International biology conference convenes at Kenyon

By Jim Brock

On October 10 through 14, Kenyon College will be hosting an international biological conference, called the Kenyon-Renowned Conference on Development Biology. Funded by the National Foundation, this symposium will feature world-renowned experts in the field of developmental biology.

The idea for the conference came from Stephen Wachtel, a graduate of Kenyon and a researcher at the Sloan Kettering Cancer Research Institute in New York. Dr. E. Raymond Heitsch, Professor of Developmental Biology at Kenyon, assisted in the planning of the event. He stated that after Wachtel gave a lecture last year at Kenyon on biology, they both thought it a good idea to plan and organize a major symposium on biology at Kenyon. "Dr. Wachtel was responsible for bringing the experts to Kenyon, while I organized their stay at Kenyon," said Heitsch. He also noted that it was Wachtel who suggested the conference and that the lecturers are the leaders in their fields. He added that one expert scheduled to come could not because he was receiving a national award in developmental biology in Japan.

Dr. Francis Yow, also a professor of biology at Kenyon, said that the conference is for the participants as well as the students. "This conference is like those of the PACE, but it is also more, for it assists the researchers in learning about the experiments and work of their colleagues."

Heitsch noted that the conference is in part chance for people of international reputation to exchange ideas and thoughts of innovative research. He said that though much of the discussion will be on a high level, it will benefit anyone who is interested in biology. "This is an outstanding list of participants—they are experts in their field. These students who are not biology majors should not be intimidated because the lectures are of such high caliber. They cover the important and relevant questions of the day, and will benefit anyone who attends," he said. Heitsch added that students will especially cover new research, discussing such topics as what determines gender, chromosome abnormality, and genetic development.

In addition, Dr. Wachtel will be giving a presentation, as will Joan Strumwasser, the Assistant Provost at Kenyon. Students who wish to speak with any of the lecturers may do so at a dinner at the College at the announced times. They may be able to talk with a lecturer and ask questions in a one-to-one basis. Yow said that this would be especially helpful to biology majors.

Heitsch stated, "This conference is worthwhile because it is open people's eyes about Kenyon, it will expose the students to experts in developmental biology, and it will bring the researchers together, exchanging information and research ideas." Heitsch is hoping to bring the experts to the students by recruiting students to serve as guides for them, showing them the campus and answering any questions about Kenyon. He is also scheduling a canoe trip and a banquet for the researchers.

Yow added that he is preparing a report of the conference, and that it will appear in the next edition of the Alumni Bulletin.

IFC finds frat innocent

By Greg Perkins

At the October 3 Interfraternity Council meeting, the ruling on the three fraternity members that had been accused of pre-marring were announced.

The IFC Judicial Board handed down an innocent verdict for each of the four fraternity members involved: the A-D's, Pollux, and the Deks. The Pollux's and the Deks were found innocent "within the laws," they could not be found innocent under the existing rules. The Board stated that the actions of all the fraternity members were in the spirit of the guidelines governing rush, but because they had freshmen in their divisions before September 16.

The Judicial Board also realized the need for revision of the guidelines controlling the mating procedure. The existing rules are not specific enough to bring concrete charges against any offenders. Another problem discussed was the fact that freshmen have very little to do during the first week of school, which was proposed that more activities be scheduled for freshmen during that time period to keep them from looking for things to do around the fraternity divi-sions. These problems will be addressed by the IFC as soon as the rush period is over, preferably in November.

In other business, a heated debate en-sued over the fact that a Deke fraternity party is scheduled on Friday night, which conflicts with the IFC and Hamilton More Arens Fund Rallying Dance earlier in the week.

At large member Paul Hines, from the Deke fraternity, agreed not to have parties this Friday, in order to insure the success of the fund-raiser. However, he stated that the Deke fraternity has a local family of which there are Deke alumni, can only hold their annual farm party this Friday.

Many alternatives were discussed, but none could be completely agreed upon. It was finally decided that, since the party is given by the Brotherhood, the Deke's and not by the Deke's themselves, nothing could be done about it. The IFC has offered a special reservation to the Arthritis Foundation in order to make up for any lost revenue at the IFC dance due to the conflicting schedules.

Senate discusses Common Hour survey

By Diana Moe

The first Senate meeting was held on Wednesday, September 28. Student Council President Mary Chilvers first gave an account of the activities. She explained that a subcommittee is working on the telephone problem by submitting a detailed outline of three problems, and a list of possible solutions to Dean Roland.

