Dean of Students Thomas Edwards presented a proposed Kenyon College Alcohol Policy, which is intended to emphasize that social drinking at social events is a necessary part of the student's college experience. The policy is designed to create a safer environment for everyone on campus and to reduce the number of alcoholic beverages that are consumed on campus.

The proposal includes several key provisions, including:

- Education and Awareness: The policy emphasizes the importance of education and awareness about alcohol use. It requires that all students and faculty attend an annual program on alcohol education.
- Limitations on Consumption: The policy limits the amount of alcohol that can be consumed at social events, with a maximum of two drinks per event.
- Monitoring and Enforcement: The policy includes provisions for monitoring and enforcement of the rules.
- Support and Resources: It provides for the creation of a support network for students who need help with alcohol-related issues.

The policy is intended to be a framework within which the college can develop more specific policies as needed. It is hoped that the policy will help to reduce alcohol-related incidents on campus and promote a safer, more supportive environment for all students.

Last weekend, 35 Kenyon students travelled to Washington D.C. to express their disapproval of Reagan administration policies in South Africa, and to lobby Congress representatives to vote for specific arms control legislation.

The first group of ten Kenyon students travelled to Washington D.C. to express their disapproval of Reagan administration policies in South Africa, and to lobby Congress representatives to vote for specific arms control legislation. The second group of five students was invited to a campus at the University of Virginia to discuss the issue with legislation.

Kenyans' lobbyists split them- selves up, with six meetings with Con- gressman Michael O'Keefe's aide (Jon Zanis) and the other four split between Senator Metzenbaum and an aide to Sen- ator Glenn. The delegation to O'Keefe's office had an interesting meeting with Zanis. He was receptive to the idea that the students expressed and was truly interested in discussing the issue at hand. The Kenyan students did not meet with the congressmen himse- lves, but they were told, he was in Ohio. Con- gressman O'Keefe's aide, who attended the meeting with Zanis, opposed the second split between Senator Metzenbaum and an aide to Senator Glenn. The Gambler held press conference Tuesday (The Collegiate) was a news story that made the front page in the Journal throughout the year, ac- cording to former editor-in-chief Peter McFadden. Holding the press conference "is not condonable. We took it as not important information about the Col- lege... with the best interest of the College in mind," said McFadden, who made the distinction between Kenyon College and its administration. McFad- den said that he is critical of the adminis- tration, but not Kenyon.

Columbus Citizen Journal about the press conference.

The Columbus paper reported that McFadden "objects to a liberal campus ideology; they're not going to have any 'conver- sative viewpoints' and McFad- den denied that the administration wants "people graduating with a certain viewpoint."

The Citizen Journal reported that "Kenyon President Philip H. Jordan Jr. laughed when told of McFadden's statement..." said as much for his point of view," he said.

---

In another news article Presiden- t Jordan turned down the appeal of McFadden and Smith to retake the examination after the 2008 NCAA Tournament. Jordan told McFadden and Smith that there was "too much to overtake the determi- nation of the Media Board in this case."

The article reported on an issue during final weeks under the direc- tion of newly-elected editor-in-chief Todd Shaw.
Changes raise questions

The recently proposed changes regarding the campus Judicial Board raise some very important questions that need to be addressed before the Senate votes in the proposals for a second and final time.

Among the possible changes are the creation of judicial panels to hear less-serious cases referred to the board, the freedom for dean to pass judgment immediately if the situation is judged to be more of a training than a warning, and the opportunity for the dean and the Student Senate vice president to take a more active role in the proceedings of the Judicial Board. It is this last provision that concerns us the most.

While the argument that the experience of the dean in handling judicial matters should be better utilized by the board is valid, there must be careful consideration of the underlying principle of trust by peers and the Kenyon commitment to this principle.

Students and faculty are not always the best informed persons when it comes to administrative matters. The dean, on the other hand, have both training and experience in student disciplinary matters and are a valuable asset to the process of student affairs and decisions at Kenyon. Their input to the Judicial Board is vital to increased communication and a better system, both in terms of fairness and expediency.

