Students Attend Trustee Lunch to Discuss Housing Policy
By Rachel Mohr

Trustees, looking for insight into the opinions of Kenyon students, at the trustee/student lunch last Friday were not disappointed. A large group of students, upset over changes in the housing policy turned out for the lunch, creating heated debate.

At the center of the debate, students, who opposed the new housing changes claim that the College did not let the previous housing amendment remain in effect for a long enough period of time to determine if it was working effectively. Independent students asked to have a voice before the new amendment would go into action, giving more students time to learn about the changes and express their views about them.

Trustee Cornelia Hallinan stated that the trustees had met Thursday night to “clarify the plan and see what is happening.” She continued that the “housing policy is an internal administrative decision, and that the trustees will most likely fully support the housing policy change” idea to President Jordan.

While many of the students at the lunch were concerned, Wright

Flashers Sightings Increase on Campus
By Kimberly A. Schlake

For the past four weeks, Kenyon has been plagued by five incidents involving vandalism. Safety and campus security officials have reported three incidents of male subjects exposing themselves to female members of the community, one incident of harassment, and one incident in which the victim was actually assaulted.

The first incident, taking place on the evening of October 2, left a male exposing himself to a female member of the community outside of Ernst Center, then immediately running off. The male subject was standing on the patio area, and was described as a white male, 18 to 22 years of age, wearing a dark shirt with tan shorts and white t-shirt and white socks.

Next, early in the evening of October 7, a tall man with grey hair was reported to have been walking on the bike path near the terrace. Officials consequently investigated, but could not locate anyone.

The third incident Security reported occurred approximately 2:45 a.m., October 8, when students witnessed a suspicious person on the second floor of Farr Hall harassing a female student. The harasser was described as a white male, approximately 5’9”, very thin, and with long, bleached blond hair, well-groomed, wearing blue jeans and a blue shirt.

Again, on the evening of October 16, a female member of the community reported that a male with dark, shoulder-length hair, heavy build, about 6 feet tall, and wearing a tan duffle coat with khaki pants exposed himself to her on the northwest side of Gund Commons. Apparently, after the male had left, he began to make thrusting movements with his pelvis, when the female briskly walked away.

Next, in the late evening of October 22, a man accosted a female employee outside the south side of Peirce Hall. The woman described a white male, approximately 6’3” with dark eyes, wearing dark clothing and a black baseball cap. She estimated him to be in his late 20s. The man had been hiding in shubbery near Peirce.

Deputy Deeley from the Sheriff’s Department in handling these cases. He characterizes the exhibitions as having psychological problems, where they feel the need to expose themselves, but begin specifically trying to catch these suspects by “keeping a close eye on the campus at night and by spending a lot of time on foot, in uniform and undercover.”

Deputy Kinsey said that he is concerned with the safety of females on campus. He said that when he spots a student in a dark area he will follow her in his patrol car until she reaches a lighted area safely, since most of the incidents have happened in dark areas when the subjects are alone.

Deputy Kinsey said that he is close to catching the exhibitionsist; in fact, he was only 20 seconds away from the Peirce Hall incident. He said that he believes that the male problem lies in the fact that “no one has seen the male subject.”

Phil Beta Kappa Chapter Announces New Initiates

Kenyon’s chapter of Phi Beta Kappa welcomed 11 seniors into membership at Tuesday’s Founder’s Day service in Rouss Hall.

Ohrstrom. President of Greek Council, attended to provide the trustees with the “green’s” point of view. To address the accusation that the green’s have too much control at Kenyon, Ohrstrom stated, “Senate is not stacked [with fraternity members], nor is Student Council.”

Ohrstrom supported the decision to change the housing policy, stating that it helps [fraternities] to have sophomores in division.” To back up his argument that the policy will not be a drastic change, he cited the example of the Psi Upsilon fraternity, which currently has 37 brothers, and only fills 16 beds in Leonard Hall. Thus, not a large number of seniors divided would be living in Leonard because of the amendment, due to the stipulation that the number of sophomores permitted to live in division must be directly proportional to the percentage of the group that they represent.

Conservenly also surrounded the way in which the changes passed Senate. Ohrstrom stated that “Originally, the Senate was 2-10 against the changes, but after a lot of talking, Senate voted 10-2 for the changes. One of the dissenting votes was not even a student.”