The Senate then went to the subject of Common Hour on Tuesday and Thursday. Last spring, a subcommittee took a survey of students and faculty opinions of Common Hour. The reports were presented at this meeting. Many faculty members felt that Common Hour took up too much valuable class time, was poorly organized, and had no potential for improvement. Many students, on the other hand, felt that better organization. Common Hour could be improved greatly. The Senate will continue to look into this issue, and will make a recommendation to the faculty and dean.
Be aware of the consequences

Freedom of Information

Floyd Abrams' article in The New York Times Magazine of September 25, "The New Effort to Control Information," focuses on many steps being taken by the Reagan Administration to close off the flow of what would otherwise be information released by the Freedom of Information Act. While this entire subject is one of obvious concern to journalists and historians, as well as the rest of the American public who will be approved of the contents of the now inaccessible documents and information, one particular step being taken by the Administration to restrict the dissemination of unclassified information should frighten any member of any academic community.

The Reagan Administration's concern that American technological information has spread abroad too rapidly has led to imposing restrictions on the teaching of certain scientific topics in American universities. Specifically, the restrictions involve what academic discount may take place when foreign students are present. By broadening the interpretation of the International Traffic in Arms Regulations (ITAR) and the Export Administration Regulations (EAR) to include prohibitions of, in Abrams' words, "the exchange of unclassified information, the publication of such material, as well as its use in classroom lectures when foreign students are present," the federal government now restricts itself to supposedly free academic institutions a freedom to an extent which threatens the ability of our academic research institutions to continue research of the quality which has produced the now more restricted scientific knowledge.

Abrams goes on to report that more than the threat of civil or criminal sanctions under either the ITAR or EAR is at stake for the universities and for scientific research as a whole. Scientific discipline in the United States has been further handicapped by the imposition of restrictions on foreign experts, which have been as severe as to preclude their visiting, and by the Administration's prevention of the publication of 100 unclassified scientific papers at an international optical engineering symposium last year.

While it may seem easy to dismiss this topic as irrelevant to Kenyon College, students and faculty here should be no less concerned about these government intrusions on academic freedom than you are about the large scientific research universities which are more directly affected. Any violation of the principle of the freedom to disseminate and discuss unclassified material in an academic setting must be viewed as a violation to the entire academic community, perhaps only one of the few institutions are affected and only then in the broadest sense, but there is no guarantee that there will not be further intrusions.

An awareness, at this liberal arts college, of the problems faced by scientific research universities is important to an understanding of the basic truths of academic freedom which seem to elude many, if not all, of the large scientific research universities which are indeed directly affected. Any violation of the principle of freedom to disseminate and discuss unclassified material in an academic setting must be viewed as a violation to the entire academic community, perhaps only one of the few institutions are affected and only then in the broadest sense, but there is no guarantee that there will not be further intrusions.

Missed memorial disturbs student

Dear Editor,

I was saddened to see that the 1983 Revelle does not contain a memorial to Jennifer Crompton '83 who died in May 1981.

Who could forget Jennifer? She was a genuinely gifted artist and a sensitive, compassionate human being. Jennifer was offered a Jos where she passed on.

It was profoundly and seriously inappropriate for the Revelle to exclude memorials to Jennifer Crompton '83 and Carol Wright '84.

Respectfully submitted,
Lisa A. Marden '84

Rennert clarifies College computing issues

To the Editor, The Kenyon Collegian

From: Bob Rozsypal

Director of Academic Computing

I appreciate your inclusion of an article on the Cambridge Academic Computing Center in the most recent issue of the Collegian. I am writing to correct some minor errors of fact as well as clarify other issues.

With regard to the schedule for converting the administrative processing to the VAX 11/70, the original intention was to have most of the conversion completed by the start of the fall semester, with the remainder to take place by mid-October. If followed, that schedule would have permitted to incorporate at least one additional remote terminal site. The article is correct in stating that January is now the target date for the conversion to be completed.

The reasons for the reevaluation discussed in the third paragraph of the article took place during the 1982-83 school year. The changes made over the summer were relatively minor: the conversion of an office to a computer graphics room, the addition of new tables and chairs, the installation of a few extra terminals.

Finally, comparisons between putting at Kenyon and at other institutions are facile at best. We cannot do what other institutions do on the GCS as in college associations have had even more years of experience in conducting organized academic computing programs. In that context, it may make more sense to say that other colleges are "ahead." It is very important, though, to examine the purposes the institution has in providing computer resources. Some colleges offering degree programs in computer science or in disciplines which require extensive computer usage obviously need different support systems than an institution like Kenyon which is more interested in integrating computer use in appropriate ways in all disciplines.