The problem with the proposal as it now stands is that it does not limit the precise role that the dean and the vice president will fill. Instead, the issue is left to vague and needs to be defined more thoroughly before it can be implemented. The Judicial Board is meant to serve an alternative to the dean’s office on judicial matters.

Many work needs to be done to allow the dean’s experience to assist the board without infringing upon the duties of the board to follow a course independent of the dean.

Nothing to correct

Julie Soloway and sophomore Rick Brown, unhappy with the way their case was handled in both the Student Council minutes and last week’s Collegian news story, have filed a complaint during dinner hours listing a short of so-called “Jazz Corrections.” Claiming that Brown was misquoted in several cases, it seems that the authors wanted to set the record straight.

What we feel that they wanted to do, however, was to state the facts in phrases of their own choosing and thus, much more to their liking.

The Jazz Corrections story stands, even in light of the junior student’s published rebuttal, Brown was quoted correctly, even if he did not appreciate the way his statements read. What Brown, Warren Teitz, Jo CHILD, Jan Williams, Dave Soladak and Paul Schute (the authors of “Jazz Corrections”) accomplished was not a correction of inaccuracies, but rather a rewriting of facts and statements from the way they stand.

Paul Postek, Rick Brown and Julie Soloway all recognize the importance of avoiding a misunderstanding where this issue is involved. The “Jazz Corrections” kind one has served to create one. Rather than charge the Collegian of misquoting and misinterpreting the story wrong, the principles involved should have used a more mature approach.

Instead of this present to a detailed, indeed, a detail, carefully wanted personal viewpoint as a letter to the editor, such as the one that appears in this issue. It is an open letter to the editor, a public editorial, which seems appropriate.

Jordan applauds clean-up efforts

To the Editor,

I wish to call attention to the College the fine spring clean-up work accomplished by some enthusiastic students under the leadership of Jamie Horton, Jr., and the sponsorship of the Interfraternity Council on Middle Path Day. These dedicated volunteers contributed their labor from noon until three p.m., in rain, sun and high winds, to clean College Park from Old Kenyon to the entrance gates. They raked垃圾 from the hills, pulled up litter and broken glass, and removed their waste from fall clutter.

Dean Dulaney, Grounds Menagerie for the College, has described them as “the hardest working group we have had,” and he believes that fraternity support for the students who perform these clean-up works greater success in future years. I want to congratulate the Interfraternity Council and all the students who turned out for Middle Path Day this year and thank them publicly for contributing to the beauty of our campus in the spring.

Sincerely,

Philip H. Jordan, Jr.

Women faculty respond to accusations

To the Editor,

We wonder if the accusations against the administration have achieved their intended effect. A copy of the letter from John Palfy Jr., which appeared in the most recent edition of the Collegian.

As women faculty we are very concerned about the accusations that the “present has required female professors to deliver lectures on the subject of feminism and has made conformity to his ideological and intellectual prejudices a criterion for successful application.” We believe, however, that such events have occurred, we would wish to be supportive of any woman who had been subjected to such pressure.

Sincerely,

Joanne F. Mohr

After 25 years of dedicated service to Kenyon Community, Professor Hettinger tells stories of his life as he nears his retirement.

High school gym class, and find that physical activity in at least one of its various forms is actually enjoyable and worthwhile.

These issues were discussed Tuesday evening as part of the "Self and Society" series. The discussions, which are open to all students, took place in the upstairs lounge of the Integrated Physical Education Department.

This suggestion was not discussed at great length and no recommendation was made.

The structure of IPS has not changed drastically since its creation in 1975. The faculty orientation to the issue of sexism in the program is that "sexism is not an issue for women." However, the committee feels that it is an issue for men and that they must work to address this problem. The committee feels that the program is currently addressing this issue, but that it is not as prevalent as it was in the past.

Hettinger also said that he is "tired of just realizing how limited we are in terms of what we do in the program. We have to do better than that." He also said that the students are "very talented" and that they have a lot of potential to improve the program.

Johansen to play Send-Off

Rock star David Johansen, scheduled to play in Bobarton this Saturday, April 25, will be headlining this year's Summer Send-Off in the south quad.