Trustees Address Physical Improvements, Budget
By Courtesy Coughlin

Over the weekend, in addition to discussing the new housing amendment, the trustees also engaged in a series of discussions concerning other aspects of the College.

The trustees were updated on the plans for the College’s new physical improvements, especially in regard to student housing.

President Philip Jordan said that the trustees are, “enthusiastic about the Woodland Commons and renovations of the New Apartments.” They were also briefed on plans for renovating the lounges in residence halls.

Other important events included “considerable discussion regarding the budget,” explained Jordan. Questions regarding the College’s potential to increase enrollment was discussed, as well as how to moderate tuition increases in the future.

Trustees try to figure out ways to increase gifts to the College, and they also set a goal for the Kenyon Fund. Since this year marks the 50th anniversary of the Kenyon Fund, they increased the goal by 35 percent, making it a $5.5 million goal.

Jordan reported that the trustees were pleased at the senior class participation in the annual Dine-a-Thon. The event raised $15,000 and encourages the Class of 93 to continue in this tradition.

“This time of year,” explains Jordan, “the board takes up the budget. It will move now from a model to working out the particulars in November, December, and early January.”

This process incorporates input from committees of both students and faculty. The Board of Trustees will meet again in the spring where they will discuss faculty appointments.

Plan for Experimental College Considered
By Elizabeth Bennett

A small group of students not lost Thursday evening to discuss goals and organizational matters for Kenyon’s Experimental College. The Experimental College will, if all goes as planned, begin next semester to organize and offer a plethora of workshops in non-traditional subject areas.

Barry Lustig, president of Common Sense, an organization designed to assist student initiated programs, is directing the plans for the Experimental College.

“The Experimental College is a way that anyone in the College community can lead or take a workshop on something not included in the regular curriculum. Students will be able to easily take initiative,” Lustig said. While in San Francisco over the summer, Lustig thought of applying the idea of an experimental college to fit Kenyon’s specific needs.

Depending upon the Experimental College’s success, anyone will be able to sign up to teach or take a five-session workshop. Teachers must be students and will have a coherent goal and be able to demonstrate sufficient knowledge in the subject area they propose to teach. Faculty, departments, townpeople of Gambier and Mt. Vernon, organizations and clubs are invited to teach a workshop in any discipline. However, the founders of the Experimental College hope that students with unique and special interests will stand forward to teach the majority of workshops.

The proposed workshops will be free to students, and a course book will be printed listing the courses available. Also, if a student would like to learn something in particular, the Experimental College Board will attempt to find a teacher. So far people have volunteered to teach possible workshops ranging from bike repair to wine-tasting to automatically.

The present Board of Directors consists of Media and Copying Editor Rachel Balkcom, Chaplin Andrew Fositer, Student Activities Director Beth Dudley, and Professor of history Michael Evans. Once the student run administrative board has been well established, Common Sense will step down allowing the organization to operate on its own. Members of the student administrative board, which Common Sense implemented, are Adam Tucker as the Administrator, Rachel Balkcom, and Melissa A. Lord.

The Experimental College will get their funding through the Student Activities Organization, by asking different administrative offices for funds, and by charging non-students a small fee for the workshops. The budget will be set between 5000 and 100000. If the budget there will be money to secure that teachers will not have to pay for any expenses from their own pockets. However students will be responsible for the purchase of materials they use during workshops.

According to Lustig, “This is a nice way to show diversity on campus. It is hard to start your own club, but without hassle, here you can.”

So far Lustig has not received any negative feedback, in fact people already have been expressing interest in teaching see EXPERIMENTAL, page eight.

Bill Clinton for President

This election year, more than any other in recent history, the United States confronts a dramatic choice that will determine the spirit of the nation over the next four years. In past months George Bush, Ross Perot and Bill Clinton have all staked out their ideas about the future of the country. Bill Clinton offers a hopeful vision of unified government that acts for the peoples needs and for the betterment of the nation. Bill Clinton is the clear choice for leadership into the next century.

The Reagan-Bush Legacy

For the past 12 years the country has lived with the Reagan-Bush ideal that holds that government should be limited to its absolute minimum. Unfortunately for the majority of Americans, the former president's efforts to reduce and trickle-down economic policy have not resulted in renewed wealth for those who provide the public good. Hence, the rich have gotten richer, and the poor poorer.

