talks, "Campaign '96: The Good, The Bad, The Ugly," will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Rose Hall. A reception will follow in the Rose Hall Lounge. Both events are free and open to the public.

Bode was a senior correspondent at WETA in Washington, D.C. and moderator of "Washington Week" in Review, the longest-running news program on PBS. He serves as an director of the program of Western University's Congressional Hearings and other news events.

In 1995, PBS aired Bode's "The Challengers '96: A Washington Week in Review Special Series," which profiled the major Republican presidential candidates. Since then, he has been closely monitoring the presidential campaign, offering observations and insights to viewers along the way.

Bode covered the 1992 presidential election as a correspondent and analyst for CNN. As part of CNN's political series "Democracy in America," he reported and wrote two award-winning documentaries: "Bill Clinton of Arkansas," winner of the National Academy of Cable Programming's CableACE Award, and the Emmy Award-winning The Public Mind of George Bush.

Bode also moderated the 1992 presidential primary debate in South Dakota and served as a panelist for the debate in New Hampshire.

From 1979 to 1989, Bode was a national political correspondent for NBC News, covering the presidential campaigns of 1980, 1984, and 1988. Before that, he served as political editor at the New Republic for four years, writing articles and editorials and covering the 1976 presidential campaign and the administration of President Jimmy Carter.

Bode is currently the John Hughes Professor of Politics and the Media at Dartmouth University. He previously taught at Michigan State University.

His visit to Kenyon is sponsored by the College's Faculty Lectureship Committee.

soon stuck his hands into the running of the organization and has never taken them out.” When George came in the clubhouse, you shook and shivered,” Niekro recalled.

The Yanks faded in the ‘80s, and Steenbrenner wasn’t heard from much. They’re now truck with a vengeance, led by former Braves manager Joe Torre.

And Steenbrenner is still stealing the spotlight from his players. During the playoffs, he reportedly got into a shouting match with Reggie Jackson, now a paid adviser to the team. Steenbrenner also was in the news when he refused to allow the Yankees’ wives to travel with their husbands on a charter flight to Texas.

Baseball hopes World Series will rekindle ratings

NEW YORK (AP) - Major league baseball got a dream match-up for the World Series and its promoters are hoping the games will be audience-pleasers that rekindle advertisers’ enthusiasm for the sport. Already, virtually all television commercial time has been sold on Fox for the first four games of the best-of-seven series between the storied New York Yankees and defending champion Atlanta Braves.

The Braves, who have won three of the last four World Series, have built a following in recent years because their games were televised nationally on cable. And the Yankees, making their first series appearance in 15 years, bring with them the nation’s largest television market.

“This is the best possible matchup they could get,” said Steve Grubbs, who oversees national television commercial buying for the advertising agency BBDO. “It would be disappointing if this series didn’t produce ratings above a year ago.”

RECORD BREAKERS

Lindsay Buchanan

Buchanan broke the record for career points scored when she scored three goals in the 10-0 victory over Earlham. Buchanan now has 69 goals, eclipsing the previous record of 64 points shared by Anne Himmennight ’81 and Danni Davis ’89.

Derrick Johnson

Johnson became the Lords all-time leading scorer with 1345 career yards, surpassing Joe Sazama’s mark of 1,941.

Johnson set the record in the 14-2 victory over Case when he gained 15 yards.

Ladies beat Denison, continue streak

Whether it was injuries or inexperience that plagued the Kenyon volleyball team earlier this season, those problems have seemingly vanished. After winning their last five matches, the talented team’s confidence looks to be on the rise.

The streak, which has improved the team’s record to 13-10, began at Case Western Reserve on Saturday, Oct. 12 where Kenyon handily knocked off the 7th-ranked Spartans. Wooster, Kenyon’s next victim, found themselves helpless against the opposition’s aggressive play. Maggie Becker ’00 helped the team to a four-game victory (15-2, 11-15, 15-6, 15-10) with her 11 kills, while Valerie Thimmes ’97 followed closely with nine.

