DeLuca Enchants Audience p. 3

Upchurch Tells of L.A. Riot Experience p. 5

Women’s Soccer Sets 18 Records p. 6

Campus Reacts to Presidential Elections, Clinton Win

By Diana Sonia Zicklin

On campus, Bill Clinton’s presidential win was received with anything but indifference. Not only was this election a watershed in terms of its political implications, it was pivotal to college students. For many, this was our first opportunity to cast a presidential ballot. Since it was also the first close election in recent history, it served as an exciting initiation into the world of politics. And, it seemed, that everyone on the Kenyon campus had something to say about it.

Most people reported that they voted for Democrat Bill Clinton and Al Gore. Some supported the independent George Bush and Dan Quayle for another four years. However, few seemed to have cast votes for Ross Perot and Admiral Ed Stockdale, who ran on the Independent ticket.

For months, supporters of both Bush and Clinton have argued that their respective candidate would be the one taking the inaugural oath this January. It was not until Tuesday evening that some people started to have a good feeling about it.

Rachel Moler and Stacey Allen both threatened, “We’re moving to Canada if Clinton wins.” One disheartened Republican, after hearing the growing margin for Clinton, cried, and stated, “I’m just starting to think that Bush might not win.”

Moler, who is registered in Pennsylvania, voted by absentee ballot. She explained her disenchantment with the Democratic nominee.

“I’m unhappy with the ideas of Change for the sake of Change. George Bush’s actions overseas were great. People should have given him a chance to do something over here.”

Others felt that Bush had been given enough of a chance. The idea involving the Supreme Court is a matter in many students’ response. Most were eager to see this change while a few, who agreed with Moler, were hesitant to consent to implications in the calling of Congress.

Jennifer Gundlach, who voted for Clinton, said, “I think, nationally, there’s going to be a big change. It’s the first time that the Congress and the President will be working together. Unlike the Carter Administration, Congress will like Clinton and will be able to go along with it. We will see the end of the deadlock between the executive and legislative branches.”

Almost everyone in the Democrat, agreed, saying, “Finally, for better or for worse, Congress and the president won’t be voting each other.”

Sam Gurbat, a self-proclaimed liberal Democrat, cited the implications of Clinton’s win as “larger than we have known in any recent elections. Things are now going to support special projects conducted by the College’s Health and Counseling Center. The Michael Collilor Stone Fund recognizes his relationship with the staff of the health center, who treated and counseled him while he was a Kenyon student.”

With this fund, the College honors a young man who gave this community a dramatic example of courage during his years here,” President Philip Jordan said in announcing the new memorial fund.

Parents Council Discusses Future

By Rachel Moler

Parents’ weekend marked the first meeting of Kenyon’s Parents’ Advisory Council.

This council is comprised of 80 members, 20 from each class, who meet twice a year to discuss the relationships between Kenyon parents and the College. The council also advises College officials on a number of topics through its committees, according to Lisa Schott, Director of Alumni and Parent Affairs.

According to President Philip Jordan, the Committee discussed issues regarding the housing change, racial harassment, new building programs, and the multi-cultural center.

These committees include Academic Affairs, Students Affairs, Advising and Career Development, Athletics, Student Health, Public Affairs and Admission, and Regional Volunteer Activites.

“Kenyon’s [Parents’ Advisory Council] is one of the best programs in the country,” stated Schott. “Kenyon’s council is not a ‘money group,’ and we have representatives from all geographical locations of the country. This helps to give a good sense of all components of the student and parent body.”

The chair of the Parents Advisory Council, Paul Low, Sr., agrees with Schott that the Council is beneficial in helping student life. “The student body and parents are fortunate that Kenyon College is so supportive of our endeavors every year, the quality [of the program] gets better and better.”

Low stated that the Parents Fund and Resource Committee is attempting to raise $360,000 in solicitations from past and present Kenyon parents and grandparents. He stated that this amount is a 15 percent increase from last year, and believes that the total can be achieved because “more and more parents are giving more resources in support of Kenyon.”

Lisa Benesch, who is on this committee said that this money would go to Kenyon’s operating fund. “The money can be designated for the academic operating budget — faculty, scholarships, financial aid, library and computing and housing and grounds,” she stated.

The 14 parents on this committee were a “working group” who volunteer year-round to recruit parents for phone-a-thons and to raise money. “This is a very energetic group, who has devised plans for coming years,” Betson said.

Another topic of interest for the Parents Council was President Philip Jordan’s presentation of the College report, in which Jordan said that Kenyon will increase enrollment by 10 students each year for the next five years. This move should assist in stabilizing increases in tuition. Low stated that President Jordan’s goal is to bring Kenyon’s tuition increases in line with inflation.

Other issues of concern to parents involved student utilization of the Career Development Center. This program is successful if students utilize it,” stated Low. He continued that the Parents feel that in order for the center to be effective, students should begin using the center as first-year students, not as second-semester seniors.

President Jordan, however, was critical of the Development Committee, Barbara Guerner, said, “Last year 51 percent of Kenyon students used the CDC for some see PAC page eight

Established 1856

Thursday, November 9, 1992

Stone Bequest Begins Health Center Fund

Three months before his class was due to graduate, and two months before his death last April, Michael C. Stone of Geneva, Illinois, was awarded an honorary degree of artis doctor from the College. He recognized his long-standing courage in the face of an increasingly debilitating disease. Now the College, with a $25,000 bequest from Stone, has established a permanent endowment in his name to support the College’s Health and Counseling Center. The Michael Collilor Stone Fund recognizes his relationship with the staff of the health center, who treated and counseled him while he was a Kenyon student.

With this fund, the College honors a young man who gave this community a dramatic example of courage during his years here,” President Philip Jordan said in announcing the new memorial fund.