President Bush has made a few brave public statements about government's inability to lead with his personal lack of vision. Unable to reach agreement with Congress in his first term, Bush will have even less success in a second. His ineffectiveness stems both from his lack of a coherent goal and from his unwillingness to heal differences. Judging by the tenor of his campaign, Bush is becoming more, not least, beholden to the right wing. He lacks a realistic vision of the future.

Ross Perot's Candidacy

Ross Perot, while admirably paving an issue to the forefront of the campaign, has only one objective - cutting the budget deficit and government debt. That is clearly a worthy goal, for he is so often pointed out, a huge percentage of our taxes goes to fund the interest on the debt. However, the violent methods he proposes will only shock the economy into severe recession while gutting programs such as Social Security and Medicare. We need to gain fiscal control, not by destroying social programs.

Perot's plan to pay off the debt, even the national debt, as proposed by George Bush, is an illusion. There is no evidence that he will be able to negotiate with Congress to pass his proposals. His only constant in the debates was that if he were elected he would be just as much a mistake that the Congress would have to listen to him. He does not realize that government policy is not to be proposed or pushed by one man. We cannot forget that Perot quit a presidential campaign mid-stream. Perot's commitment to leadership and compromise are highly doubtful.

Clinton's Vision

Bill Clinton possesses the leadership qualities of vision and character, along with a well thought out plan for the future, and the political skill necessary to implement it. Clinton's ideas are grounded in the problems facing America: he is in touch. He begins by listening to the concerns voiced throughout the country. His commitment to solving the people's problems epitomizes him to a role as leader. In this ability to listen that distinguishes Clinton from the other candidates. He understands the diversity that makes up America more interested in building than in tearing down or dividing.

While the Republicans stowed here at their convention, Clinton participated in building a home for a low-income family with Habitat For Humanity. Clinton's commitment to listening, acting, and healing gives the people hope: the ability of Americans to come together and resolve our problems.

Clinton's Character

Much has been made of Clinton's character. However, we feel that his character strengthens him as a candidate for the presidency. For eight months now he has endured a brutal campaign in which his personal life and actions at a young man have been called into question. He has shown an ability to persevere in the face of adversity unlike the other candidates. We also recognize that perseverance is a necessary quality for the Oval Office, because nothing in Washington happens overnight. We must have a leader with a strong commitment to long term goals and a willingness to see them through in order to see real change in Washington.

We also see Clinton's vision and character at work in his selection of a vice-presidential candidate, Al Gore. He did not back away from choosing a leader of repute for his running mate. Gore is a politician who possesses extraordinary drive, ability and leadership capability. None of the other vice-presidential candidates possesses the abilities necessary to take over the presidency in times of crisis. Gore stands alone as a figure of intellectual and personal ability.

Clinton's Plan

Clinton's vision and character enable him to form a coherent plan. We recognize that a plan offered during a campaign is only a beginning and avoids specifics. However, Clinton has put forth a number of proposals that address concrete needs of the country, and most importantly, they give us an indication of the kind of leadership we can expect.

Bill Clinton offers the most effective, least painful plan for reducing the deficit, creating jobs, and rejuvenating the economy. His proposals to equilibrate the tax burden call for increasing taxes on the wealthy. While the top few percent of incomes benefited from the tax cuts of the 1980s, the richest citizens now come for them to take up larger share of the cost of bettering the country. His economics are based by his education and job training initiatives. Clinton has proposed a concrete plan which will grant college students the opportunity to pay back fewer costs through national public service. On the issue of gun control, he supports the Brady Bill and a ban on assault weapons. Both attempt to address the problems crippling our cities.

Bill Clinton is serious. He supports the Family and Medical Leave Act, the Violence against Women Act which seeks to deter domestic violence, the Freedom of Choice Act, which would guarantee women the right to abortion, and the Medicare Plan which would end the practice of over-nurture and over-insurance. minorities. Clinton has shown a clear commitment to environmental issues simply by choosing Al Gore as his vice-presidential nominee. Clinton proposes to get serious about pollution, conservation and preservation. Fortunately working for environmental issues does not translate into foodstuffs. They recognize the potential for "green business."

The Future

Bill Clinton is the kind of leader that America needs for the future. He has proven himself in office with strong leadership. He has put forth a plan which identifies and addresses the problems facing America, and articulates a commitment to heal them. It's time for Bill Clinton.

