Kenyon Collegian - October 19, 1989

Recommended Citation
https://digital.kenyon.edu/collegian/759

Follow this and additional works at: https://digital.kenyon.edu/collegian
6.9 Earthquake
Destroys Parts of Northern California

Pianist Eskin Delights
Audience with 19th Century Repertoire

The Kenyon Collegian
Established 1856
Volume CXVII, Number 5

Thursday, October 19, 1989

In Memorials of Professor Warner

H. Landon Warner, a professor of history at Kenyon College from 1946 until his retirement in 1973, died Friday afternoon, October 13, at Knox Community Hospital after a long illness. A resident of Gambier, he was 87.

Warner was born in Cleveland, Ohio, on May 21, 1911, to Hoyt Landon and Fay (Jether) Warner of University Heights. A 1932 graduate of Harvard College, he went on to earn his master's degree and doctorate there after working for seven years with W.H. Warner and Company, a coal mining operation.

Warner saw World War II service with the U.S. Navy from 1942 to 1945, when he was discharged as a lieutenant commander. He served as a communications officer on the staff of Commander Transport Squadron Twelve in the Pacific Theater, where he participated in the initial landings on several islands and in the surrender of Nagasaki.

Warner received an honorary doctorate of humane letters degree from Kenyon in 1973, when he retired as Henry M. Weaver Memorial Professor of History after twenty-seven years of service to the College.

Gambier gets an ATM Machine

By Theresa Gormley

An automatic teller machine (ATM) which will allow students with an account at the First Knox National to get cash around the clock and perform other transactions is available.

The automatic teller machine is the result of an idea conjointly conceived by the College and the bank. Kenyon opened bidding for the service at Fann Hall to all area banks. First Knox National won the right to rent, and thus, has become the only real competition of the Peoples Bank of Gambier. The machine will allow students to get the quick, last minute cash that is not easily available with the limited hours of the bank which once had a monopoly in Gambier. Joseph Nelson, vice-president for finance, who leased the space at Fann Hall to First Knox says, "I think it's going to be a nice addition to the community.

The manufacturer of the "Wizard" ATM promised its installation by Oct. 17, but the equipment had not been delivered, as of Oct. 21.

Dean Strives for Racially Aware Campus

By Kate Breuzel

Wanted: Assistant Dean for Student Support Services. Mila P. Collins, a graduate of Miami University, is looking for someone who is interested in working with students and faculty to improve campus life.

Collins, a former student at Kenyon, where she was involved in student affairs, says she is interested in improving campus life and providing support for minority and international students.

As the job is also new to Kenyon this year, Collins feels that she is "largely responsible for shaping and deciding the direction of the position because it is newly created. I have a job description which I don't think is set in stone." She expects that both she and the job will be evaluated to see which areas are the strongest and which are the weakest.

Collins received an undergraduate degree from Indiana University of Pennsylvania in communications. After working in that field for a while, she went to graduate school. "When I went back to school, I had to pick up some additional credits. I was older than most of the students there and they looked up to me and came to me for advice," she said. "So when I was looking for a master's program, student affairs seemed like the obvious choice for me because it involves some counseling and advising, and also puts me back into the education field which I was initially interested in."

Collins enjoys being a contact with the students at Kenyon. "I don't see myself as an authority figure over students. I see myself as a support system, as a friend, as a listener, as a counselor," she said. She and the other deans work closely together as a team. She also works closely with the students. "I see myself as being available for any Kenyon student... I would like to think I have a good rapport with most of the students I work with." She likes the fact that Kenyon is a small college; it especially enables her to form personal relationships with many students.

But being close with the students sometimes means that she does not always get to work. She lives on campus and takes work home with her at times. Students often come to see her in the evening, forgetting that she's not always at work.

The variety of her work also keeps her extremely busy. She loves the fact that she never has an average day; all of her days are different. For instance, she is involved in...
Protection or Intrusion?

Upon arriving at Kenyon, each student looks forward to personal growth and developing a mature, responsible college experience. However, the environment of Kenyon, as well as academic development in general, requires students to be responsible and mature in their decision-making. This responsibility includes the ability to balance personal freedom with the need for safety and security.

This is a delicate balance that requires careful consideration and understanding. It is important to recognize that while students may desire freedom and autonomy, they also need a sense of security and safety. This is particularly true in a college setting, where students are away from home and must navigate a new social environment.

The administration of Kenyon College understands this balance and is committed to creating an environment that supports both personal growth and safety. They have implemented policies and procedures to ensure that students feel safe and secure while also allowing for the freedom and autonomy that are essential to the college experience.

Both the administration and students have a responsibility to uphold these policies and procedures. It is important for students to understand and follow the rules in order to ensure a safe and healthy environment for everyone on campus.