Stone, the son of Hays Stone of Gambier and John M. Stone, Jr. of Wayne, Illinois, died on April 15, 1992. He was buried in the Kenyon College cemetery.

“I hope that this endowment would assist in meeting the health needs of Kenyon students in years to come,” Jordan said.

At the special graduation ceremony in February, College Physician Tracy W. Schermeter noted that the experimental treatments Stone underwent as a child to arrest a rare tumor, rhbalsomycosis are, are now standard treatment procedures. “Consequently,” Schermeter said, “thousands of children are alive today, free of once incurable disease.”

Stone, the son of Hays Stone of Gambier and John M. Stone, Jr. of Wayne, Illinois, died on April 15, 1992. He was buried in the Kenyon College cemetery.

“The idea does prove to be an explosive device, Davidson said he would like to see the case go through the system and have it dismissed and that person responsible for the damage in prison. The College is responsible for the damage in prison.”

Trustee/GM Directorship to Gensemer

Trevor G. Gensemer, a retired chairman of Proctor & Gamble Company was recently named a General Motors director. According to The New York Times, this is the first time that G.M. has appointed the duties of chairman of the board as a director. Gensemer is an active trustee of the University of Cincinnati.

Counsel Discourages Memorabilia

There will be a Student Council meeting this Sunday, November 8 to discuss policies regarding removal and acquisition of memorabilia in the Lounges of Harris, Leonard and Old Kenyon. The meeting will begin at 7:00 p.m. in Philo, and is open for public discussion until 7:30. All are invited to attend.

Strange Apparatus Sparks Bomb Threat in Gund

By Leeanne Oue

The south end of Gund Residence resembled a scene straight out of MacGyver last Friday, when all of its residents were evacuated after a homemade explosive device was found at the entrance of the hall’s boiler room.

According to Thomas Davidson, Director of Safety and Security, the Office of Safety and Security received a report of the alleged bomb from a member of the Gundrooms Grounds Department at 4:15 p.m. on Friday, October 30.

The office responded by sending a member of the College Township Fire Department to inspect the apparatus, which was a plastic two-liter bottle containing an unknown green liquid and a piece of aluminum or another type of metal.

After it was determined that the item could pose a threat to students’ safety, the area was cleared of all residents, as Davidson said that their “first and primary concern was to take adequate precautions.”

The item was removed from the area and turned over to the Knox County Sheriff’s Office, who then forwarded it to Ohio’s Bureau of Criminal Investigation in an attempt to determine the true nature of the device, according to Security. Those responsibile should be relayed to the Office of Safety and Security in two or three weeks.

If the item does prove to be an explosive device, Davidson said he would “like to see the case go through the system and have it dismissed and that person responsible for the damage in prison.”
Epidemic Needs More Attention

In the last two weeks, Anthony Clavirde's The Living showed at the Belton Theater, bringing the issue of AIDS once again to the forefront of our minds. The play showed the city of London under the threat of the AIDS epidemic and the public's reaction to it.

The AIDS epidemic, which has swept the world in recent years, has had a profound impact on the lives of millions of people. It has led to the deaths of thousands of individuals and has led to the loss of many loved ones.

The epidemic has had a significant impact on the way we live our lives. It has led to changes in the way we think about sex and the way we relate to one another. It has also led to changes in the way we think about the world around us.

The epidemic has also led to changes in the way we think about the future. It has made us more aware of the need for more research and more funding for the fight against AIDS.

In conclusion, the AIDS epidemic has had a significant impact on the world. It has changed the way we think about sex and the way we relate to one another. It has also changed the way we think about the future. We must continue to work towards a cure for this deadly disease.

Cadden Responds to Schumachers' Criticisms

To the Editors,

I am composing this letter on a plane on the way back from Kenya to an international conference on human sexual intercourse. A conference in which Prof. Ryn Edvard's points (as reported in the Colleage of September 17) the language and the visual with which Western culture represents human sexuality. In this discussion, we will examine the problematic and destructive aspects of human sexuality, including the cultural representations of human sexuality.

A good way of talking about such language is to be found in the letter from Prof. Cadden to Schumacher and to the Schumacher published in the Colleage on October 1. After announcing (on no apparent grounds) how sexual urges should be gratified, they identify masturbation as one of the "essential evils" in "current sexual attitudes." In particular, they take masturbation to represent the "depersonalization of sex" (my emphasis). Of the many issues raised by this set of arguments, the one which bears most directly on the question of language is the implication that somehow we are not permitted to talk about sex—perhaps in relation to our bodies.

When my child was an infant, her pediatrics in Brazil, as author of many works on child development, was pleased to note that he had figured out how to get that beautiful smile out of his mouth, explaining that this was one of the first ways a baby learns to calm and comfort herself or himself by the act of self-reassurance. This struck me as a wonderful paradigm for the physical and emotional processes by which we develop a sense of self-preservation.

People who enjoy the physical and emotional pleasures of exercise or who have learned by techniques of breathing and relaxation to transcend the purely repressive constraints of stress do not seem to me to be "depersonalized" or isolated. Certainly our sexuality has many social manifestations, some of which are illustrated in the film Professor Edwards showed, but these are not incompatible with our enjoyment of our sexuality.

Curiously, Professors Schumacher and Schumacher find the association of masturbation with empowerment and liberation (especially depersonalization) and, in many contexts empowerment and liberation are associated with the fulfillment of personal goals. Women who are autonomously (sexually or otherwise) and especially lesbian, pose all kinds of threats to the status quo, but they do not thereby give up their personalism—unless (and here we return to the question of language) by "depersonalized" we mean that others cease to regard them as persons.

As the parent of a high school senior, I would also like to comment briefly on the impact of the Colleage article about Prof. Edwards' presentation on prospective students and their parents—a report raised by Professors Schumacher and Schumacher. I read and encourage my child to read the board's articles and newspapers. Professors of colleges is interested in, to like the student if the student can write well and critically, but are also looking for students that are intellectual and socially alive.