Kenyon next played at Oberlin in a tri-match with Earlham College. Kenyon gave the hapless Earlham team a solid spanking, defeating the Hustling Quakers 15-2, 15-2, 15-3. Kenyon then played a much-improved Oberlin team, but lost both matches primarily due to the lack of posting of them in three games (15-9, 15-12, 15-9).

Last night the Ladies put away the Division Big Red in four games to continue their streak.

MEN’S/WOMEN’S CROSS COUNTRY

Lords and Ladies ready for conference meet

Both the men’s and women’s cross country teams are anticipating an excellent finish at this weekend’s conference meet at Denison. The final tune-up for conference was held two weeks ago at the All-Ohio Invitational. Teams from schools throughout Ohio, including Division I, II, and III were present. The men’s team finished 17th in Div. III out of 17 teams while the women’s team finished third. The women’s race was highlighted by a first-place Div. III finish by co-captain Keri Schulte ’00.

Kenyon’s Ladies went into the All-Ohio ranked 12th in the country among Div. III schools—the highest Kenyon had ever been ranked. This race was incredibly close, but Kenyon finished third among Div. III, losing to Baldwin Wallace by three points. Wooster surprised the Ladies and finished one point ahead of Kenyon, taking second.

This was a disappointing finish for the Ladies, as they had been ranked above Baldwin Wallace and Wooster before the race. Co-Captain Gereen Baker ’97 described the meet as an off week. “We had a decent day while they had an outstanding day,” Baker said. “We have much more talent than we showed, and I have no doubt we can beat them.”

Three of Kenyon’s runners were given All-Ohio honors. Baker, who finished fourth out of Div. III, and 33rd overall, was named to the first team. Schulte, who assumed first team for finishing first out of Div. II and 20th overall. First-year runner Geneva Lynn received honorable mention, finishing 22nd in Div. III.

Lynn said, “I’ve surprised myself. I hope I can keep it up.”

“The Lady’s finish was the highest Kenyon finish in recent history. Kenyon also beat Denison and Oberlin for the first time this season. Captain Dan Deming ’98 said, “It was a spectacular finish.”

Denning also thinks Kenyon has a shot at beating Wooster and All-Ohio.

“Everybody’s healthy, which was imperative if we were going to be a force,” Denning said.

MEN’S/WOMEN’S RUGBY

Ladies trounce Denison, Lords rest up

After a 42-0 drubbing of arch-rival Denison by the Ladies and a third straight week of rest for the Lords, the rugger are looking forward to their matches against the women of Denison and the men of Northern Kentucky University this coming weekend.

The Kenyon Lady ruggers continued their domination this past weekend, raising their unbeaten record to 5-0 and once again showing Denison who had the upper hand in their rivalry. In their previous match-up, while only a scruminate, the Ladies ignored the hostile Big Red fans and came away with a decisive 17-0 victory. With this victory under their belt and a 4-0 record returning home, the Ladies were confident.

Back on home turf, the Ladies proved their mettle, dominating scrum after scrum and keeping Denison on their heels all game long. As in previous weeks, co-captains Katie Hoskey ’97 and Toni Tate ’97 blazed the way for the ruggers. However, the victory came at great cost to the ruggers. Advisor Twin ’80 broke her classical going for a jump ball and Hosey separated her shoulder and will miss the next three weeks.

The Ladies will attempt to raise their unbeaten record to 6-0 against when they take on the Lords tomorrow weekend. The men, coming off three weeks of rest, will look to raise their record to 3-2 against Northern Kentucky on the rugby fields at 1 p.m.
Kenyon Ultimate Frisbee Society stresses relaxed atmosphere, sportsmanship

By Gwendolyn Bertha Staff Writer

"People are there just to have a good time," Heath Doherty '98 said of the Kenyon Ultimate Frisbee Society (KUS). This group, comprised of both male and female students and even faculty and staff, is open to anyone with an interest in just tossing the frisbee around.

KUS is a relatively new club dedicated to the sport of ultimate frisbee. The basic object of ultimate frisbee is to allow the Frisbee to pass from teammate to teammate in the opposing team's end zone. Since running or walking with the disc is prohibited, the disc must make it into the end zone by passing it down the field.