The Readers Write

To the Editors:

The theme of this year's National College Alcohol Awareness Week at Kenyon is "Alcohol...Know Your Alternatives." Because a couple of common myths about alcohol are the only "true" events are those where alcohol plays a dominant role and that one's life is in danger, we feel that this is an opportune time to share some thoughts on alcohol and social life at Kenyon.

Take a few minutes to analyze your first six weeks over. How much time did you spend socializing? Did you accomplish what you wanted to? Did you enjoy yourself?

Clearinghouse Addresses Concerns

During the Commission on Student Life forum on Sept. 19 and the Campbell Marker Clearinghouse reception on Sept. 21, the Clearinghouse found several primary concerns within the student body. These concerns need to be noted and examined.

Concerns of the student body are focused on the use of external sources as resources on which the Commission based its recommendations. In other words, does the Commission assume a role of authority that reflects the needs and concerns of the present student body, faculty, and administration, or does the report reflect findings from other institutions?

This concern is seen from three areas. The first is that only 38 percent of the students responded to the questionnaire; students are questioning the ability of this percentage to actually represent the concerns of the entire institution. In addition, students note that the Commission overlooked a great deal at the workings of other institutions. Though these other institutions have many features statistically similar to Kenyon, the students attending the forum and the members of the Commission have expressed fear that the Commission was attempting to change the nature and character of Kenyon to reflect the characteristics of the report. In other words, are the recommendations attempting to make changes for the benefit of Kenyon, or to change Kenyon into another institution? Finally, student concern about the validity of the report is focused on the Commission's use (or lack of use) of internal sources rather than on the questionnaire. As the questionnaire had only a 38 percent response rate, did the Commission seek out other sources for internally examining the quality of life at Kenyon? Each of these three issues centers around the primary concern that the Commission relied more heavily on outside sources than on the sources within the Kenyon community.

Not to ignore these fundamental concerns, there is nevertheless, as expressed in the forum, a more immediate concern within the student body. It is beneficial to voice opinions and concerns? Are these critiques of the format and findings of the Commission even at issue? There is concern that these findings are "a token," and thus a few students' desire to be heard. There is great skepticism among many students, who believe that decisions to implement these recommendations have already been made. Another significant concern voiced by the students is that when these recommendations are implemented, once approved, will actually be implemented. Students believe that there is little information given, in the report, or elsewhere, which indicates whether these recommendations might be implemented. This lack of information leaves students under a time frame within which they are not able to envision potential changes. Moreover, the lack of information seems to stimulate concern that the Commission is only making recommendations, but does not actually have the power to implement any of the recommendations. In fact, student attitudes toward the report could be legitimately described as hostile.

Students also question the feasibility and the practicality of the recommendations. Why would the Commission itself believe these proposed changes to student life at Kenyon could ever take place if the composition of the student body remains similar to what it has been in the past? Furthermore, once the College has decided to implement some of all of the recommendations, their priority is decided in terms of which changes will be implemented first?

In conclusion, the question is on both the side of the students and the side of the Commission. Students wonder, for example, what is the "presumed good" in the charge that was brought to the Commission? This says it all:

Campbell page eight

Editor Resigns

Dear Collegian Editors:

I am writing to announce that I have resigned as Editor of The Kenyon Journal. After considerable reflection over the past several months, I have decided that the personal and professional responsibilities that come with the position of Editor do not align with my current priorities.

I have been fortunate to work with a dedicated team of editors, writers, and photographers who have contributed to the success of the Journal. I am grateful for the opportunity to have been a part of the publication and to have had the chance to shape the content and direction of the paper.

While I am stepping down from my role as Editor, I wish the Journal and its future leaders good fortune.

Sincerely,

Cliff Weber

Professor Agrees with Fewer Weeks

To the Editorial Staff:

I am pleased to announce that I have been appointed as Editor of The Kenyon Journal. I believe that my background in journalism and my passion for writing make me an ideal fit for this position.

I am excited to work with the talented team of writers and editors who contribute to the Journal weekly. Together, we will continue to produce engaging and informative content that reflects the diverse perspectives of our campus.

I look forward to working with you all and creating a strong legacy for The Kenyon Journal.

Sincerely,

Mark Lloyd

Professor

In conclusion, the question is on both the side of the students and the side of the Commission. Students wonder, for example, what is the "presumed good" in the charge that was brought to the Commission? This says it all:

Campbell page eight

Editor Resigns

Dear Collegian Editors:

I am writing to announce that I have resigned as Editor of The Kenyon Journal. After considerable reflection over the past several months, I have decided that the personal and professional responsibilities that come with the position of Editor do not align with my current priorities.

I have been fortunate to work with a dedicated team of editors, writers, and photographers who have contributed to the success of the Journal. I am grateful for the opportunity to have been a part of the publication and to have had the chance to shape the content and direction of the paper.

While I am stepping down from my role as Editor, I wish the Journal and its future leaders good fortune.