After more than a decade of research and according to Prof. Edwards, I cannot honestly say how I would react as an outsider to this article on her talk. I can say that I hope my colleagues and the intelligence and openness to seek out, and the good fortune to find a teacher like Prof. Edwards—one who demands that students examine critically what they take for granted and confront the CADDEN page eight

"Come on let me take you down." "Put your doughnut in my 'T'," etc. portrayed women simply as objects to fulfill a man's sexual desire. I will grant that the Kokes cannot be faulted for the lyrics to a song, since they are not in writing anything. What I do find responsible for is their particular song selection. The consistent justification of women through the song lyrics and, as pointed out before, their suggestive actions and comments on stage, the objectification is a point of exploitation. Perhaps even more meaningful was that the midst of all of this exploitation they threw in a rendition of the 23rd Psalm as a tribute to their mothers. To me, as well as some others who have talked to, it was a sharp, hypocritical slap in the face. It was completely inconsistent with the messages sent by the rest of the performance.

What I find the most disturbing about this whole situation is the response of the Kenyan community—or lack thereof. Why is it that nothing has been said? Why is it that there are no groups on campus? Are they left with the help of a special tradition which exempts them from accountability? So that modern attending Kokes Concerts, for example, are conditioned to accept whatever they see on stage. One friend of mine went so far as to say: see PALASH page eight

Career Information Day
Tuesday, November 10
Peirce Great Hall
11am - 1pm and 2 - 2:30pm

32 representatives will be available to answer your questions and tell you about their opportunities and programs. We encourage those seeking employment to dress appropriately and to bring resumes.

109 South Main Street, Mt. Vernon
(614) 397-9573

Monday
Homemade Meat Lme stuffed with dressing
Choice of Potato-Salad Vegetable-Roll $5.00
10 oz T-Bone Steak-Choice of Potato-Salad Vegetable-Roll $8.95
Tuesday
Baked Pork Chop-Chose of Potato-Salad Roll $5.00
Spaghetti with Meat Balls-Garlic Bread Roll $5.00
Wednesday
Cheese Chicken + Noodles-Salad Roll $5.00
Fresh Chicken-Chose of Potato-Salad Roll $5.00
Thursday
Leek Soup-Garlic Bread $5.00
8 oz Baked Chicken Breast-Chose of Potato-Salad Roll $5.00
Friday
BQ Pork Rib-Chose of Potato-Salad Vegetable Roll $5.00
Baked Cod-Chose of Potato-Salad Vegetable-Roll $5.00
Saturday
8 oz NY Strip Steak-Chose of Potato-Salad Vegetable Roll $6.95
Jelly's Special Noodle Dish-Salad Roll $5.00

Hours Mon. - Sat. 8am - 5pm
8am - 3pm
Students Welcome
MasterCard, Visa, Checks Welcome

November 5, 1992
DeLuca's Hypnotic Performance Provides Humorous Break

By Angela Funk

Where were you Wednesday night? Well, if you haven't already heard, Rosie Hall was the place to be. Hypnosis Thursday evening, followed with a sum of 1485. This entertaining Kenyon students with the help of some "gutty" volunteers.

In the true to his unusual show: (1) The Mind Reading Act (and (2) The Hypnosis Act. Each caused hearty laughter and an appreciative round of applause from the audience. In addition to displaying his talent in controlling the human mind, DeLuca reminded us all of the "gutty" volunteers, and yes, I do remember everything that happened that night (with the help of some good friends).

About 20 students sat in chairs placed in a semi-circle on the stage. The techniques that DeLuca used to get his relaxed involved the constant sound of his voice and the steady rhythm of his steps. All that he required of us it was the way his voice while letting our bodies go limp.

He spoke in a relaxed tone and repeated ideas several times so that we could recall his instructions easily. Many of his key phrases were, "Breathe deeply. This is a beautiful warm feeling. Don't fight it."

It was working. I felt my hand hang as my thoughts and actions became victims of DeLuca's commands. DeLuca took us on a trip on a beautiful sky blue and water. I was laying on a beach with a warm breeze blowing, without a care in my mind. I smiled as I gazed at the vast body of water in front of me, feeling light, free and alone and peaceful. All of a sudden I was in a sail boat, holding a fishing pole, and I got a big fish on my line. I was quite determined to reel in that fish, but for some reason, no matter how long and hard I struggled, the damn thing never reached my boat!

Apparently, after this scene, about five students who were not affected by his hypnosis returned to the audience and 15 minds were left to be manipulated.

Wooow! Next time I knew I started to become very warm. DeLuca raised the temperature to over 100 degrees. I felt quite uncomfortable and began to take off my shoes and socks... but just as I did so, the temperature dropped back to normal... and then it got COLD! I shivered and snuggled with whoever was sitting beside me, because DeLuca said that, "There is a warm breeze blowing next to me all the time."

As we sat still and went back to a relaxed state, DeLuca picked up my arm to tell me how he was speaking to me and said, "Every time you try to say your name, you will shiver. The harder you try to say it, the more you will shiver."

So for Wednesday night, my name was, "A,A,A,A,A,A,A,..." frustrating, but true. One of the guys sitting next to me had a different name every time he was asked. Someone else responded by saying, "Shut up!" every time he asked her name.

Next, he told us that he had worked out for eight to nine years to become body builder. After getting down on our bodies, we gave our best pose to win the championship. This included a price of $5,000. Shelly was told us. He explained to us that everything Josh said would be interesting to us. And so it was. Not to mention that he told me and see DEULCA page eight.