Ms. Duprey and Mr. Penick Respond

By Anne Duprey and Neil Penick

At the Founder's Day Convocation, Professor Perry Leeds delivered a wonderful address. He spoke of Kenyon's history in terms of a pattern of negative events which have brought about surprising positive results. The forces which drive the recent changes in the housing policy, as well as the changes themselves, certainly fall into the pattern of negative events. Yet, contrary to Kenyon's history, the results of these events, from where we have seen so far, are anything but positive.

Since we explicated our views on this issue several weeks ago, many others have expressed similar sentiments. Several letters were sent to The Collegian. All but one of the letters represented a "Circus perspective." We agree with these Greeks that their interests are also a part of the community, but as we previously explained, the interests of one individual group must not supersedes the interests of the community. Equality, and specifically equality in housing, are an imperative for the well-being of the community. As Vice-Presidential hopeful (we hope not), James Rockefeller said you might, "Peronism."

The administration also expressed its opinion last week, and the Trustees appropriately approved it. They supported the "compromise" designed by the Senate, which was based on the Housing and Community Development proposal, discarded a petition signed by almost all students in this fiscal year and passed a new housing policy. The formal approval of this plan changes the manner in which the ideas and interests of a powerful minority bulldozed through the student administration bureaucratic. In the process marked by undue speed, misinformation, and widespread confusion, the majority of the student body was excluded from full participation in the form. Thus the proposal, revised or not, must be rejected.

We are not referring to some abstract idea, but to our friends, neighbors, and ourselves. Kenyon students, faculty members, and staff members, have become, as ever, a part of the community. It seems that the new housing policy, through its inherent inequity simply institutionalizes and affirms polarization. Sadly, the Alumni, Trustee, and Administration are largely responsible for creating this fractured community which we must now fight. Therefore, it is to us, students, neighbors, and friends to heal this community.

Hatfield '94 Applauds Election Panel Discussions

To The Editors:

I am writing to thank the members of the Economics and Political Science departments for organizing Monday night's Presidential forum. I would particularly like to thank the Professors McCain, Brehm, Gemeinsm, Elliott, and Cahill for their participation in the forum. The forum was extremely informative and well organized. Addressed at the forum were issues of great importance to all members of the Kenyon Community on topics pertaining to Tuesday's Presidential election.

The faculty panel brought with them both objective and subjective criteria in the evaluations of the three major presidential candidates. George Bush, Ross Perot, and Bill Clinton. I was able to see firsthand all aspects of each candidate, which included, in addition to their personal qualities, their stands on such issues as free enterprise, foreign policy, environment, and social security. The forum was very informative and the candidates were very professional. I strongly support Bill Clinton as the next President of the United States.

Although well attended, the sub- matter of this discussion was one that many students, alumni, and faculty members felt was left out. This was the issue of the Iran-Contra Scandal. I would be interested in your opinion on the subject.

Characterizations in The Add Living Humanity, Pathos

By Spencer Parsons

It was perhaps an off night last Saturday for KCIC’s Outstanding Anthony Clavero’s "The Living." Nothing seemed particularly wrong with the performance, it just never seemed to come together, somehow. It was a skittish, shapeless statue that doesn’t even really capture one’s attention because it doesn’t look as if it might actually step down from the stage any time soon.

Overall, the performances were competent and well acted, some even outstanding. However, the numbers and statistics, the principal players, tended to play the necessary pathos and terror out of the script. Will a show, as Mr. John Anthony Clavero, a plague-devastated London. Stirring and often funny, he has a compelling portrayal of a fourteen-year-old forced to lead under the worst possible conditions.

Rebecca Feldman plays the part of Sarah Chader, the widow of a shopkeeper, with few false notes and with focus and vitality. Forced to be strong in the face of utter futility, she is luminous as a warden in the city of London by an ignorant and therefore often feeling society.

Panel Offers Insight into Issues, Choices

By Brian Vasnavi

On Monday evening, the Political Science and Economics departments continued a long tradition of panel presentations with their annual "The Living." Four years ago, professors from these departments got together to analyze the race for the presidency.