Ultimate frisbee is also a no-contact sport. Running into, hitting, or tackling someone else is considered a foul, which is called by the person who makes it.

"The best thing about KUS is the relaxed atmosphere," said Ben Fowler '98, the KUS coordinator. "Any person of any skill level welcome to play without the pressure associated with most organized sports.

This relaxed atmosphere is again noted at tournaments. Anyone can go and play as much or as little as they wish, regardless of skill level.

KUS participated in its first tournament this year two weekends ago and went 0-3. Last year the group played in two tournaments but failed to win a single contest in either showing.

Fowler emphasized the sportsmanship of the game. "Aherence to the 'Spirit of the Game' is supposed to keep people from cheating, and it's doing a fairly good job!"

Members of the club play for different reasons.

"Part of the reason I like frisbee so much is the way the disc hangs in the air," said Gary Mitchell '99. "A frisbee is one of the only things that you can miss the first time around and still have enough time to catch it before it hits the ground. There aren't too many things in life where you get second chances.

Doherty added, "It's great ext... and at the same time it's really laid back sport."

KUS practices every day at 4 p.m. on Peace Lawn. All interested individuals are welcome to come and play.

Yankees have tradition, but Braves may have a destiny

By Fred Bierman and MacAdam Gllan Staff Columnists

If there was any doubt in anyone's mind that the Braves are the best team in baseball, that doubt has been put to rest in the South Bronx. Atlanta has four pitchers that could be number one starters for any team in baseball: Tom Glavine, Greg Maddux, John Scimito, and Denny Neagle. Combine that with the veteran leadership of Fred "Crane Dog" McGriff and Terry "Bad Dog" Pendleton, young stars like the Jones' Chipper "I don't need no stinking nickname" and Andrew "You, with A, L" and Javy "I'll throw you and your friends out" Lopez, and you've got a dynasty in progress.

The Braves have come into New York and stolen the Yankees thunder by winning the first two games. It seems everyone has been talking about the liminal history of the Bronx Bombers, while neglecting what could be history in the making. It should not come as a surprise to those who watched the games so far that the Yankees have their work cut out for them.

Moving on to college football: It becomes more evident each week that fans of the college game are witnessing a changing of the guard. The dominant teams of the 80's are being knocked off by the former laughing stocks of Division I football. Nebraska gets shut out by Arizona State? Miami loses two in a row at home, the second to East Carolina by 25 points?! (Mack is blind with fury.) Notre Dame gets knocked off by the Air Force Academy?! (Mac finds some comfort.) Michigan loses at the "Big House" to Northwestern? (Andrew: "It's true, it's the worst game." Iowa embarrasses Penn State and once proud Joe Paterno?! (Feintech dances the Den Menos Shuffle as Mather furnace.) The only constant is Florida State and Bobby Bowden, who always seem to make sure the Seminoles' players are driving only the finest of automobiles.

Don't get us wrong, we're not bitter. Upsets are what make college football so exciting to watch, but there are consequences to such an equality of talent—most importantly, it is becoming increasingly difficult to find a team, or even just two, clear cut national title contenders.

The amount of parity in college football has made a tournament or playoff format to decide the national champion inevitable. How can Miami be ranked higher than Eastern Carolina? How can Iowa be ranked behind Penn State? How can Michigan be ranked ahead of Northwestern? How games are adequate for advertising, not for determining a national champion. Once more, so two teams will finish the year clearly dominantly, and it's ridiculous that one week of games will decide who is the "best" in the country.