Troupe Brings Abortion Center Stage

By Shelly Wharton

Late on Sunday nights, after a tough weekend, it is a hard thing for me to laugh. I'm grumpy, irritated, and I generally prefer to let my brain rest in front of the TV more than anything else. However, on this Sunday, I just happened to be walking back to my apartment when I heard the laughter coming from Guss Commons. Being naturally curious, I meandered over.

There I found a spectacle the likes of which I had not seen in a while. Womb for Rent, a comedy routine by Steveless Theatre, was wonderfully entertaining, frightening, and at the same time, enlightening. How many times in my life have I found that rare combination of emotions together? Bad horror films come close, but I really don't believe that one can call Texas Chain Saw Massacre enlightening.

Womb for Rent honestly made me laugh. It probably had something to do with my realization that there are people out there who are still living in the dark ages. As the show progressed I heard and saw more and more terrifying skits, which at the same time managed to make me laugh. It was if I was sitting on some macabre black comedy.

From the side show to the audience, I saw how some people think of women and their relationship to men and their own bodies. Yes, America thinks that we women have no control over ourselves. People who go to abortion are single unwed mothers on welfare who should not be supported by the damn system anyway. And if they are pregnant, they are brazen hussies with no respect for God, man, and the United States of America. No abortion for them, no, sirreebob, let 'em suffer.

My attitudes are fairly liberal in some respects, it's probably due to my upbringing. I come from a progressive family, where the mother goes to work and the father stays home to take care of the kids. Never did I know that there are people who believe that women, plain and simple, are factory workers here for the purpose of expanding the human population. Abortion disturbs this purpose.

Abortion, the dreaded political and moral argument in our society, is blamed for the internal decay of the American family, the decline of the United States as a major world power, and is also labeled as an altogether communist idea. Abortion in our society has become like meat loaf. People eat it, just as people have abortions, but nobody really likes to talk about it or have it around. Conceding about abortion being the issue to the front and center, out of the backs of our minds and into our consciousnesses.

My general reaction to Womb for Rent was that I laughed until I damn near fell off the chair. I also got some very valid people's attitudes that I was tempted to move to some small Latin American country that I can't even ask why we should do, (Ed's Note: Doesn't everybody else anyway?). However, I decided to stay here and I have made the choice to vote for pre-chosen candidates, despite my political affiliation. Womb for Rent made especially clear to me that the issue of abortion has become so much more complex than it is: if you don't believe in abortion, then don't have one. It seems like a pretty simple choice.
November 5, 1992

FEATURES page four

Smolak, Levine to Discuss Concepts of Attractiveness in Youth

By Greg Sock

Psychology professors Michael Levine and Linda Smolak are giving a joint talk entitled, "From Shirts to Shape: Development of the Concept of Attractiveness Over the Elementary School Years" on November 12 at 11:10 a.m. in the Biology Auditorium.

"The lecture is based on our research on childhood development of factors causing dieting, and more specifically, eating disorders later in life," Smolak said. "Fifty to 60 percent of high school seniors report being on a diet and experiencing a disorder, and we are interested in cultural and psychological factors that influence eating disorders among girls being at risk of weight consciousness."

"We've taken 100 kids, grades 1-5, and interrogated them on their perceptions of what is attractive, and their knowledge of weight and weight loss," said Levine. "Fifteen percent of the first graders had some idea of what involved, like dieting or being skinny."

Schram to Tell Tales of Jewish Heritage

By Christian Haughey

Storytelling is an art considered by many to be the foundation of literature and popular culture. It is also a way for people to remember and pass on their ancestry, traditions, values, history, and identity from one generation to the next. On November 5 renowned storyteller Penella Schram will present one of her many storytelling programs to the community. Her program, entitled "Humor and Holocaust with a Dustin Through Hells," will deal with "wit" and "wisdom" stories, as well as "fool" and "dare-do," stories. The program will be held in Peirce Lounge at 7:30 p.m.

Schram first gained a love of storytelling and decided to make it a way of life while she was up in New London, Connecticut. Her father, a cantor, told her Biblical and Midrashic tales while her mother introduced her to folk songs. Levine and Smolak, with the help of Kenyon psychology students, interviewed 187 teen girls from four middle schools in the area in January and February. Vincent's. The method used was a one-to-one interview, because a first-grader's thinking would preclude the use of a questionnaire.

Their interest in the topic began when they taught a course together. In their psychopathology of childhood disorders, an interest which eventually evolved into the study of eating disorders in particular. Levine said.

"There is relatively little known about Jewish folks and proper. Upon her graduation from Columbia University, Schram produced plays for both adults and children.

- She has produced three audio cassettes, a video cassette, and narrated two radio series. Among her published works are the Jewish Stories/One Generation Tells Another Tales of Elijah the Prophet; Eight Tales for Eight Nights; Stories for Chanukah; and The Big Tikkad. Schram has also appeared at major conferences and festivals as a feature storyteller, including the 1985 and 1990 National Storytelling Festival (NAFS) in Johnsonburg, Tennessee.

Her aims for her program are simple: to pass on stories and traditions, to gain an audience; to pass on history.

The actual "Beauty and the Beast" plotline, however, is one of the lower points of the movie. An Bancroft for Ms. Kendal, an actress and romantic interest of Merrick's, gives what I believe is the soul of the white performance of her character, a fact which might contribute to her success as a woman in a era. The movie was a commercial and critical success.

Despite the beginning and end, which book-end the film like some philosophical 23, The Elephant Man is, as its maker says, an imaginative and stylized film well worth it. It is pleasant to see a film that doesn't completely rely on its capturing reality for its effectiveness. The movie is not only about Mr. Merrick, his stories, and his life, but it is also about the power of storytelling.

This past summer was the dirtiest season for movie reviewing. A major film hit theaters, and a festival alakam (Lethal Weapon III, Batman Returns, Alien II), movie goers received very little food for thought. As usual, another year, another story.