They were released as students and professors took some time off for about an hour and a half of political and economic insight into the workings of the American administration. Chooski, which was often hilarious, had a positive influence on the number of students who participated. And would be on foreign oil, the candidates have few substantive proposals beyond a mutual endorsement of natural gas and a distinction to interfere at all in natural markets. Bush especially favors this laissez- faire approach to energy policy. Perot’s proposal to raise the gas price through taxation, reducing gas consumption and providing incentives for alternatives, was well-received by the economists on the panel, but it was an isolated revenue-raising proposal and not part of a coherent policy.

In perhaps the only interesting moment of the night, Calhull addressed the nature of the political process itself. All three of the big-money candidates are engaged in a demeaning struggle for a big political prize. American federal politics has moved away from the original model envisioned by the designers of the Constitution. The centralization of power in the presidency and the shallowness of the media coverage lead to the charade and shallow tactics of negative campaigning, and the campaigning process itself, he said.

Taking everything into account, I find my choice narrowed between two candidates who are very much alike. Unfortunately, they are alike in lacking concrete policy dealing with the most important issues. Perhaps a better choice is called for, after all there are more independent candidates, people, need not vote in the first place.

Although I did not decide to vote for anyone, I am much more confident in my decision. The only way to win is by hard work and dedication. It is not enough to vote in the first place.

Spiegl was the point that challenged the point that the two major parties have not put enough effort into the election. It is not enough to vote in the first place. The major candidates do not differ significantly on the major issues of the economy, education, or the environment. There is not much to choose between the two candidates.

Rubenstein Brings Glitter of Ziegfeld's Follies Back To Life

By Kate Brentzel

Associate Professor of Music Micah Rubenstein will give a slide lecture, Thursday, November 5, at 8:00 p.m., in the main auditorium of the new Hal- loween Auditorium. Rubenstein, who is originally from Chicago, was the son of immigrant parents. Rubenstein attributed part of the success of the Follies to the fact that the Follies cleverly combined the popular elements of the most popular forms of entertainment. The Follies, based on the success of the Ziegfeld Follies, for the Follies were high class entertainment. The slides accompanying this lecture should provide a glimpse into the extravagance and richness of these productions. You'll see some wild costumes, said Rubenstein.

Rubenstein's lecture is relevant in more ways than one. First, it is an important moment in the history of the Follies and their impact on the entertainment industry. Second, the Follies are a model of high fashion and elegance, and their impact on the fashion industry is still visible today. The Follies are also a model of entertainment, and their impact on the entertainment industry is still visible today. The Follies are also a model of entertainment, and their impact on the entertainment industry is still visible today.

Law Schools Information Seminar

By Learne One

For students considering law as a career, there are a number of factors to be considered, including the quality of the law school, the likelihood of employment, and the potential for high earnings. The law school is an important factor, as it is the place where students will spend a significant amount of their time. The likelihood of employment is also important, as it is important to be able to find a job after graduation. The potential for high earnings is also important, as it is important to be able to support yourself after graduation.

Sponsored by the Pre-Law Society and the Career Development Center, this information seminar will be held on Tuesday, November 1, from 11:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. in the Pre-Law Center. The seminar will feature representatives from law schools who will talk about the admissions process and discuss the general requirements needed to gain admission to law school.

On Thursday, November 6, at 8:00 p.m., the Pre-Law Society will sponsor a similar event that consists of admitted students from Ohio law schools. According to Blankenship, the offices emphasized that they are continuing to accept applications from Kenyon students and will offer Kenyon students over other students who may have slightly higher LSAT scores.

If students are unable to attend the law school presentations, they may still get information on the law school admission process by applying to the law school directly. The Pre-Law Society is a student organization that provides a forum for students to learn about law school admission processes.

The law schools that will be represented in the upcoming law school include Boston College, Case Western Reserve, Chicago, Harvard, Ohio State, Washington and Lee, University of Akron, Seton Hall, University of Cincinnati, Golden Gate, and the University of Dayton. Additional schools are Valparaiso University, Capital University, Widener, Ohio Northern, Touro College, St. Louis University, St. Louis University, Cleveland State, and Northeastern University.

The Changing Faces of Kenyon
Men's Soccer Rebounds From OWU Loss, Looks to NCAAs

By Matt Kang

The Lords soccer team has experienced three weeks filled with continued success as well as unexpected setbacks since the last update. Kenyon's record is now 13-2-4 for the season. They have maintained their number two regional ranking but have slipped to number 14 in the Division III poll. On the evening of October 7th, the men's soccer team traveled to Delaware, Ohio in hopes of amending the then top ranked team in the region. We ended the weekend with a loss against Wittenberg. Kenny failed to find the net for the second day in a row. We played all around good soccer for ninety minutes which is what we are used to this season.