Sincerely,

Cliff Weber

Professor Agrees with Fewer Weeks

To the Editorial Staff:

I am pleased to announce that I have been appointed as Editor of The Kenyon Journal. I believe that my background in journalism and my passion for writing make me an ideal fit for this position.

I am excited to work with the talented team of writers and editors who contribute to the Journal weekly. Together, we will continue to produce engaging and informative content that reflects the diverse perspectives of our campus.

I look forward to working with you all and creating a strong legacy for The Kenyon Journal.

Sincerely,

Mark Lloyd

Professor
AI Research Turns Thoughts to Human Intelligence

By Joe Gerhardinger

All of these distinct intellectual pursuits fed into the river which is AI today, and an understanding of them helps to explain the differing goals within the AI research community. The AI researcher would commonly most promising path to take is to model what occurs in the body with neural networks. Loosely speaking, the brain's biological parts are replaced with electrical ones.

There is none of the traditional computer programs of the computer science world such as a model of the brain which after a model is completed, tests cases of data are entered and the data goes through the system, following the paths which were mickeyed from the actual biological example. This training is an adaptation of what occurs in trying to teach a human child to recognize letters of the alphabet, for instance. The child will learn what a perfect example of the letter "A" looks like, but in later cases recognize the similarities in letters drawn slightly different. The child is a computer's modeling of an every intelligent system.

Energetic Eskin Tickles Ivory with Several Piano Genres

By Joe Gerhardinger

Providing, a society for the glee 800 Friday movie in Rosie Hall was pianist Virginia Eskin. Her George Gund Concert was also sponsored by the Department of Music and the Faculty Librarians. Eskin's performance consisted mainly of nineteenth century works, when she closed with some examples of later tangos and tango piano.

The nineteenth century, considered as the golden age for piano music, was a time of many famous virtuoso pianists. Eskin started the concert with songs of Felix Mendelssohn and Fanny Mendelssohn. The Romps Without Words. She sought to place the audience in the presence of the composer's mind, and the music of the age, which she has often played, has been a valuable part of our musical education. Almost the total reverse was true in the 1930s.

While each piece in her first set maintained the same mood throughout, not the one in her second set of Schubert's Impromptu in F minor or Amy Beach's Variations on a Balkan Theme. The Schubert selection was rhaphadic, freer of form, and contained many moods, while that of Eskin's. Of particular execution was the first movement of Schubert's characteristic major-minor, which was the case. The Any Beach selection contained many variations on a theme and a continuous effectiveness of Schubert's characteristic major-minor, which was the case. The Any Beach selection contained many variations on a theme and a continuous effectiveness of Schubert's characteristic major-minor, which was the case. The Any Beach selection contained many variations on a theme and a continuous effectiveness of Schubert's characteristic major-minor, which was the case.

Tangos of Ernesto Nazareno. The strongly rhythmic and syncopated rhythms enabled the left hand to be characteristic of this genre. She entertained and loosened up the audience with the robust dances as her body movement blended with the movements at the piano.

Her finale consisted of examples of dances piano written by two women, May Alford and Isadora. It is worth note that the genre of music is most associated with male pianists, and of special consideration is the judgment that these works are so much more musical and serious than the music of Menotti. It is recognized as a set, the music of Menotti, and the music of Menotti, which was the case.

Cat's Paw Portrays 'Real Life Nightmare' on Stage

By Kay Lutzen

A group of college students congregated for several hours on a Friday or Saturday night, concentrating on something other than drinking or schoolwork. In the delightful weekend's production of William Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing, the audience was treated to two of the most enjoyable shows of the season. Actors of the theater: an audience, filled mainly with students and interspersed with a few parents, professors, and other theater-goers, a stage, a set, and a group of actors and actresses.

Where, then, did this production differ from the genre? What set Cat's Paw apart is the combination of the bizarre and the realistic color of a living, a continuous parade of events, hence the case. The combination of various variations included dance-likes elements, particularly the waltz, and many passages in which Eskin could show off her polished technique in playing with the fire and gracefulness which one associates with things Russian.

Closing out the "classic" section of her concert were selections from the Streeps of Schirin and Chepina. The song "Eduke" originally denoted a piece of piano music written for practice in composition, a particular melody, but Eskin's performance of this

After an astonishing career spanning six decades, John Huston completed a lifelong dream, a film adaptation of "The Dead" by James Joyce. Joyce, the celebrated Irish writer, had been a decisive influence upon the young John Huston, who had long fancied bringing to the screen this particular novel, the concluding story of a collection entitled Dubliners.

There were other reasons, too, reasons of the heart. Huston maintained an enduring love for Ireland and its people, manifested by the Irish passport he carried until his death in August 1987. He had lived there during the 1950s and 1960s in a manor house in Galway and though he ultimately retired to America, he remained true to the Emerald Isle. "Ireland is my real home. There was an honesty and a kind of poetic quality I liked among the country people. Every so often I feel a pang of real longing for my house in St. Cleer," he stated in the summer of 1987 after completing The Dead.