Lynch adds to his own creeping rhythm and meticulous building of a stylized covering, to an already eerie story, to the film Lynch's storytellingFrederic Francis is a primary asset in achieving this film's success. Along with Schoettler's Raygun Ball, The Elephant Man is perhaps the most effective black-and-white cinematography the past 15 years, voluntarily using the lack of color to contribute to the film's unearthly portrayal of a Victorian beast.

The actual "Beauty and the Beast" plotline, however, is one of the lower points of the movie. An Bancroft for Ms. Kendal, an actress and romantic interest of Merrick's, gives what I believe is the soul of the white performance of her character, a fact which might contribute to her success as a woman in a era. The movie was a commercial and critical success.

Despite the beginning and end, which book-end the film like some philosophical 23, The Elephant Man is, as its maker says, an imaginative and stylized film well worth it. It is pleasant to see a film that doesn't completely rely on its capturing reality for its effectiveness. The movie is not only about Mr. Merrick, his stories, and his life, but it is also about the power of storytelling.

This past summer was the dirtiest season for movie reviewing. A major film hit theaters, and a festival alakam (Lethal Weapon III, Batman Returns, Alien II), movie goers received very little food for thought. As usual, another year, another story.

Lynch adds to his own creeping rhythm and meticulous building of a stylized covering, to an already eerie story, to the film Lynch's storytellingFrederic Francis is a primary asset in achieving this film's success. Along with Schoettler's Raygun Ball, The Elephant Man is perhaps the most effective black-and-white cinematography the past 15 years, voluntarily using the lack of color to contribute to the film's unearthly portrayal of a Victorian beast.
Knox County Symphony to Begin Season in Mt. Vernon

By David Lilly

Now in its 27th year, the Knox County Symphony will open its 1992-1993 season with its fall concert on Saturday, November 7, at 8:15 p.m.

The first of three concerts to be given during the academic year, the fall concert will be held in the R.R. Holtschneider Chapel/Auditorium at the Mount Vernon Nazarene College.

Kenyon professor of music and symphony conductor Dr. Benjamin Locke will lead the performance.

The Knox County Symphony was founded in 1965 under the direction of Kenyon professor of music Dr. Paul Schwartz. According to Locke, "The creation of the orchestra by Dr. Schwartz in 1965 had three purposes: to provide a training ground for young musicians of high school and college age, to provide a performance outlet for community musicians, and to provide entertainment of a 'classical' nature for Knox County audiences. In recent years, the symphony has worked to enhance each of these roles and has brought featured soloists of national and international stature together with local musicians of promise."

The symphony is a diverse group comprised of Kenyon students, faculty, and staff, numerous local residents, and several students and faculty members of the Mount Vernon Nazarene College. "The symphony is the result of the cooperative efforts of a large part of the county," said Locke. "It is funded entirely by the community as an independent organization, but many Kenyon people support it as members of the Mount Vernon Nazarene College."

The theme of the concert is "Green Leaves," composed by the English composer Ralph Vaughan Williams. The concert will open with the work of another folk tune called "Lovely Joan." Locke said "It's a very satisfying middle section to the work," said Locke. It's often been recorded by major orchestras because of its popularity.

The concert finishes with the William Tell Overture by the Italian composer Gioachino Rossini. The overture "opens with a cello quintet designed to represent the idea of sunrise on the Alps. This gives way to a storm sequence, soon to be replaced by a rather pastoral ending featuring clarinets and flutes," Locke said.

The Auditorium is located on the campus of Mount Vernon Nazarene College, south of Mt. Vernon on state route 856, Martinsburg Road. Admission is $1.00 for students, $5.00 for community members at the door.

Upchurch Outlines Urban Solution

By Neil Penick

Months have past since the Rodney King verdict spurred strong emotions and a wave of protests throughout the country. This crisis is not much more than a memory for most of us at Kenyon. But for the people of South-Central LA, that crisis is anything but a memory.

Carl Upchurch knows first hand the problems facing the people of South-Central LA. He is a former federal prison, and founded the Progressive Prisoners Movement, a ministry serving prison inmates. Upchurch was later arrested in N-Ace, a group of South-Central residents trying to maintain the gang truce, to come to Los Angeles and assess the situation. They asked him to find ways to help the major L.A. gangs, the Crisps and the Bloods, maintain a self-initiated truce. In response to this request, he spent a month's summer meeting and talking with members of the Crisps and Bloods in South Central.

"The church will talk about experiences in L.A. and his plan for the future, Sunday, November 8-10 p.m. in Gund Commons. "We're not nearly aware enough of where we are as a country on urban issues," said Upchurch. "I think L.A. opened some eyes that we are ridding on trouble."

Some of the problems facing South-Central LA today are poverty, unemployment at a level of between 65-70 percent, and intense anger that sometime turns to violence. Upchurch said that the gangs, "believe that they are serving their communities."

He said, "They are working instinctively towards their survival. However, I maintain that instead of surviving, they have unwisently joined in a conspiracy for their demise. Crime, cocaine and killings are a fulfillment of someone else's agenda. It's suicide, only the people are around to see it happen.

After the L.A. uprising, the gang members apparently began to realize this. The Crips and the Bloods organized a truce to stop the killing. Upchurch said, "To hear gang members say that they will put down their guns in a way for them to say 'No' to the UPCHURCH page eight
SPORTS page six

Women's Soccer Sets 18 School Records During '92 Season

By Ryan Heit

The women's soccer squad closed out their season with wins against Tiffin and Allegheny and a loss to Wooster. The Lady's season was their most prolific in team history as the '92 record was an impressive 15-5 (5-3 in NCAC play). The thirteenth wins was just one of eighteen records the Ladies set or tied in their 1992 campaign.