Kenyon continued to work on their consistency and maintaining their intensity. This past Saturday they played against a good Wittenberg squad. They played with confidence and commitment, and their abilities allowed them to post a 1-0 win.

"Wittenberg was a good team. They had a couple good chances early in the game. We scored early, or else it would have been a real tough battle the whole way through. The key for us was that we played hard, consistent soccer all the way through. They were forced to play defensively because Leigh Siffrey got a red card, and we played one man down most of the game," Chapin says.

"The real test for us came on Saturday away from home against Wittenberg when the number two rated team in the country. Thank God we got away with a 3-1 win, that was huge for us. Every single player made good decisions that day, and the level of commitment and composure was superb," said O'Leary who added, "The win over Wittenberg was very important because we got a lot of goals against very good players. Unbelievably, it’s us to have every single player play well for 90 minutes, but none of our players were in a perfect form.

The Kenyon Lords soccer team rounds out the NCAAC schedule and the regular season with matches against Wittenburg, Denison, and Wooster this weekend. Both teams are very solid; however, they will have to try to control Donovan and Phillips who are the top two scorers for NCAAC, Chapin. The NCAAC’s leading goals will pose problems for the opponents offensive line. Come watch the Lords continue their journey into the NCAA play-offs with big games against the Scots and the Big Red.

Ladies Field Hockey Suffers Two Disappointing Defeats

By Charles Sauter

In terms of competition, the Ladies faced perhaps the toughest stretch of games all season last weekend. Unfortunately, it showed as the Ladies dropped three straight. The opposition faced the Ladies by a total of 5-1. The Ladies started the week off by hosting the #1 ranked team in the region, the Bishops of Ohio Wesleyan. On Saturday, the game continued without an on-field occurrence play and only two losses overall. The last time these teams met, on September 22, the Bishops were ranked Kenyon 0-1, so the Ladies had revenge on their minds. If mental anguish can be seen as revenge, then the Ladies succeeded, however, it’s doubtful that the Ladies felt satisfied with defeat after coming so close to an upset.

The next game, the Ladies continued to dominate play for most of the game yet failed to score. The last time these teams met, on September 22, the Bishops were ranked Kenyon 0-1, so the Ladies had revenge on their minds. If mental anguish can be seen as revenge, then the Ladies succeeded, however, it’s doubtful that the Ladies felt satisfied with defeat after coming so close to an upset.

The last game faced the Big Red of Denison. No team this season has caused more trouble for the Ladies than the Big Red. Denison won the earlier match-up by a score of 4-1. This time they one-upped themselves by shutting out Kenyon 4-0, in a game about which there is not much to say. The Bobcats of Frostburg State snuck into Gambier to take on the Ladies. The Bobcats traveled to Ohio from Maryland for a two game road trip. They lost their first game to Wittenberg, a team the Ladies split their season series with. Wittenberg appears to be a team on the rise, which would explain how Frostburg could lose to Wittenberg yet turn around and defeat Kenyon 2-0.

At Wittenberg, aside from going up a number of our players, scored their first goal on a penalty shot coming off of a questionable call in the first half. This could easily have damaged the team’s confidence to be at their best and played with all they could muster.

A mid-field collision, in which Helmsley managed to get the ground and break up the run up the game for the Ladies. Both Heinzelman and the Frostburg player went for the ball, and the Ladies could have lost but it is so happened that only the Kenyon player got tripped up. Despite a valiant last ditch effort, the Ladies failed to come up with the victory.

The Ladies have one game remaining. They play the Wooster Scots here at Wittenberg field this Saturday. The Scots look to secure second place in the conference and possibly a chance at the NCAA postseason. The Ladies should have no problem and average a close 1-0 loss to the Scots.

Cross Country Runs Toward Finals

By David Frank

This Saturday at Wooster the men’s and women’s cross-country teams will run in the NCAC Championships. Each team is only allowed to send three runners in the race, so the women’s team will not have every woman run. The men, on the other hand, are small in numbers as there have been a few injuries this season. The men will have five runners. If either team does well at Wooster, the top seven runners will go on to regionals, which will be on November 14.