He desired to pay homage to this land and its people—to leave behind a tangible legacy of his feelings and appreciation. There was as well a fierce determination to bestow upon his children another kind of legacy—a gift of his accumulated wisdom, experience, and vision which could be shared only through experience.

For those reasons, and perhaps others more personal and transcendental, Huston began working on The Dead in 1986. His son, Tony, was engaged to write the screenplay and his daughter, Angelica, to play a leading role. The large cast was entirely Irish and Huston's behind-the-camera team included many of his long time and trusted collaborators.

The Dead was completed in late spring of 1987 and Huston proudly exhibited the film in numerous screenings to friends and colleagues. The Dead is a celebration of life, yet also an acknowledgments of death.

Fri. 10:00 p.m./Sun. 2:00 p.m.

The Day the Earth Stood Still

It's 1951 in Washington, D.C., and a flying saucer lands in the city. Its occupant looks like any other D.C. businessman, once he changes out of his silver suit, but nearly everyone who sees him is from outer space is terrified—in part because of his huge robot companion. He has arrived with a message of warning about what will happen if war does not end. Of course, he refuses to elaborate unless he can speak with representatives from every nation, which creates major problems.

Enjoyment of The Day the Earth Stood Still goes far beyond the plot (which is actually far more interesting than my little synopsis above). This movie is absolutely classic in terms of being one of the late night black-and-white to be watched when you could sleep if you wanted, but you just don't feel like it. Effects are impressive if not exciting, with a minimum of tricks but a lot of conviction. Don't take the film as seriously as it takes itself. Just enjoy...—Stephanie Kino

Fri. 8:00 p.m./Sat. 10:00 p.m.

Alien

Everyone knows the scene where the crew of a space freighter are sitting around a table eating dinner. One of the crew, a tall gaunt man named Cain (John Hurt), was attacked by an alien which latched onto his face and put him in a coma. It dropped off later, apparently dead, and Ash (Ian Holm) the science officer says Cain's fine, so he's eating dinner with everyone else, sitting right across from Ripley (Sigourney Weaver) and stuffing his face like he never has before.

Suddenly, he goes into convulsions and blood jet from his mouth. With a hurried wet crack, Cain's chest explodes, and some strange alien worm looks out from the gory remains of his ribcage. The crew are stunned, and the monster escapes. They are now trapped with a vicious predator on the loose, one that Ash tells them is more than they can ever hope to kill.

When Aliens came out, I was nine years old and never went to see movies like this. Within days, I knew all about this scene; Siskel and Ebert even did a special program on it. I didn't see the film for many years, because I figured it would be too scary for me. When I finally saw it two years ago, it still was. This is one of the greatest horror films of all time, so good its pretense became a cliché almost the day it was released. Don't miss it. Bring a friend and get fresh batteries in the placemaker—Mike Dow

Sat. 10:00 p.m./Sun. 2:00 p.m.
The Work of A Summer Science Scholar

By Dean Mila P. Collins

The American College Personnel Association (ACPA) has designated the week of Oct. 23-29, National Week by Careers in Student Affairs. The purpose is to encourage students to consider a career in this dynamic field.

On Oct. 24, members of the Student Affairs staff will present a program entitled "Careers in Student Affairs." It will be held in Prince Lounge at 7:00 p.m.

What is Student Affairs?

Student affairs professionals have the common mission: to foster the growth and development of their students, to provide a range of services and programs in collaboration with student interests and needs and to manage a dynamic environment.

If you enjoy creating, leading, organizing, developing, educating, coordinating, advising, recruiting, programming, working with student groups, and providing learning experiences outside the classroom setting, then a career in student affairs may be for you.

There are many graduate programs in college student affairs. The Ohio State University, Bowling Green University and Indiana University of Pennsylvania just to name a few. Most programs combine learning student and human development theory with hands-on practical experience in a Student Affairs Office.

If you are interested in learning more about this profession, attend the program on Oct. 24.

Female Cast Celebrates Twentieth

Les Belles Soeurs a play with an all-woman cast by Michel Tremblay, one of Canada’s leading playwrights, will be the first production of the year by the Kenyon College Dramatic Club. Les Belles Soeurs will be performed on Friday and Saturday, Oct. 20 and 21, and Oct. 27 and 28 at 8:00 p.m. in Kenyon’s Bolton Theater on Park Street.