I do not remember telling Mr. Goldberger that "by the end of the year we hope to have it up and to go." Our present plan is not to match the programs at the institutions, rather it is to provide the best services we can which will support academic mission of Kenyon College.

Freshmen leaders and reps. elected

In voting held this week, Brehenin Sunjay Yablunch and Kendall Johnson were elected to serve as the freshmen male representatives to Student Council. The voting for the female representatives and the freshmen senate have yet to be completed.

In addition, the following were chosen to serve as the Freshmen Council Executive Committee for this year: President, Becky Kilburn; Vice-President, Lily Graw; Secretary, Chris Stell; and Treasurer, Tim Austin.

Issue One presents choice

On November 8, registered Ohio voters will decide whether to raise the drinking age to the state from 18 to 21 for the first time. In addition, issue 1 will "amend the present statutory law which allows a parent or legal guardian to furnish alcoholic beverages to a person under 21 years." All Kenyon students, regardless of their parents' residence, can vote on this issue if they are registered to vote by October 8. Tables are available in both Pelletier and Gaud at dinner tonight for the purpose of registering students to vote.

The Collegian will meet he published next Thursday, October 13 at the October Reading Break. The next issue of the Collegian will be October 20.
Stockwell tells of life (and death) in the CIA

By Peter McFadden

John Stockwell delivered a controversial speech on the CIA this Tuesday night, September 27th, in a packed Bol-

In vitro theatre. Many students and faculty attended afterwards for a post-lecture discus in Pierce Lounge. Stockwell spoke of his experiences while in the CIA but added stark political statements reflecting a radical viewpoint.

One student commented that John Stockwell today is essentially the same man as when he entered the CIA as a naive conservative and is now a radical. Stockwell himself admitted he was easily swayed when he was younger by conservative, anti-communist books. In his lecture, he offered a bibliography of equally radical literature of the opposite view which he says is now the basis for his work.

Stockwell's experiences while in the CIA proved to be fascinating. However, accounts of the several CIA operations he partook in seriously questions the effectiveness of the agency. Stockwell himself believes that the agency is beyond reform and should be disbanded.

Stockwell told of difficulties agents had in gathering intelligence during the Vietnam war. He claimed that virtually all agents were killed or arrested during the war were inaccurate. In addition, he said that higher officials did not want to report on reports filed. Stockwell also recounted much of the agency's less than happy past.

He argued that the CIA, like its leader, was brought into existence to win the Cuban people against the United States. One of his major themes during the speech was that the idea of CIA interventions would now be dead and served to deceive and deserve the students.

Stockwell also argued that the CIA should influence American policies. He said that the CIA should have a greater role in the President's thoughts. Also, he claimed that the CIA controls domestic material. Much of what Stockwell claimed and presented are substantiated. Why? However, accounts of the several CIA actions that were recorded by the CIA should be considered. The CIA's political isms have of all government agencies.

Stockwell's argument that CIA intervensions are dangerous, is not foreign people against the United States can also be contested. His example of Cuban disinformation during CIA interventions there is countered by the general unhappiness of the Cuban people with Castro's regime. Many Cubans would have liked to see the Castro government toppled, and the flight of more than a quarter of the island's population to the United States provides ample evidence of this.

Stockwell's speech, in balance, was an illuminating one. Although his ut-crinal acceptance of a radical view of the world distanced much of what he said, Stockwell's experiences while in the CIA should be of concern to the supers of American foreign policy. Those who wish to rely on the CIA for achieving foreign policy objectives must consider the agency's less than successful past.

Adjudicatory Committee addition fills gap in college judicial system

By K. Friedleland and G. Ross

Have you ever been bothered by a noisy neighbor? In this type of problem was dealt with by the dean or the Judicial Board. But this year, with the addition of the Adjudicatory Committee, the judicial process at Kenyon College may change.

Because Judicial Board handles the more severe Academic and Social is-lations at Kenyon, many students pretered to tolerate noisy neighbors rather than cause an incident at Judicial Board. The students didn't want to get anyone in trouble, they just wanted the noise to stop. A committee studying the Kenyon judicial process last year, noting the problem, recommended that a separate, all student board be formed to handle minor social infractions.

The Adjudicatory Committee was added to the Campus Government Constitution to serve as an outlet for previously ignored problems. The A.C. consists of ten student members and a student co-instructor. Student Council selected the members from letters of intent and is still soliciting for a coordinator. Members serve for two year terms, staggered to provide for continuity.