The game at Tiffin University was a brief rest from the rigorous play of the NCAC. Kenny shot out an early lead when she scored two goals in the opening period. The first came off of a booming shot from Mug Moriarty, and the second was quickly followed by Maure Connolly.

Immediately after halftime the Ladies put in a third goal and second Paul Wardlaw followed. To take advantage of the new strategy and scored within thirty seconds of the swish. Kenny and Tiffin then went for the kill to put the banner sounder, the score read 4-2, Ladies.

On October 24, the Ladies made the long trip to Wooster for their penultimate conference match. The Ladies had not beaten the Gators in their last ten tries, but history was to be denied this soggy Saturday afternoon. The field was muddy from the rain, but the Ladies persevered and held on for a 1-0 victory.

Kenny went into their last game of the season with the chance of placing second in the conference. All they had to do was get past the pesky Wooster Scots. Last year's only blemish on Wooster's championship season was a tie against Kenny, so in light of their vast improvements, the Ladies believed they could win. They fought valiantly throughout the regulation periods, but they could not get the ball in the net. Fortunately, neither could Wooster, so the game went into overtime. Unfortunately, the Ladies ran out of gas, and lost 1-2 in overtime.

Coach Wardlaw said that in the overtime period, "They were a better soccer team than we were."

Despite their disappointing losses to Denison, OWU and Wooster, the Ladies' season has been filled with many team and individual achievements. The offense, led by Hilary Marx's twenty goals and Kate Comford's nine assists, raised the team record for points in a season to 159. The defense was spurred by goalie Stacy Strauss' .777 goals against average and Sarah Rock's ability to blanket the opposition's best player. Thirteen wins was the most impressive record this year's edition chalked up.

Coach Wardlaw feels that the team finished in the top of the conference. In fact he pointed out that Kenny took the two teams that finished above them, OWU and Wooster, to overtime.

If the Ladies wish to continue their ascent in the NCAC standings next season, they will have to improve in two key areas.

First, the defense needs to increase their strength in order to get the physical defenses of their opponents throw at them. Second, if they want to improve their standing, they need to develop at least four or five players that can come in off the bench and provide the same quality of play that the starters provide.

However, the Ladies are a very young team that another year of playing together and another crop of rookies should help them compensate for these flaws and contend for the NCAC championship and a spot in the NCAA tournament.

By David Frank

Last Saturday the men's and women's cross country team went to the NCAC Championships at the College of Wooster. It was a very important race because decided which teams and individuals runners would qualify for regional meet in two weeks time.

The Lord's race was first and the competition was tough. After the starting stretch of an open field, there was a narrow path which caused a few of the runners to trip. A small pile of about five runners made an obstacle that the Lords had to jump. The team started out in a slow pace, putting them in the back of the pack. But, as the race continued, the men moved up in the standings as they attacked the hills and passed the other runners who had started fast.

The men finished just behind Wooster, and seven places behind Denison, the eventual champions. The team did not qualify for regionals because the pack of five did not stay together. Aaron Derry and Mike Marshall did pace in the top thirty, 23rd for Derry and 26th for Marshall, so both of them have qualified for regionals. Erik King, who had a wonderful race, just missed qualifying by one place. Other impressive races were run by Eli Thomas, Ryan McNulty and Dave Frank who had his best time ever at 31:54.

The women's race was just as fierce with competition because before the race, the current coaches' rankings listed Kenny as being tied with Allegheny for first. The Kenny's Wooster Wilder set the pace for the entire race by being in the lead, but she always had three women from Allegheny on her heels. Kenny finished first with a time of 19:18.4, setting the Wooster course record for the second time this season.

Over the past four years Kenny has been an impressive three All-American, has improved her finish. As a first year runner she finished 14th, made a big jump to fifth as a sophomore, and last year in 1991 Kenny Wilder was named NCAC runner of the year.

The women's team finished in second place, only thirty points behind Allegheny. This was the ninth time in the past ten years that the Ladies have qualified for regionals. However, they were not invited to the regionals because the 28th regionals is which is given to the top seven runners. Nancy Notes also raced well with a time of 20:48.8 and received Wilder's Devlin as a team recognition for coming in twentieth place.

Other impressive races were run by Jennifer Anderson, Aimee Presby and Alene Kelley.

The NCAC Regions for the women's team and the two male runners will be on November 14th at Albion College. If any of the Lords and Ladies do well they will advance on to NCAA Nationals on the 21st of November at Rochester, New York.

Wilder Named NCAC Runner of the Year; Lords Send Two To Regionals

Sports Briefs

- The Men's soccer team beat Denison in their final match of the season 6-0. They have now qualified for the regional tournament at Oberlin. Their first match of the tournament will be this Friday night at 6:00 p.m.

- The second annual Kenny ST. Turkey Trot will be held Saturday, November 14th. It is free to Kenyon students, $10 to all faculty, staff and members of the community. Prizes will be awarded to the winners and t-shirts will be given to all participants. Admission to the Kenny vs. Denison football game is included in the entry fee. If you have any questions or would like to enter, please call Dave Diggs at 427-5810.

- The intramural football playoffs have been on going this week. The semi-final games will be played on Thursday and the Finals will be this Sunday. Come down to the M.F. field and see if the defending Champions will be unseated.

Lords of the Gridiron Lose to Waynesburg; Brockman Lost for Season

By Kevin Kropf

The Kenyon Lords suffered another defeat, this time to the Waynesburg Yellow Jackets and is proved to be the most painful of the season. No longer can one blame the ineptness of many of the linemen, or a poor kicking game because great teams overcome these small problems and, save the Wooster game, the Lords have yet to have a good performance.

The game started off poorly as a Yellow Jacket returned the opening kickoff 89 yards for a touchdown. That would be the difference in the game as Waynesburg were on to win 26-21. The game turned into the question: Which team's defense would score more points. Kenyon did answer with a solid drive that went 91 yards over 14 plays and ended with a touch down. James Reed burst through for two points and a 7-6 lead. The score.