First staged in 1968 at Theatre du Rideau Vert in Montreal, Les Belles Soeurs has been performed in both French and English in Canada, New York, London and Paris. According to Harlene Marley, professor of French at Kenyon and the production’s director, the play is about a woman who wins a million trading stamps in a lottery and invites friends, neighbors and family members over to help her paste them up. During a riotous stamp-pasting party, long suppressed conflicts come to the fore and result in a knock-down-drag-out fight in a blizzard of stamps. Marley says that the play was selected because “it is funny and gives us a glimpse of working class life in Canada, unfamiliar to most of us; and because it is appropriate to have a play with an all-female cast during this, the twentieth anniversary of women at Kenyon.” There are 15 cast members in all. Germaine, the woman who wins the stamps, is played by Mary E. McCarthy ’91.

WKCO’s Top Ten Progressive Playlist

1. Syd Straw—Think Too Hard—Surprise
2. Michelle Shocked—On the Greener Side—12 inch
3. The Primitives—Sick of It—12 inch
4. B-52’s—Love Shack—Cosmic Thing
5. Lucinda Williams—Passionate Kisses—12 inch
6. Red Hot Chili Peppers—Knock Me Down—Mother’s Milk
7. Jesus and Mary Chain—Blues From a Gun—12 inch
8. Marshall Crenshaw—Some Hearts—Good Evening
9. The Eurythmics—Baby’s Gonna Cry—12 inch
10. Kate Bush—The Sensual World—The Sensual World

KENYISH—The Cartoon That Says “Yes I Can, If Frank Sinatra Says It’s OK.”

WHAT? CALL IT OFF?? WHY??
WHAT CAN WE CONSIDER BOTH PERSPECTIVES, YOU DUMB NON-PROGRESSIVE BUDDOON?? YOU ETHNOCENTRIC WORM!!

THIS IS A LIBERAL ARTS SCHOOL!! FOR GOD’S SAKE BE OPEN Minded!! WHAT’S THE FEMALE ATTITUDE, TOWARDS THE FOOD??

NO WONDER PEOPLE DON’T LISTEN TO JAZZ ANYMORE.

* * *

THE SENSUAL WORLD

OFF, RICH, WORKING CLASS FEMALE AS I SO I’M OFFENDED BY THAT GOD DAMN WORD."
Creighton’s ‘Four for the Road’ Leads Lords, 27-19

By Chris Munster

“As far as pure passing attack, yeah, I think he deserves to be the best quarterback because that’s what we do.”—Coach Meyer on Chris Creighton

It’s a good thing Kenyon did not have to rely on quarterback Chris Creighton’s running ability on Saturday. However, the Lords did not mind the efficient use of Creighton’s arm.

Creighton threw four touchdowns passes (15, 4, 18, and 3 yards) to lead Kenyon to a 27-19 victory against the Oberlin Yeomen last Saturday. After a 0-3-1 start, they are currently 2-3-1, and 2-1 in the NCAC.

Creighton has been bothered by a strained left ankle, “a minor injury,” according to Coach Meyer.

So instead, they left the running to an unfamiliar name to many, but well-known to the coaches of the Lords. Junior Adam Bortz ran for 76 yards on 14 carries on the afternoon. “We knew Adam was a pretty good player all along,” commented Meyer. Bortz began the year injured so his rise has come recently. “When you’re hurt, you’re hurt, you’re victimized by it,” said Meyer. But he has been bothered around—throwing tailback, wide receiver, and back to both tailback and fullback.

His biggest moment came just before halftime. On a 2nd and 25 from Oberlin’s 49, he was practically untouched up the middle for 31 yards. The very next play saw Mark Lontchar make an 18-yard reception for a touchdown that gave Kenyon a 24-13 lead with only .45 left in the first half.

Ah, yes, Mark Lontchar. Last week it was proved that this season would be anything but grabbing some headlines. Well, it didn’t take him long to make good on that statement. He came into this game with one reception in limited time over the past two games. He left Oberlin with four catches and 76 yards, along with two touchdows on the day.

The first quarter of this game was brought to us by Paul Beeker and Dan Smith, the punters for both sides. While Smith made Beeker four punts to two, Kenyon saved the end of this. “You take it, no you take it” quarter to mount their first scoring drive.

As soon as Kenyon gained their own 44, they immediately put themselves into a 2nd and 20 hole, following a holding call. However, receiver Ted Taggart did a heck of a holding job. Holding on to the ball, actually. His acrobatic catch up the right sidelines for a 33-yard gain put Kenyon in touchdown range.

After a 3-yard run by Elmer Decipeda, Kenyon went back to the air. On a 2nd and 7, Creighton’s fade pattern throw for Lontchar fell incomplete, but they right back to Lontchar. Instead of another fad, they ran a slant-in for a 15-yard touchdown. It looked like Kenyon actually used the fade to set up an inside route. But, it’s really dependent on some “speed reading.”

“A lot of it has to do with what Chris reads,” Creighton and Lontchar got together to give Kenyon a 7-0 lead.