Thomas Edwards, Dean of Students, feels that under the right leadership the A.C. will allow better self-regulation and provide a better sense of community among Kenyon students. "The Adjudicatory Committee," says Edwards, "trains students to deal with problems on a peer basis, rather than going to the deans and tattle-tale.

The A.C. will serve as a unique all student board, independent of the Judicial Board. Student Council President, Mary Chalmers, explains, "The committee's function isn't to punish students—it is to remedy the situation."

Most cases brought before the A.C. will result in a contract between the complainant(s) and the accused instead of a punishment. The record of the infrac-sion will not become a part of the student's permanent Kenyon record. It is kept separately by the A.C. and is destroyed when the student leaves Kenyon. Only if the offense is repeated will the Student Council be informed that the student was brought before the A.C.

Says Chalmers, "It's hard to tell if the A.C. will be successful. It has great potential if the students use it."

This is just to say...

A Journey to the South

By Guest-Columnist

William S. Geoffrives, IV

Editor's note: We had planned to let Geoffrives announce his column this week. Really, we like Geoff. But fate intervened. Geoffrives has been sick in bed with an yet undiagnosed illness (we suspect Hangeovers Colloid) and could not even lift pen to paper. We were in a tug when suddenly we received the following piece from William S. Geoffrives. The Collegian cannot thank Mr. Geoffrives enough for his last-minute efforts.

It is with great admiration for Marshall A. Williams III that I introduce my own humble work to the Collegian. I could not agree more wholeheartedly with his views of college journalism. Mr. Geoffrives and the welfare state is great. His column last week was truly inspirational—if only there was an entire community of such brilliant minds. I wish to share, with hopes of enlightening others, my own contribution to the growing body of "Fraternity" literature raising its paddles at Kenyon.

A Song to the Innocent

Canto XIII

A Journey to the South

O Mase, that I may clear the skies
Enlighten me through your literary eye
For to eradicate the plaque that spans us
For to enlighten the other end of campus.

Off did I set on that Friday night
My hands trembling, lips clenched tight.
With the great poet and alter ego as my guide,
Marshall A. Williams by my side.

"Bill," he said, "we'll visit Geoff Schmidt,
See him about that piece of verse.
He series each week in that open sure
That readers hereafter will pursue no more.

"Our journey down will leave you weak,
But sent is the conclusion of not going Greek.
Take heed now if you yourself fancy a smartly,
No longer are you invited to fraternity parties.

"Your warning is taken, House Scholar bright,
But I on this terrible weekend night
Who only to observe the carnival here,
Dance with your women and drink your beer.

Passed me by the old Rose Hall,
This column another, a funeral pall.
Over the place, quiet as a mouse.
The poor sick wretched swarthy "Animal House."

"This is where it all began,
In eighth grade each one to the man
How this move with Reahd Puntos
And now engages in Fraternity, self-consciousness."

We continued down blaring Middle Path
Along with the vile storm and wrath
Of vanity and sticky beer
Of all the souls, who relieved themselves here.

Finally we arrived on this journey South
To a man with brainwash showed as his mouth.
A tall, blond dancer red-beard was carrying.
Surely they never lived a finer Asyan.

"To their torment, Holly dear,
To pass eternally in this dreadful fear.
They are souls with no rationality.
They suffer the pains of hospitality."

We passed by and by a man who did pass.
A table like a twisted Stephan.
Up the stairs he showed it then
And out the window to the ground again.

I knew this soul, had known him in life
Who suffered now this crashing strife.
Here I want to comfort in his pit
But the poet stopped me, "said, no. "Shoo.

"These souls in real life were your friends,
Now they belong to the true South land.
Squash you now your consoling voice.
They live here by their own free choice."

We slacked the table, walked to the "stape,
To a dawsh who cried of ".Css" and
He flailed in fits if having an attack
Saying, "Once you been here, you never gone back."

Market becomes tradition

By Becky Kilborn
Curious students, who passed to take a look at the eight varieties of homemade preserves that Althea Dye was selling at the "Farmers Market" (Oct. 1), were unaware that they were looking at a phenomenon—Dye's peach butter had won first place in the butter category at the Columbia County Fair only the day be- fore. Dye and her family sell these pre- serves along with a variety of produce and baked goods every week. Harvey and Valma Matthews began Market four years ago as a way to help Ganter residents dispose of excess pro- duce from their gardens. Every Saturday morning, there are benches lining Middle Path where Valma sells a year-round as well as guests on one-month- making ventures. Shoppers can find items as varied as used books, Concord grapes, cash and pepper stalks, potted plants, potted pie, and bread feeders.