Three of Brad Hensley's five passes went well to Penzone for 46-yards, but the big play was a fourth and two on which Hensley ran a boot leg for 12 yards and a critical first down.

Six minutes later, after great defensive goal line stand, the Jackets intercepted a Hensley pass and returned it to the 5-yard line. They stayed there and went up 1-4. Kenyon's last possession of the half ended with another interception, but this time it hurt because it occurred deep in Waynesburg territory, stopping a drive that had some potential for points.

The second half started with the Yellow Jackets leading again to increase their advantage to 20-7. This time the score came directly off of a turn over as Waynesburg returned an interception 22 yards to the end zone.

The game was not over as Kenyon struck back after a John St. Julian interception. Two plays later a Hensley to Penzone touchdown pass from three yards out brought the game closer to 26-14. For the first time, the kicking team made a big play as Matt "Uncle Fest" Fryman blocked a punt and returned it 30 yards for a touchdown.

Now the score was 26-21, but only 3 minutes remained. An outside kick would be needed to help the Lords. Unfortunately it failed, and Kenyon did not get the ball back until there were just 45 seconds left.

For the game Hensley completed 23 passes for 190 yards. Penzone caught 7 balls for 76 yards, and Jim Reed also made 7 catches for 30 yards. Steve Kiehl earned player of the game honors for his outstanding blocking. This is a long time coming for the Senior lineman who has proved that he is the bulwark of the Kenyon line.

Defensively, Sue Guccio led the way with 10 tackles and played a big role in the shut down. John St. Julian added sixteen stops as well as his interception, and Brian Kisoc had another 36 participations. Brent Brown was added nine tackles and sack. Matt Friedman earned most of the special teams player of the week for his punt block and his ensuing touchdown.

This Saturday the Lords and Ladys will take to Oberlin in search of their 11-5 win in their second win. This is the same Oberlin team that forfeited this past weekend against Wittenberg.

Oberlin's losing streak is currently at 26 games. The Lords hope to make this 27th Saturday at Oberlin.
Kenyon Crew Takes Bronze Medal at Speakmon Regatta

By Joe Meredith

Here is a quest for you, the Kenyon athlete or spectator. Name an obscure Kenyon team which has brought glory and a most impressive record to Gambier. It is a team with 19 coaches, five members, almost no money, no organization and a wooden boat. It is Kenyon crew.

Few people know about it, but Kenyon crew exists, and here it is. There are five members of the team. Pent oarsmen are senior Leo "Ponch" Lopez and sophomore Randy "that's really not equivalent to the gross expenditure" Davies. Starboard oarsmen are senior Westy "unfeatured" Faison and junior Jen "can, I make a suggestion?" Meredeth. Susie "I got the power" Thaur sits in the coxswain seat.

Field Hockey Ends Season With 1-0 Loss to Wooster, Records 8 Victories

By Charles Sauter

The Ladies wound up the season last Saturday with a flourish. In perhaps the most exciting game of the year, the Scots of Wooster squared past the Ladies by a score of 1-0. The conclusion of the season brought with it an 8-11 overall record for this year's team. This record breaks down into an 0-5 record into account last year's 7-14-2 total. In fact, the Ladies notched their best record since 1989 when they placed second in the NCAC at 13-4-1.

The Ladies arrived in their color-coordinated bus with the hopes of securing conference. These two teams last met on October 3, when Wooster won in double overtime, 1-0. The game promises to be close, and it delivered.

Kenyon will remember this game as one full of missed opportunities. At one point early in the game, Kenyon benefited from four consecutive penalty corners, yet they failed to capitalize on any of them. However, the Lady's crop passing kept Wooster on the defensive.

The Ladies saw perhaps their best opportunity to score doused by an alert Wooster defender fifteen minutes into the game. The Ladies inbounded the ball off of a penalty corner and executed two clean passes, which drew the goalie out of net. When the shot was taken, the goalie watched helplessly as the ball whistled past her. Unfortunately, the defender had filled the void left by the goalie and promptly stopped and cleared the ball cleanly. The game sawed throughout the remainder of the period.

Wooster roared out of the gates to start the second half. They drove the length of the field with what looked like enough momentum to break the tie. However, in a game that could have been billed as a duel of goalies, no score came easy. The Ladies stopped Wooster's drive and turned it around.

In the ensuing melee around the Wooster goal, the Ladies missed two wide open shots on goal. If the Scots' league-leading goalie, Becky Tederson, exhibited any weakness on this day, it took shape in her tendency to move furtive of the net. This resulted in open net shots, but the Ladies could not score.

The Ladies paid for their inability to capitalize on their opportunities when the Scots scored the only goal of the game 11 minutes into the second half. The ball appeared to deflect off of a Kenyon defender before rolling into the goal. The Lady's offense was stymied.

"It was unfortunate that the goal was scored," said Coach Eichner, "but the best thing about that was we never stopped. Brenda Meese, the opposing coach, even said that Kenyon came back even harder when they were down a goal." The Scots scored twice within the final 10 minutes of the game. Tederson's performance was remarkable, and it seemed like the briefest of flurries for Kenyon.

There was about an hour between that race and the novice qualifying heats. The novice entries consist of college varsity, J.V., and more ex-varsity club crews. By race the team felt like it had worked out all its butterflies. Leo got a nap, Westy and Jen had a few donuts and Randy paced around mumbling and sweating. Susie had a critical strategy for the start so Kenyon hopped out across the starting line focused and driving.

Any athlete knows what it is like when everything clicks and things feel good, and that sensation is nowhere more apparent than in a four man crew shell. When the balance and smoothness of each oarsman's stroke are just right, everyone's legs are driving as hard as they can, the coxswain is screaming her head off, and you are gaining in the boat that left the start 15 seconds before you, it is simply intense. A lot of time, hard work, picked adjustments, pain, and concentration paid off on that race: the team thought it rowed well.