By Oberlin’s second drive of the second period, they must have stood pat on not sending Smith out again, for they went for a 4th and 18 from Kenyon’s 31. An underthrown ball over the middle by Yeoman quarterback Ed Lohmeier was good enough for receiver Craig Johnson, who adjusted to the ball for a 20-yard gain.

Two Mike McGee runs later, and Oberlin had tied the game at 7-7 with 9:36 left in the second period.

Creighton did not waste Kenyon’s next chance, for James Rodd’s, 19-yard return brought the ball out to Kenyon’s 35. Good things came in pairs for the Lords’ drive.

Two Taggart receptions, and two costly Oberlin penalties netted 40 yards. Back on Decipeda’s 16-yard reception in the right flat and his 5-yard run on 2nd and goal from the 1.

Runners Looking to Conference

By Charles Huh

Heat became a factor last Friday for the Kenyon Cross Country teams as they ran in the Ohio Invitational at OWU. The hilly course, along with the heat, produced slower times for both Lords and Ladies. The temperature read 84 degrees at race time.

Despite these unfavorable conditions, there were some good performances turned in by various runners. Senior Paul Worland came in at 28:30, fastest among the Lords. Sophomores Greg Melville and Mark Yatcha were one of the top seven Lords, making varsity for the first time this season. Sophomore Kara Berghold (19:31) and Junior Tracey Fatzinger (20:35) made all-Ohio by finishing in the top twenty. Freshman Jodie Shab finished fifth among the Ladies, running in her first meet since injuring her leg early in the season.

Because of the tough course, Coach Duane Giammi noted that this was the “type of meet where you can’t base anything on time, just placement.” The Lords finished 14th overall (out of 24 teams) and ninth among division III schools. The Ladies finished fifth overall and 2nd in Division III.

Worland was content with his performance, considering the circumstances, “I was relatively satisfied because the heat was intense and I ran rather well, even though I didn’t run up to my full potential.”

Senior Ken Wempe succumbed to the temperatures in the last mile, explaining, “the heat really got to me.”

The heat also got to Fatzinger, who described the race as "hot and hilly". Even though the course was difficult, Fatzinger said that the meet was a “good race because there was always someone to run with.”

With conference coming up in two weeks, Wempe doesn’t seem any reason to worry about the team’s temporary setback. He thinks the Lords should be able to place in the top five at conference. In order to do that, Wempe says, “We’re gonna have to place in the top five and get the others off the doorstep. In what has become a customary procedure, Creighton kicked with Taggart on a fake to the right side of Kenyon now lead 14-7 with 7:04 remaining in the half.

If the first quarter was “You take it, no you take it,” then be assured that back he said “You score, now we score” during his second quarter.

Oberlin followed up Kenyon’s weak statement with its own rebuttal. They were mixing it up and pass, as well as using the Lafayette penalties totaling 25 yards, to go through Kenyon’s 17. It had a 3rd and 14 at the half. Quarterback Ed Lohnes looked off his receiver in the middle to fire a scoring pass to the right side. Oberlin’s extra-point attempt was blocked, so they still trailed at 14-13 with 3:51 remaining in the half. The time, it could have looked big, but Kenyon marched down the field, using both running and Lontchar’s receiving.

The opportunity possible when free safety Duillo Benigni picked off a Lohnes’ pass and returned it to his own 40.

Following that score, Oberlin had to respond before the half, and Kenyon was 21-13.

The quantity of touchdows scored in the first half (5) paled in comparison to the amount of penalties and penalty yards each team had accumulated. It was finally Houston Oilers playing,well, the Lords are ONE FOOTBALL page eight

Volleyball in ‘Right Frame of Mind’

By Scott Jarrett

The Kenyon volleyball team split NCAC matches last weekend, losing to defending league champion Allegheny 7-15, 14-16, then bouncing back to defeat Ohio Wesleyan 15-3, 15-12, 15-7.

Head Coach Gretchen Weitbrecht had mixed feelings about the team’s play. “I think we did not play after we had won, we did not play very sound defense, we kind of played out of position,” she commented about the loss to Allegheny.

Junior outside hitter Chelsea Andresen voiced a similar opinion. “We should have beaten them, but there was too much of a confusion on the floor and we had different people in new positions. I think we played around tournament time, we didn’t beat them,” remarked Andresen.

In the second match the Ladies dropped the first game to host team Ohio Wesleyan and things looked gloomy, but the squad rebounded to thwart the OWU attack.

“Volleyball, I was pretty pleased that we were able to get our momentum and our concentration back to secure the match.”

That’s the beauty of playing two out of three games.”

“Beth Taylor had a good game on the front line and I thought Keira Martin came in off the bench in the back court and really helped give us a spark,” said Weitbrecht. The matches made the Ladies’ record 2-2 in the NCAC and 16-12 overall.

Over halfway through the season junior Judy Hruska continues to excel, leading the team in kills (217), serve receptions (508), and solo blocks (11).