The Market provides a service for both sellers and buyers according to Julie Wilkerson, a freshman.
"The homemade food is fun because it gives you a charge of pride from dem food and makes you feel like home- sick," she said. "It’s also fun just to go out and buy something every once in while and the market adds to the shop- ping opportunities in Ganter."

Most of the vendors' main reasons for selling at the market is to generate extra money. Dye’s family saved over $1,000 last year, "I sold 180 pies alone at $2 a piece," Dye said. In addition, Dye similarly sells vegetables from her garden, also participates in the Market because it allows her to meet people from the college.
"I think the Market helps integrate local, and the college community. Both would be missing something if they didn’t get to know one another," she said.
"I had students coming by every week asking for my peach butter salve," said Liz Kes. "I get to know a few of them and we talk a bit every time. Kes was one of the nine members of the Mt. Vernon chapter of the Salvation Army Home League who made donations to their booth.
"We just come four weekends," said Hazel Smith, also of the Home League.
"We were raising money for a trip we were taking to Niagara Falls."

Wherever the motives for buyers' and sellers' participation, all agreed that the Market was becoming a Kerens tradi-

The Odd Couple

This film version of Neil Simon’s Broadway play features two totally incompatible—yet a definite handicapped—the offer an incompatible club—who live together out of mutual necessity. Hearing for divorce. Felix Ungar (Jack Lemmon) is a casualty of the war between the sexes. A similar calamity befalls his old pal Oscar Madison (Walter Matthau). An alienly poor sportswriter. Out of pity and prudence, he invites Felix to share his Manhattan apartment. What follows is a partnership that becomes a parody of a falling marriage or a domestic life becomes a battlefield of verbal joust in a side-splitting comedy.

The Odd Couple owes its comic force to two stars—Matthews with his simple perfect timing and playwright Neil Simon, who takes off his clown’s mask to show the human beneath—Johnnie Herrera

Swingtime

Directed by George Seacy. Starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. Released in 1936, 105 minutes.

Swing Time, the fifth of the Astaire-Rogers series of films, is one of their best collaborations. The story is the usual one of two strangers who meet by accident, in this case, "Lucky" North (Astaire) a dance master, and Peggy Catal (Rogers), a dance teacher. As proof she, she ignores him, and creates his advantage until finally he succeeds in a romantic dance career.

What makes this film so special however, is that the plot, but dance numbers. With Jerome Kern’s score "The Way You Look Tonight”, "Pick Yourself Up". the dance are wonderfully stylish, almost magical. The supporting roles of Lucky’s dad and Peggy’s friend Mark also come alive thanks to the comedic talents of Valerie Moore and Helen Broderick.

The Battle of Algiers

The Battle of Algiers is director Pontecorvo’s most acclaimed film, scoring the Golden Lion Prize at the Venice Film Festival. Pontecorvo has been a lifelong filmmaker, having directed the Academy Award-winning film "The Battle of Algiers" in 1966, a film that is often considered one of the greatest political films of all time.

The story of the Algerian War of Independence, the film depicts the conflict between France and Algeria, as well as the political and social changes that took place during the war. The film is known for its powerful, realistic depiction of the war and its impact on the characters and audiences.

The film's distinctive style and approach to filmmaking have made it a landmark in the history of cinema. It is considered a masterpiece of political cinema and a significant contribution to the study of the Algerian War.

The Battle of Algiers is a film that is not only a historical document, but also a powerful statement on the power of cinema to depict the complexity of historical events and the human impact of political struggles.
Evening of enchantment by Raphael Trio

By Janet Slack

The Raphael Trio will perform at Kenton College, Friday, October 7 at 8 p.m. in Rose Hall Auditorium. The format is the first George Grand Concert for this season, and is presented to the public without charge.

Members of the Raphael Trio are Charles Carlstein, violist; Susan Salin, cellist; and David Epstein, pianist. Their program will include "Trio in D Major, Bax XV" by Haydn; "Trio in F Major, Op. 67" by Schumann; and "Trio in E Minor, Op. 108" by Schubert.