Since October 9 there have been two meets, All-Ohio at Ohio Wesleyan University (OWU) and the Queen City Invitational. For the women the All-Ohio went very well. They came first in their conference and sixth overall. The top four runners (Keller Wilder, Jenny Anderson, Nancy Notes, and Stacey Kenyon) beat the top two runners from most of the teams in the conference.

At All-Ohio the men came fifth in their conference beating Wittenberg and turning an 8th place finish into a second place finish. The Marshall finish 28th place overall with Arnie Derry shortly behind him in 30th position. The team also continued to impress as they have led them to finish 5th, 6th, and 7th in every race.

At the Queen City Invitational the women had another phenomenal race where Kelly Wilder came first out of all the other runners. The team (led first by OWU came first in the nation’s tenth-ranked NAIA, Notes, Anderson, and Kenyon also had great races. Carrie Culver, who has been out for season because of a knee injury, had an excellent first race and finished in fifth place on the team. The Ladies finished fourth in the Queen City Invitational but they almost tied for third with Findlay, as they did last weekend. Mary Marcelli, who came in 3rd, had her best race this season. She met the times with a second place finish.

The top seven runners will go on to regionals, which will be on November 14. The top four runners will go on to nationals, which will be on November 15.

Wittenberg Mops Up Field with Lords

By Kevin Kroep

Last Saturday, the Lords of the Gridiron lost a waitress battle to the Wittenberg Tigers 51-7. But as you might expect, not many of those watching the game will make the highlight film this year.

What went wrong? To start, on Kenyon’s first possession, Brad Helmsley threw a interception. This would be a harbinger of things to come for the Lords, because Wittenberg put 16 points on the board over the next seven minutes, as Kenyon failed to stop the Tigers on defense, and the offense failed to get a first down.

This beginning was in Coach Jim Meyer’s words, “Unexpecte, but not surprising with the turnovers we had. We had time not to use their defense and they really pressured Brad.”

But just when some of the fairweather fans started to leave, Kenyon had a picture perfect drive to score on the stingy Tiger defense. First on a key fourth and two, Helmsley hit a leaping Ted Brockman along the sidelines for a five yard gain and a first down. Brockman was in double coverage and the only way he could make the catch is

The ball was in the air on the money, and it was.

From there Hemsley hit a tightly covered Jim Red for a 32 yard strike down to the 3 yard line. Then, two plays later, Red bolted in for his first rushing touchdown of the season. Kenyon was back in the game 16-7, but it had nocked off, if the ball had ended right there, many a Kenyon fan and player could have felt like it was a hard-fought game and a worthwhile experience. But, Wittenberg took the kickoff 60 yards and soon after scored the back breaking touchdown.

Meyer continued to harp on the kicking game. “Our kicking game has not given us the big plays necessary to win games. Our breakdowns in the kicking game have killed us.”

This was not the first big return on a kickoff for a Lord opponent, and if Kenyon expects Wittenberg to win, a big return on the perfect punt will have to be made by Kenyon, not the opposing team. Wittenberg would then score four times in the second half, to leave Gambier with a 51-7 win.

We have to look at these games (Allegheny and Wittenberg) in proper perspective...we have to learn from these games and go on, otherwise our mistakes will make us struggle against mediocre teams...I have no regrets about the games, our second team got a lot of playing time and that was more important than the statistics,” Meyer said after the game.

For the game, Helsley completed 16 passes for 150 yards, while Sims Weymouth completed one pass for 13 yards. Offensive player of the game, Ted Brockman grabbed eight balls for 50 yards and Jim Red snagged four passes for 70 yards and had the lone touchdown on a three-yard run.

Defensively, John St. Julian earned the game honors for his 16 tackles. The team’s of which were for losses. P. p. Decoppo was a

On tacks, Josh St. Julian had 9 and a shared a tackle with fellow defensive end Brett Bogombe, who made 8 stops. Matt Harwood garnered the teams player of the week award for his punt returns and kick coverage.