Also assisting the team is junior Jane Gerace with a 99.1% rate of serving, while freshman Kelly Raymond tops the squad in block assists (139).

Tomorrow at Tomsich Arena the team will continue league play, as they battle Oberlin and Wittenberg.

The Ladies have not yet seen the play of Wittenberg, but defeated Oberlin in a tough three game match at the GLCA tournament early in the season.

Concerning Oberlin, Weitbrecht said, “I have as much respect for their team as anyone else. We can take either of those teams lightly. I just hope that we’re in the right frame of mind.”

SIX-YEAR CONFERENCE HOSTS KENYON TRACK team Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

Runners Looking to Conference

By Charles Huh

Heat became a factor last Friday for the Kenyon Cross Country teams as they ran in the Ohio Invitational at OWU. The hilly course, along with the heat, produced slower times for both Lords and Ladies. The temperature read 84 degrees at race time.

Despite these unfavorable conditions, there were some good performances turned in by various runners. Senior Paul Worland came in at 28:30, fastest among the Lords. Sophomores Greg Melville and Mark Yatcha were one of the top seven Lords, making varsity for the first time this season. Sophomore Kara Berghold (19:31) and Junior Tracey Fatzinger (20:35) made all-Ohio by finishing in the top twenty. Freshman Jodie Shab finished fifth among the Ladies, running in her first meet since injuring her leg early in the season.

Because of the tough course, Coach Duane Giammi noted that this was the "type of meet where you can't base anything on time, just placement." The Lords finished 14th overall (out of 24 teams) and ninth among division III schools. The Ladies finished fifth overall and 2nd in Division III.

Worland was content with his performance, considering the circumstances, "I was relatively satisfied because the heat was intense and I ran rather well, even though I didn't run up to my full potential.''

Senior Ken Wempe succumbed to the temperatures in the last mile, explaining, "the heat really got to me." The heat also got to Fatzinger, who described the race as "hot and hilly." Even though the course was difficult, Fatzinger said that the meet was a "good race because there was always someone to run with."

With conference coming up in two weeks, Wempe doesn't seem any reason to worry about the team's temporary setback. He thinks the Lords should be able to place in the top five at conference. In order to do that, Wempe says, "We're gonna have to place 2"
Booters Suffer Win-Streak-Ending Losses
By Jeff Kallert

The men's soccer team had its 9-game streak ended this past week, during two games, one to Wooster on Tuesday, and again, against Kenyon. Their record now stands at 9-3-2, after four games remaining in the season.

Wooster, Kenyon, and Marathon were all tied 3rd among the top conference teams, but had just defeated OWU, and who were looking forward to their tournament match, so they were the biggest challenge.

Tuesday's game saw Banda dribble to Kenyon and, on a wide, a shot taken by mid. Field. The shot was blocked, and the ball went to Banda. Fido, a long distance shot, was unable to get past the KEN guard. Kenyon's guard stood strong and gave up no goals.

The Lady's next game was against Ohio Wesleyan, and the Lady's offense was not as effective as it was during the previous game. The Lady's defense was solid, however, as they managed to hold the Lady's offense to a single goal.

In conclusion, the Lady's offense was not as effective as it was during the previous game, but their defense was solid, and they managed to hold the Lady's offense to a single goal.
Warner continued from page one
cluding several years as chairman of the history department. For his degree, in part, "With sparkle and devotion you have helped seven generations of Kenyon men and one of Kenyon women to continue with this nation's past. With sanity and charity you have led, guided, and soothed your often ruffled and confused colleagues. You have shown that civility is a part of wisdom and modesty a part of justness."

In retirement, Warner continued to be active in the community, serving as chair of a recent endowment campaign for Interchurch School, and as a senior warden of Harcourt Episcopal Parish.

Memorial contributions may be made to the H. Landon Warner Memorial Fund at Kenyon College or to Harcourt Parish.

ATM
continued from page one
1. "The Wizard" will be open to only people with accounts at First Koon. Their cards will be checked and other machines will not work on the machine at this time, although services may expand in the future.
2. An ATM campaign to attract new customers will soon be underway.
3. The ad should provide more information to students interested in obtaining access to the new machine and its services.

Frat
continued from page one
President Foor of the Campus SGA states, "How do you strike a balance between a security force which is simply useful and good for the campus and one which becomes intrusive and is felt by students to be an invasion of their legitimate privacy." There is no easy answer to striking such a balance. He adds that, "We don't want to be intrusive in matters of that sort and that probably means that some incidents which we regarded as bad escape our notice."

Instead of stepping up prevention by such measures as monitoring line-ups which would cause much controversy, Browning believes the new security force is "the longer term realization that develops over time that hazing is contrary to College rules. . . And that no one benefits from incidents of hazing." He also believes that the JFC is "precisely where leadership needs to be exerted" and that "If it is clear to the members that the leaders are not going to accept it then it probably won't happen."