The Raphael Trio made their Carnegie Hall debut as winners of the Concert Artists Guild Award in 1975. They have appeared in most major American cities and have participated in a number of international festivals, including Stockholm, Newport, and Spoleto in Italy. Many of their engagements have been featured in broadcasts throughout the country by the National Public Radio and com-

Charles Carlstein, violist, has been a violinist of the concert stage for nearly 20 years. At age 18, he appeared in recital with the Boston Pops and Arlen Mykle; the next year he gave a solo recital in New York's Town Hall, and two years later performed in recital with the New York Philharmonic. Since then he has performed in recitals and with leading orchestras throughout the United States, Canada and Europe. He recently performed the World Premiere of a Concerto written for him by David Amram, with the St. Louis Symphony and Leonard Slatkin which was filmed for broadcast by BRAVO, a cable television program.

A graduate of Harvard College and the Curtis Institute of Music, Mr. Carlstein is presently on the faculty and was recently appointed to the Board of Directors at the Curtis Institute. He is presently Associate Professor of Viola at the Eastman School of Music. A graduate of the Guild School in New York, Susan Salin, cellist, has performed frequently in the major concert halls of two continents. Her many performances with orchestras such as the Seattle Romanesque, BBC, Frankfurt, and the Berlin Symphony are complemented by recital and chamber music appearances throughout Europe and the United States. As recent winner of the prestigious Concert Artists Guild Award, Ms. Salin made her New York Carnegie Hall debut to critical acclaim. She has been chosen to premiere many important compositions.

most recently, she performed with the Stuttgart Philharmonic, the world premiere of a double concerto written for her by the noted German composer, Willem Kuijken.

Pianist Daniel Epstein made his American orchestral debut in 1973 with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra at the Saratoga Festival. Mr. Epstein again appeared with them on their Gala Opening Concert in Philadelphia and was subsequently invited to perform on their regular season concert. He has performed extensively throughout North America in recital, chamber music and with orchestras. Mr. Epstein's Lincoln Center recital was the subject of a CBS News Feature, which was aired throughout the entire country.

Born in New York, and a graduate of the Guildhall School in New York, Susan Salin, cellist, has performed frequently in the major concert halls of two continents. Her many performances with orchestras such as the Seattle Romanesque, BBC, Frankfurt, and the Berlin Symphony are complemented by recital and chamber music appearances throughout Europe and the United States. As recent winner of the prestigious Concert Artists Guild Award, Ms. Salin made her New York Carnegie Hall debut to critical acclaim. She has been chosen to premiere many important compositions.

Prize Poet: Jared Carter

Award-winning writer, Jared Carter will give a poetry recital at Kenyon College in Pence Lounge on Sunday, October 9 at 8:30 p.m. The reading, sponsored by the Poetry Center of Ohio will have poems from his book, for the Night Is Coming and from a new work in progress.

Hika reading

By Jenny Haff and Alison Wright

Wednesday, September 28 marked the first Hika reading at Kenyon this year. Editors Samuel Triott and John Stroube have decided to sponsor several readers this autumn. The Poetry Center was filled with students and faculty anticipating a reading by Aluwaiq Shapira.

Shapira began his reading with a story entitled "Tostese's Donkey," and continued with another entitled "Ratto." A story centering a college professor and his collection of antiques, photos, and concludes that his life should change.

Shapira was born in Texas and attended Southern Methodist University and is currently working on a Ph.D. He lives in Salt Lake City, Utah. Shapira has published poems and stories and is working on novels at the moment. Following the reading, listeners were able to meet and converse with Shapira at a reception sponsored by Hika.

Numerous readings and lectures have been planned for this year. On Monday, October 10, Kenyon English Professor Frederick Turner will be reading "Ballad of the Ard Cowboy" at 8:00 p.m. in Pence Lounge. A reception will follow.

All readings are free and open to the public.

Lecture

Susan Sonntag will be presenting a lecture entitled "Written and Politics" on October 20. Sonntag is a highly acclaimed cultural critic and novelist and is the author of Advice for the Younger Generation. The lecture will take place at 8:00 p.m. in Rose Hall.

Dinner and a dance will follow. Reservations are required by October 15. For more information, please contact Mr. Sonntag at 740-349-0268.

Collegian Commentary by Kevin Reynolds

Kindbom: Architects supervising construction of the plans he drew up, also a member of the construction crew, sawing and hammering to make the project successful.