Shout Oster Greg Maddux, who shut the Yankees out at home on Tuesday night. The best the Yankee must cower was numerous slow ground balls back to Maddux. We could count the number of balls the Yankees hit out of the infield on my hands. (Look everybody, Ford loves the Yankees, but how can you not love the pitching display Maddux put on?...) The Olivers, who pocket 50,000 a year as the Astronauts' pay (and, by 1993, and, by 1994, and proceeded to beat the Steelers 23-13... The 49ers who came back from 21-0 to beat the Bears 24-21, and probably cost Dave Shula his job ... Florida Panthers Unfeedled? We thought we had the Hurricanes were supposed to be underfed. Thanks to phenomenal goalstending by John "Breeze" Vashinski brook (one of the few players Mac and Fred BOTT1 give love to) and the defensive play by fat (those) 50% Sowakowski, the Panthers are looking primed to make another run at the cup ... D.C. United the first ever Major League Soccer champions. Good luck in the years to come for this young and exciting new league ... Air Force (You know that was coming. We'll still be lamenting out the Sun Devils if we could.) Thanks to an overtime fumble by Ron Powlas and a last-minute field goal, the Air Force is flying high after knocking off the Irish ... The Lords We think the Kenyon football team deserves a little love. They came back to beat Division 35-34 in truly thrilling fashion. With another win this week, against Todd Zinklinski '98 who always seems to be involved on every defensive tackle.

Two final notes: What do Kenny G and The Lox have in common? At least we can think of two people who enjoy listening to either of them, they both make more money with their voices than they should be legal. Another note on Fox's baseball coverage: The sound effects (whooshing noises as the swings change) have got to go. Baseball does not need it. The split screen on Tuesday night showing Cathy Mattison's reaction to her husband's every move on the mound was enough to make us throw things at the television. Everyone heard her say "Oh my god!" as her husband made a move to first. You said it. Cathy. Mac would also like to add that the head coach of the Columbia Boilermakers should be turned and feathered.

Sandy Diego 24, Seattle 14 The Chargers minus running back Ronnie Brown gets a punch in with a punch-like defensive line and a solid offensive line. And a solid defensive line. And a solid defense. San Francisco 20, Houston 19 The Oilers are winning but no one is watching since they will move to Nashville in 1998. The Nizers will get a tough game in the Armageddon.

Green Bay 31, Tampa Bay 14 Semiannual "Bay of Pigs" matchup features the hopeless Bears playing on the non-fermists turned of Leermo Field which gives them more of a chance since they've never won a game when the temperature was below 32 degrees at game time.

New England 27, Buffalo 22 Everyone but the Jets (surprise!) are in contention in the AFC East, but the Pats will further confuse the situation by defeating the Bills. Minnesota 22, Chicago 17 The Bears have been playing an underdog's heaven while the Vikings have been on weak position.

Ladies soccer out of contention for playoffs, Lords in position to make a run for the title

Ladies top Denison 1-0 to halt skid

By Sarah Booth
Senior Staff Writer

The women’s soccer team suffered two defeats before topping Denison 1-0 last night and looks forward to challenging Wittenberg on Saturday. Their current overall record is 8-6-1 and their North Coast Athletic Conference record is 3-3-0.

The Ladies battled against the top-ranked team in the region, Wilmington University, on Saturday, Oct. 12, breaking 2-1 “Saturday was a great game,” said tri-captain Emily Donovan ’99, “Although the end result was not what we wanted, we played hard and didn’t give in.”

Schultz DeStephens ’99 scored the first goal of the game assisted by Amy Danner ’98 a few minutes into the second half.

Kanyakielhi of Wilmington’s defense until the last 20 minutes of the game when Wilmington scored both of their goals.

Wilmington outshot Kenyon 27 to 4, but it was the best game Catie Getches ’98 had ever seen the team play.

“The defense was unreal and the effort incomparable,” said Getches.

Tri-captain Giselle Milord ’98 was busy in net and managed to save 13 shots that were fired at her.

Getches also said, “Everyone left their hearts on the field when it was over. Now the team knows that we can beat any team we play as long as we have our heads and hearts in the game.”

Dannor said, “It hadn’t been playing very well as a team before the Wilmington game. The two previous games we didn’t come prepared to play at all, and the scores reflected that. We gave the game everything we had. Every player left everything they had on the field. Unfortunately we couldn’t come out on top.”

Kenyon lost to Ohio Wesleyan University 5-1 last Wednesday, Oct. 16. Tri-captain Laurie Danner ’98 controlled the offensive line with seven shots while Donovan had six shots. Donovan scored Kenyon’s only goal.