Collins
continued from page one
The community leader is a student of Franklin Smith, and he helps the student's group to form, and he just coordinated the international students annual dinner, in addition to forming a monthly international table. Academically, she works on time management, a reading and study skill program, as well as developing a brochure which will tell students what kind of academic help is available.

Dean Collins also feels one of her roles is to "educate the community about racial awareness and cultural diversity issues." She works with faculty advising and advancement, counseling on general topics, such as the President's Advisory Council on cultural awareness, "Often times we like to dump all the minorities together, though, and there is a diversity within diversity." She said that since she is a person of color, she always enjoys working with other students of color. Her work with the international students also is "counterantagonistic." Although she feels the admissions department did a great job in increasing diversity, she would like to see more diversity in both Kenyon's student population and the faculty and staff.

Alcohol
continued from page two
the development of healthy relationships. Each person must choose, consistent with State Law and individual judgment, whether or not to use alcohol. Given the negative consequences of excessive alcohol use and the fact that a majority of those on campus can't drink legally, alcohol should never be the focus of any social event at Kenyon.

There are numerous activities on campus where alcohol is not the focus of the event, such as game nights, parties, and concerts.

Football
continued from page six
Oilers. Oberlin had 8 for 100 yards, and Kenyon 10 for 95. Kenyon had two more penalties, but Oberlin got more mileage to speak, out of their penalties. These are not flattering numbers.

The fourth quarter, conversely, reveals the defensive dominance for the Lords. On a 4th and 1 from midfield with about ten minutes to go, Oberlin barely gets its first down. Lents stalls and Kenyon gets its 3rd down again to boot the ball away.

However, two more decisive moments would put the game out of reach for Oberlin. With just 3:30 left in the game, and the Lords holding firmly to a 27-13 advantage, Oberlin goes to the 4th and 1 from its own 32. The refs knew that a measurement would not be necessary. The Yeomen did not even get back to the line of scrimmage. It was no wonder Coach Meyer would reflect on the game and say, "Defense wins the ball games for you." Except, they had not won the game quite yet.

With 2:15 left, Lohnes floated a ball for the end zone on a 3rd and 10. It was the textbook example of not throwing into tight coverage, for Ruby Deschipra had the outside covered, and Duffte Backert took away the inside of the receiver, and had his second interception of the day.

Oberlin's final four plays, with 1:12 left, seemed anti-climactic, for they three third down completions before the defense could say "game, set, [over]match[ed]."

Soccer
continued from page seven
Wallace field is Astro Turf. To make matters worse, Mohwer Nature added two more lightening to the game. Two members of the team playing on the wet field fell in a giant puddle. Footing was nowhere existent under the conditions. If it were not already enough against the Ladies, she was certainly after the officials seemed to favor a home team slant. Karen Chambellet raced to sum up the squads feelings about the game by saying simply "No comment."

It is nave to be expected to lose out of their minds as the end of the game approaches. The three squads must be on their toes. Saturday, the squad will visit Mount Union for a non-conference match. The Union match can be looked at as a tune-up game for the team's next game on Wednesday.

Rugby
continued from page seven
trip to the Shoppes to help increase the use of local businesses. After it was accomplished, it was time to take Highway 3, a mission in itself. The last leg, then, led north and along a saloon past a sign that read, "Road closed miles ahead." It was then time to take back roads and face the great Ohio oil to offer. Two more road construction zones and then they finally arrived in Waverly.

Oh, the game. Well, the team was a little later than anticipated (as usual), as half an hour to be exact, the game was on minutes behind, but a tough 50 minutes later Kenyon played well throughout the game demonstrating its good passing ability. The game had some problems at first, as the ball was learned that brute force was the only way to the Scos. The Scos scored their first try at the first half, on a questionable play in the half back yard. It was never clear whether Wouer player was down before he was in the try zone, just as it was not clear when the try zone was located. Kenyon did not give up, despite several unnecessary tackles by the Wouer team that left one made some very inventive cal that second half brought out a new Kenyon team that unfortunately missed score another try, which this time was undoubtedly. The Ladies came late in the game, as prop Rebecca Clark stated that this was "precisely where the Wouer needed to be in the game," and that the time inopportune out simply of handing the ladies their defeat.

The Shoppes
8:00 p.m.-2:00 a.m.
Located in the Basement of Peirce Hall
Weekly Specials as Follows:

We offer free video rentals while dining, pinball games, Juke Box, and popcorn is always free.

Monday Night Football Specials (see Manager)
Tuesday Night Steak & Potatoes with Salad Bar (5:30-7:30)
Friday Night All-you-can-eat-Pizza (8 p.m.-10 p.m.)

And the Shoppes is always available for special functions, social gatherings or just privacy for you and your friends