Kindbom is enthusiastic, says his assistant coach. He decided to work with the McGuffin situation by not addressing it. Kindbom thinks he still has to build up to the present look and look to the future and that exactly what he will do. The key is to improve the past altogether. Either, after Kindbom has had back to back winning seasons and success breaks success. Kindbom put together a high profile to help improve his players and included in these highlights was a segment devoted to the seniors of last year's team. It proved to be a very effective bridge of the two years. Another aspect of Kindbom's is his ability to be open minded. At the start of the pre-season, John Dulek, a junior who played defensive back first two seasons, approached the first year coach and asked if he was switched to offensive because he felt that he could contribute to the team through being placed Double on offensive. Too many. How many first year coaches would have refined, evaded, or been clever enough to listening to the requests of a player? Kindbom believes that player plays best when he is playing where he wants to. Fittingly, Dulek had eight catches for 99 yards, a touchdown, and a key pass completion against Wosner and was named the "Offensive Player of The Week." Kindbom says, "We design our team to respond positively. This year the team is coming together quite nicely in all aspects of the competition but it is also quite valuable with life in place quite unfortunately. The Kindbom football had caught to this season due to two ostensibly deaths of people close to the. The Lords faced that form of adversity one after the other and they can turn the stress and make the experience positive. Not to make their season that easier. Kindbom has said, "What's the best way to play the game. He considers emotions to be one of the three factors in a football game along with mental and physical factors. "You never want to be on the offensive" warned Kindbom. Emotions must be genuine and Kindbom's carries them in his first two wins and Kindbom is aware. He expects the physical and mental aspect to carry their load to the final five weeks, as it did against Hope. Kindbom has met adversity on the field and off the field, as they've approached each with a similar philosophy. Larry Kindbom replaced Tom McHugh and has brought in his own philosophy. It was a tough three-week stretch. Typically, Kindbom takes the game only one at a time, but he knew he wasn't going to push three weeks like a football game. He is a book called Enthusiasm Makes the Difference, and will be interesting to see if it can in the upcoming weeks. The time is now, but only the future will tell. In the meantime, Kindbom reports that, "We're a pretty good football team and having a lot of fun."
Volleyball team limps through slump

By Ana Davies

The past week has not been lucky one for the Kenyon volleyball team. The Ladies faced seven teams and lost to six of them.

Stylopoulos was the main factor that contributed to losses against Heidelberg (6-15, 12-15) and Mt. Vernon Nazarene (14-15, 5-15) on September 22. The Ladies did not correct on important plays and were not completely in control of the game. "We weren't using our home court advantage, and I think we were a little distracted," said freshman Debbie Martin.

On September 24, the Ladies annihilated Lake Erie College 15-1, 15-5. Sophomore Margaret Silver paced the team, scoring 16 points in the two games. Kenyon then suffered a hard fought defeat in the hands of John Carroll University, 12-15, 15-17.

The Ladies met Marietta on the 27th and lost again in two games. Over the weekend, they traveled to Wilmington and fell to the home team 15-15 and 15-15. They also dropped their match with Defiance in two straight.

Hope deals Lords first loss with 35-21 decision

By Peter McFadden

Greg Heere threw five touchdowns passes to lead the Flying Dutchmen past Kenyon. 35-21 late Saturday at Municipal Stadium in Hillsdale, Michigan. The loss leaves Kenyon with a 5-1 record.

Hope made good on every scoring opportunity it had during the game. The Lords, however, were not as effective at putting points on the board when it appeared they might. Senior Bob Dehn missed two field goals and quarterback Dan Pantel was intercepted in the red zone late in the game.

Cross country teams 'run through' meet

By Nick Kelmich

Kenyon's men's and women's cross country teams backed off a bit from their far pace of the past few weeks and "ran through," in the words of Coach Gomer, the past Saturday's meet at Wooster.

The men's meet was contested on the All-Oho-Mett course at Wooster with Oberlin finishing first, Wooster second, and Kenyon third. Top Lord finishers were David Berg, twelfth overall in 20:28, and Dan Pantel in 20:33 for 281 yards.

Kenyon despite the loss, played well. There was not much the defense could do against Heeres, who last season ranked second in the NCAA in passing efficiency. The Lords, after stalling up some quarterback's 18 times in their first three games, were not even able to pressure Heeres once during the game. The able quarterback completed 19 of 28 passes for 285 yards. Dan Pantel played evenly as well for Kenyon, however. Offensive coordinator Pete Peterson commented that "this was the best Pantel he has ever had in his life." The junior quarterback completed 16 of 30 against the Dutchmen opened up a 2-1 lead in the third quarter but Rich Balca closed the score to 2-14 at the end of the game. Kenyon's score was a first in their history and the first in their history.