Saturday the Lords will look for win number two as they host Wittenberg. It will be a great game, but the offense to come alive and a chance for the defense to face some moral running backs. Come on down to the swim meet or field hockey game and cheer on the Lords at 1:30 pm.

indignation in attendance was critical. Paul Low, upset that the old housing policy had not had time to take effect, stated, "A generation of college students has not gone through the (old) housing policy. Only juniors and seniors know what it was like. Faculty have a distinct advantage—they have a more organized way to meet and get messages across." Low was forces behind the recent petition at the dining halls, which received 546 signatures from students who opposed the changes. There has been criticism that the petition is invalid, because "some students" made educated decisions, but I don't think that many people knew what they were signing," Amy King said.

Low addressed this problem. "We had one day to get the petition in order, and mistakes were made. We were under the impression that students were going to have time to talk about [the issues]." Low then requested the "thrower" to give more time before the amended policy is put into effect.

This sentiment was shared by Missy Skelton, who believes that "the student body did not understand what was at stake." She added, the "administration sends a negative message to students—that the administration does not keep its promises [to leave the former policy in effect longer], and that the College is organized around greeks."

The independents asked the trustees to establish a waiting period before changes are made. Low stated, "Concern for the issue of the Kenyon experience. We can learn a lot by living together. I feel that the changes would create division within the Kenyon community."

His opinion was countered by Nicole Dennis, McBride House Manager, who said, "On first-floor McBride, 75 percent of men are sophomore fraternity members, and 25 percent are independents. The independents feel like they are living in a 'fraternity division. Is that fair?'"

The consensus of independents who attended seemed to be that students were not adequately informed of what was going on with the policy until the changes had already been made. Information regarding the changes was available in Summer Newscope, and in dining halls, according to King. However, Skelton commented, "I feel that I am very aware of what is going on at Kenyon, and I missed the announcements."

"We were under the impression that this was just a discussion, not a change," concluded Anne Deprey.

Kinsey urged students who find themselves in future exhibitionist situations to be aware of what is going on with the policy until the changes had already been made. Information regarding the changes was available in Summer Newscope, and in dining halls, according to King.

and taking the workshops. Balkcom added that she thought the Experimental College would, "just make things more fun!" This type of program is not unique to Kenyon. In fact, according to Lustig, Oberlin, Stanford, and Dartmouth have strong experimental colleges already in place. This student-initiated and run operation hopes not only to allow students and other community members a chance to display and share their skills, but also to act as a vehicle for building relationships within the community. problems of overcrowding and have little incentive to try new techniques. With President's system, more students of all social classes will go to private schools, forcing the public schools to innovate. With the cold war over, and democracy spreading, many Americans seem content to let the world take care of itself. The world, however, is still not a completely safe place to live. Despite its democratic efforts, the former Soviet Union is dangerously unstable and still controls a vast arsenal of nuclear weapons. The Middle East remains a hotbed of turmoil and unrest. America is more closely tied to the world economically, than many people think. To retreat within an isolationist shell now, might weaken our exports and could lead us into another nuclear war. When we turned out back on the world in the late thirties, dictators rose to power and started the largest war in history. America's role on the international political scene should be to foster stability. During the Gulf Crisis, Bush recognized the threat Iraq posed to the rest of the Middle East and the world. The rest of the world coalesced behind his leadership and supported his effective resolution of the conflict. Bush has continued his leadership in the Middle East by bringing the Israelis together with the Syrians and Palestinians for the first time. In this turbulent time we need someone with a proven track record to maintain the progress we have made in the last four years. These are the critical issues which Americans will have to use to measure the candidates. These are hard decisions to make, but we all must address them. America must maintain its strength and correct its weaknesses. America needs to look beyond the gloomy exterior of Bill Clinton and choose the experience and skill of George Bush.

if this discussion was held in a venue like Rose Hall and if publicity had been increased, this forum would have reached out to far more students that it did.

Perhaps in the future, Kenyon faculty members from each department could prepare periodic panel discussions on various issues of pertinence to the Kenyon College community.

acting," Corel said. "The play is supposed to be really entertaining and at the same time give an awareness of the history and the possible future of birth control."

The four-woman play originated in 1949 and is touring throughout the Midwest. It was performed in the nation-wide First Annual Little Fall Festival of New Comedy held last year.

Corel said that Sweeney's Theatre might be brought back with their next traveling choice, but not necessarily by the People for Choice.

"If they are really wonderful and come out with another good piece on choice, we will definitely bring them back," she said.

"Their next piece (on the history of women's rights) is not really of interest to us, but it might be to the other groups."