However, the team was not expecting to be on the list of six finalists at all, and so they were bit surprised to see their name on the board in the fourth place position.

Soon the novice results were up. Again, Kenyon placed fourth. The team was excited but they knew a message had been sent. First, the Scots, who had qualified had probably not been rowing their hardest in the heats and would likely crush us in the finals. Second, Kenyon had a good shot at winning a medal in the novice category. The team scratched its entry for the open and went to the novice regatta. The finals were a straight race, meaning all six boats line up across the river, and the race starts when all the shells are perfectly aligned and ready to go.

It was Susie's job to get the crew lined up, and she did a great job, which was not easy considering a strong headwind and huge levels of tension. Kenyon got off to a good start but Thaur immediately had to react and place the boat nest in the lane because it was sliding over, and actually nicked the Kenyon boat.

The team rowed hard and was coming into the homestretch yards when near disaster struck. One of the judges in a following launch called, "Weight enough," which is the crew term for "stop right now." A Westy boat pulled a sharp maneuver around a buoy which caused Kenyon to fea few feet from broadsiding them. Even after a complete stop, Kenyon resumed and finished with a strong sprint.

The team was quite spent and filed a formal protest against West Virginia. The judges held a trial with the U.S. Rowing officials, but they pointed out a mistake in Kenyon's lane movements which rendered the complaint invalid.

But guess what? After all that bullshit did you actually think Kenyon would come away empty handed? No way, mid race all still, and the crew won the bronze medal.

The Speakmon was the only race Kenyon crew could enter this fall. Last spring, damage to the fragile boat caused it to be taken to Canada for repairs. It won't be around for another year. And so, another problem with being a new and self-running program is that the club didn't get invited to the biggest races on the various fall regattas.

The spring is the official crew season, and Kenyon will be out to spank some boats. Hopefully by then, there will be a woman's boat as well. Next time you hear us whispered through Peirce and Gerard that Kenyon girls will be rowing some body of water into fresh, suck it up and make the road trip, or at least with the Lords (and Ladies), another stunning victory.

Knox County Democrats Say Thank You!

Bush-121 Clinton-390 Perot-51

Village of Gambier

John Ryerson, Precinct Committeeman

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

Senior Kelley Wilder won last week's NCAC championships in a course record time of 19:18.4. For her efforts she was named NCAC Runner of the Year.
ET CETERA

ELECTIONS continued from page one
I don’t like the idea of nationalized health care for several reasons.

I believe it is important to keep students aware of what Bush would do, but I’m scared of what Clinton might do.

Most agreed that this election was important to students. Loren Lease said, "My future depends on the next four years. If we can have a President who doesn’t care how I feel, nothing will be better for me."

They also agreed that there was a large part in this year. Although most agree that it was biased toward Clinton, they do not feel it was a fair vote.

Mohr called the media “horrible. People are too influenced by what others say.”

Gundlach countered. She said, "Dakaz-kis never responded to Bush’s mudslinging; the media took care of that for Clinton. In my opinion, that is a good thing, even though it is not unbiased reporting.”

Many cast their vote by absentee ballot. They cast their votes because they wanted to have their vote represented at home. Many were concerned about Senate races, where history was made this year. According to "The Washington Post," "the votes were a "sharp increase in the numbers of women, blacks and Hispanic lawmakers."" Many students voted by absentee ballot in her hometown of Illinois to show her support for Senate candidate Carol Moseley-Braun. She won her race. Said Blum, "The year of the woman has begun."

Leaze, who voted in New Jersey said, "New Jersey is a swing state. Every vote for Clinton counted." This logic was also used by those who decided to register in Ohio. Those who were sure about the direction in which their home state would go preferred to vote in Ohio, a swing state that ended up providing the crucial votes.

Some students did not vote. Kip Conlon said, "Although I’m pretty happy with the results, I didn’t get to vote, I never got an absentee ballot. They never sent it. I feel bad that I was not in some way responsible, but Clinco won. So, I’ll pretend I voted." Upon hearing the news of Clinton’s win, an overwhelming positive response could be heard throughout campus, including tears, cheers and cheering.

PAC continued from page one
service. Ninety percent of seniors used the programs. We would like to encourage students to use the programs that are available.

Senior year, there is pressure from friends, students, and parents, and the job choices may be influenced by what others think.”

Social workers encouraged the use of the CDC for summer job information. There is also an extern program for nurses and junior to explore jobs during breaks, and the Career Network, made up of over 3000 alumnus and parents, to assist students.

Low concluded, "We are very lucky that the administration is so supportive of our council. The council is very active in helping in student life." The next PAC meeting will be this spring.

PALASH continued from page one
nothing elicits the connections with someone that she can actually see. However, she hasn’t discovered how to reach her eyes to what happens on stage. How can it be that a community which goes into a frenzy for the use of another’s language cannot blind accept a public performance of this nature?

She has a very talented group of men and has worked hard to earn the respect which musically they deserve. But, this community is not a community unless it turns its back on behavior which it claims to abhor in other situations.

This community has a responsibility in this matter, Rebecca Palash ‘93

November 5, 1992

CADDEN continued from page two were fascinating. Students at the event included Patricia, who said, "I think it was a great experience." She believes there should be more events like this at the university.

Sincerely,
Joan Cadden

DELUCA continued from page three

my favorite characters, but she doesn’t know how to explain why. She said, "I think they are my favorite because they are the ones I can relate to the most." She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is important to have more stories from the perspective of the demons because they are a part of the story."

She would like to see more stories about the relationships between the characters.

She also suggested that more stories should be written from the perspective of the demons.

She said, "I think it is importa