A shot of high adventure

Over 8,000 men and women, both adults and students, will take part in a unique program called "Outward Bound" this year. Designed so that participants will meet challenging experiences in wilderness settings, Outward Bound courses take place year-round in sixteen states. We asked our correspondent to Outward Bound seeking a taste of high adventure—and they'll probably get a lot more than they ever presumed. But after discovering exactly what it is, the one thing they are capable of doing things they might previously have thought impossible," Outward Bound believes many limits are self-imposed. Mentally, emotionally, physically. "Walking across the country, riding horses, kayaking, cycling, rafting, and even dog-sledding form the core of the Outward Bound experience, depending on the environment in which the course takes place. Previous outdoor skills are recommended, so is a special equipment other than personal clothing and boots. Each small group of students has one or more expert instructors and specialists who help them develop outdoor and interpersonal skills, culminating in a "final expedition," with minimal instructor supervision, relying on what they have learned during the course. Academic credit is often available, as is financial aid based on need. In addition, several Outward Bound schools offer no-interview tuition plans, some for up to three years. Outward Bound courses are offered year-round and last for 34 to 30 Days.

Council discusses phones
By Michael Pierce
At the October 2 meeting, Student Council heard proposals from an ad hoc committee regarding improvements in the phone system. The committee report, given by Melissa Roberts ’85, suggested the hiring of a phone consultant to assess the telephone needs of the Kenyon community. Possible considerations might include the installation of a campus system, which would allow direct dialing to PBX phones from an outside line, and locating the central PBX at Egbert and the New Apartments directly, dialing long distance calls, and recording a monthly bill. The committee also would like more Charge-a-call phones, the bells on the Charge-a-call phones turned off so they can receive outside calls, and a limit of twenty students per PBX phone set. In addition, the committee proposed the installation of longer phone cords which would allow students more privacy when using the phones and the locations of specific phones to be designated to make them less convenient to students. The proposals will be forwarded to the Assistant Dean of Student Residents, Robert Reading.

In other Council business, Student Council Vice President Blaiz Kenneth reported that Senate discussed the report from the sub-committee on the Common Hour. Most of the faculty and many of the students who responded to the survey said that Common Hour either did not live up to its potential or that it was a waste of otherwise useful time. Both Kenneth and President Chaloner have a copy of the report for any interested students.

Eric Balk ’86, Chris Schwartz ’86, Anne Fox ’86, and Anne Wallace ’86 were named to the Committee on Buildings and Grounds.

Laurel Laid ’84 and Joe Lipsumch ’84 were named to the Delegation to the Vice President of Development.

Stephanie Dugdages ’85 was named Chairperson of the Media Board and Jerry Folk ’84 and Amy McKune ’84 were also named to the Board. Jennifer Matte and Jamie Friedberg were named the freshmen members of the Admissions Committee.

Brenda Berlin ’84 was appointed to the Athletic Program Board and Laurel Cooper ’86 joins the Trustee Committee on Curriculum and Faculty.

he ran the ball in from one yard out with just over a minute left in the quarter. Hope scored two more touchdowns in the fourth period and led 35-14 with two minutes remaining in the game. Jeff Schiech intercepted Hope reserve quarterback Mike Keptzer and returned the ball 43 yards to set up Kenyon’s final touchdown. Eric Bell ran in from nine yards out with just 15 seconds left in the game for that score.

Several players besides Pusatie had good games for the Lords. Joe Coates was offensive player of the week and Dave Morris was defensive player of the week. Rich Falka had 16 carries for 57 yards and one touchdown. Todd Stover had eight receptions for 176 yards and one score. John Danks caught six passes for 54 yards.

Comedian Lewis Black returns
Central Ohio, get ready to laugh again when comic playwright Lewis Black returns to Gambier this fall.

This is still to say...
Oct. 3, 1983
Now I was scared. ‘O Poet, help!’
That man who groans, shouts, and yells
Resembles me—may not it be true?
That I do the things the boys do.”

"Look at this sky, O frightened boy,
A spectacle ofperverse and windless joy.”
The group who dance to Ski and Melody Were repeatedly run over by a Rustria on a Harley.

We continued on our way, turning from the left.
’Til now we looked for God.
With other divers he was trying To hula like a true Hawaiian.
The caribous there had tidiness did wish.
Quoth the bear, ‘‘My mother is a fish.”
We shouted on God who cried, ‘‘It’s not legal.
I write Impassioned Plays, and Marshall gets credits.”
The poet said, ‘‘Boy your office great weight does carry.
Next week you’ll write Bill’s obituary.”
I knew his words were true to be sure.
Verily, reader, I could tell you more.

What I saw has bitten me fierce:
Never again will I dine at dear Peice.
So to you I renewing do say, ‘Liberte’, egale’, and GMI!”