Milord said, “We should have beaten them. Should have didn’t count though, and we know that. We just have to take responsibility for our play now. Postseason play is out of the picture now, so now we just have to play to win for ourselves. That is what the reason should have been all along the way. It’s just that now, that is all we have left.”

Amy Danner scored Kenyon’s only goal in their contest with Denison with 25 seconds remaining in the first half. She was assisted by her sister, Laurie. It was Donovan’s final home performance, and she was presented with a Kenyon blanket at halftime. “She’s one of our hardest workers and her teammates respect her and listen to her,” said coach Paul Wardlow. “Emily has been one of the best players Kenyon has ever had.”

Emily Donovan ’97 moves past an OWI defender. The Ladies lost 3-1.

The Lords soccer team still has its eyes on the prize and continues to mount a successful ’96 season. The Lords are 2-1 in their last three matches and have moved to 11th in the nation. Along with them is the impressive ranking the Lords still remain undefeated in the NCAC, tied for first place with Ohio Wesleyan with two conference games remaining.

The Lords traveled to Bethany Colleges on Saturday, October 12. In the last three years the Lords have handed Bethany losses, including two years ago when Bethany won the national championship. However, this year the Lords were unable to hold an early lead and fell to Bethany 5-3. The Lords opened up the game with goals from Tony Mohammed ’97 and Kelly Ols ’99, jumping ahead 2-0.

The Lords relinquished their early lead, however, to the powerful attack of Bethany. "We just didn’t show up to the game mentally," commented Mohammed on the loss. Mark Toews ‘97 added the final goal for the Lords.

The Lords road stand continued with a trip to Malone College. After giving up five goals in the last match the Lords were looking to improve on the defensive aspect of their game and did by shutting out Malone 4-0.

“We really shut them down on the defensive half of the field,” goalie Chris Schilling ’98 said. The shutout was the fourth of the season and Schilling’s third. Both Mohammed and Toews scored two goals for the Lords. Junior Barry ’97 and Isaac Couch in ’97 each added an assist.

Mohammed’s outstanding play against Bethany and Malone earned him Athlete of the Week honors in the NCAC. “I was happy to get the honor, but really would have liked a win at Bethany,” Mohammed said. His two goals against Malone are his 14th and 15th of the year. Mohammed leads the Lords in points with 36. Ols is second with 27 points.

Kenyon continued its tenacity and improved its record to 11-2-1 with a 4-0 win over Wilmington College Tuesday afternoon on Maver Field. The win served as some redemption for Kenyon, since Wilmington defeated the University of Rio Grande, whom Kenyon lost to on Sept. 10.

The Lords came out firing in the first half. The first goal came when the Lords were awarded a penalty kick for a hand ball in the penalty box against Wilmington. Ols buried the penalty kick in the bottom right corner to take a 1-0 lead. Later in the half Ols buried another penalty kick awarded to the Lords when Mohammed was flagrantly fouled in the box. Ols’ two goals increased his season total to 12.

Gowin also played well, tallying two goals of his own. His first came midway through the first half when he redirected a deflection back into the net to put the Lords up 2-0.

His final goal was an unassisted run down the left sideline and a perfectly placed shot to the right corner under the goalie’s reach. His second goal put the Lords up 4-0 going into the half.

In the second half Wilmington never had a chance to recover and was not able to capitalize on any of its opportunities. The score ended in a 4-0 shutout, the Lords fifth of the season and junior goalkeeper Elliot Shorb’s second.

The Lords look to keep their undefeated conference record alive on Saturday when they travel to Wittenberg University.

Kenyon’s final home game is on Wednesday against Hiram College.

three consecutive games, with 15 in the Sweet Briar Invitational. The squad also has a shot at breaking the record for most games won in a single season, which is currently 11. "The Ladies have three games left this season.

First-year coach Wendt Winter is excited. "We’ve done nothing but improve over the course of this season."

The team set goals in the beginning of the season to win every game out of conference, to achieve a record of at least .500 overall, and to make a record of at least .500 in the NCAC. "We’ve met every goal we set for ourselves this season," said Wendt.

Winter, "This has been one of the best years that we have had yet in hockey." He attributes their success to their strong devotion to teamwork. "As a team we get along really well and therefore we click out on the field together."

Winter agrees: "This team has been very spirited and very unified from the beginning, and hasn’t let anything get them down. They came together at the beginning of the season and made up their minds what they wanted to accomplish...and they did it together."

Speaking for all the captains, McNally said, "It’s incredibly rewarding to finish our careers on the team with such a great season and a great group of people. We’ve come a long way since our first year and the hard work has really been worth it."

This Saturday’s game is the last regular season contest for the Ladies, and as well as their final conference match, it will be the last appearance on Waite Field for seniors McNally, Diefeld and Buchanan.

Kenyon and Wooster share identical 4-2 records heading into Saturday's game

By Heath Binder

The Kenyon football team hosts the College of Wooster Saturday for third-place bragging rights in the North Coast Athletic Conference. The Lords, currently 4-2 (3-2 NCAC), are coming off two close victories over NCAC opponents. They beat Case Western Reserve last weekend, 14-12, and topped archrival Denison with an improbable comeback from a 14-point deficit two weeks ago.

While both game scores were close, Kenyon played a much better game against Denison, according to Lords Head Coach Vince Arduini.

"We played well [against Denison]," Arduini said. "But we played poorly against Case. Too many penalties, too many missed assignments. I think good teams find a way to win. I'm glad we showed resiliency, but I'm not pleased with how we played."

The Lords had 11 penalties and a punt blocked against Case Western. Two plays saved them: a fourth-quarter 48-yard field goal, the game's only points scored by either team, and a fumble recovery with 2:20 left that led to the winning touchdown.

Field hockey rides eight-game winning streak into home closer

Having defeated the North Coast Athletic Conference first-ranked Wooster Scots on Tuesday 2-1, the Kenyon field hockey team is ready to face off against archrival Denison at home this weekend.

A win wouldn't only give the Ladies a shot at first in the NCAC, but would also enable the Ladies to break the record for most consecutive field hockey games won in Kenyon history.

With the win on Tuesday, the team improved its overall record to 12-4, its NCAC record to 7-4, and continued an eight-game road winning streak.

The Scots, currently ranked 18th in Division III, did not go down easy. Gretchen Muller '98 scored late in the first half for Kenyon, but Wooster scored early in the second half to tie the game. Carrie Moore '99 pushed the ball into the cage after an intense struggle in the circle with 21 minutes remaining in the second half. After that, the Ladies held their ground.

"It was such an important win for us," said co-captain Sarah Dieth '97. "It was an evenly-matched game either team could have won and both teams played to win. But we pulled it out."

In a 10-0 victory, the Ladies took control of their game against Earlham last Saturday, defeating the Quakers for the second time this season. Scoring only two goals in the first half, the Ladies came alive during their second half. The first-half goals were by Ellen Pisutti '99 and Jess Goodman '99.

The Ladies scored eight more goals during the remainder of the game. Led by tri-captain Lindsay Buchanan '97, who had three goals during the half, the Ladies turned on the firepower. Goodman had two more goals, and Lisa McNally '97, Moore, and Muller each registered a goal. Philipp Wa¨ller assisted three goals.

The Ladies had a total of 30 shots on cage, while first-year goalkeeper Elois Pruyt touched the ball only twice to register her sixth shut-out of the season.

With Buchanan's absenteism, she broke the Kenyon record for career points tallied, a total of 42 (two two-point goals) and assists (worth one point). Buchanan now has 69 points; the previous record of 64 points was set by Anne Hummelbricht '81 and tied by Dana Davis '89. Buchanan is two goals away from breaking the record that all we could do was score. We never gave up and played as hard as we could."

"We executed very well. Guys stepped up," Arduini said. "It was one of those momentum kind of games."

"After six games, we're 4-2. We're within sight of a winning season, but we have to play better in order for that to happen. There is room for improvement."

Wooster, Arduini said, will be a challenge. The Fighting Scots lost a close game in last NCAC champion Allison Field Saturday, 13-3.

"Wooster's a very good club. We have our work cut out for us," Arduini said.

The game starts at 1:30 p.m. on McBride Field.