"I think it'll be one of the most exciting shows. Kenyon has seen it in a long time," Social board member Ken Keeler said.

Johansen will be preceded on stage by Cleveland folk singer Alex Bevan, the Cigarettes, along with Night Hawks, a blues band based in the Washington D.C. area and the popular Cleveland reggae band Hot.

"Considering our small budget, I think we've done really well," Keeler said.

As in past years, Summer Send-Off will also include the ARA pie sale, outdoor games and a beer truck. The last sale with again be the Eraser Center.

Dr. Zhivago

Directed by David Laws. Starring Omar Sharif and Geraldine Chaplin. 1965. 197 minutes. Costumed by BHS Yosi Zivago, an orphan boy, runs away from a cruel, ugly family, grows to be a skilled poet and physician. During the events going on in Russia from 1905 to 1935. Dr. Zhivago is an infatuated writer - commentator who begins his journey in the 1920's. Dr. Zhivago's reaction to the political changes evolving in his country.

The film is a fine example of a novel successfully being made into a movie. The novel's strength, deep and beautiful composition and the immensely high quality acting. Dr. Zhivago contains all the necessary qualities of a truly successful movie about love during these turbulent years in Russia - Andrew Hunter

The King and I

Directed by Walter Lang. Starring Yul Brynner, Deborah Kerr, 1956. 113 minutes. To be shown this week in the University of Delaware's Auditorium.

The King and I is one of the best screen adaptations of a musical to come along. Taken from the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, it concerns a young schoolteacher (Deborah Kerr) who becomes a governess to the King of Siam's (Yul Brynner) children. The chemistry between Kerr and Brynner is wonderful. It gives the film a generally smooth flow and charm not often equaled. One of the main assets of the musical is that it has an actual plot with fleshed-out characters, not just production numbers with fichit in between—although score is good enough to stand on its own. All in all, the King and I is a high quality through entertaining piece of work.—T. Scull

Cunningham wins triathlon

By Nick Konish
Sixty-seven athletes and would-be competitors lined up for the first Kenyon (Galesburg, Ill.) Triathlon this past Sunday, with senior Chris Cunningham taking first place. Cunningham, a junior, timed out on the bike leg, but still finished first.

The race was quite competitive, and many seniors and juniors took the time to congratulate the first-place finisher. Some students commented that the weather could have been better, but overall it was a successful event.

Ladies lacrosse defeats Wooster in OT

By Ann Davies
Both the A and B women's lacrosse teams won their second games of the season on Saturday, with the A team winning 15-14 after a dramatic overtime. The game was played against Oberlin College, and the final score was 15-14 after overtime.

Despite the intense competition, the A team demonstrated strong teamwork and athleticism. The game was a showcase of their skills, and the team showed great resilience in the overtime period.

The B team also won, defeating Kenyon College 14-13. The game was a hard-fought battle, with both teams demonstrating their dedication and determination.

IM Basketball wrapup: Delta Phi finally wins the big one

By Bob Horley
A League

It was just one of those things. Something felt different before Villanova's victory last weekend. It was the feeling that you knew the Bears had it, even if they didn't realize it.

The Bears were riding a wave of confidence after their victory over the routing of New Hampshire. They were ready to make a statement.

But it was the Bears who were rattled, not the Eagles. The Eagles took control of the game early and never looked back. Herkullis and Pat Flood were unstoppable, and the Bears' defense was helpless.

Delta Phi had scored a goal, but it was a formality. The Bears had been dominating games, and they were in control.

But the Eagles were not finished. They took the lead on a goal by senior Andy Dwyer, and then added a second goal on a penalty shot by sophomore Peter Maloney. The Eagles were in control, and the game was over.

B1 League

If the Northern Eves were going to go all the way to the NCAA championship, they had to get the ball in the hands of sharpshooter Dave "KRM" Kromer. He delivered, and the Eves' offensive punch sparked a 49-17 victory over the Dragons. The Eves' defense made it a difficult night for the opposition, holding them to just 17 goals.

The game was a showcase of the Eves' athleticism and teamwork.

B2 League

Perhaps the most intriguing story line in all of basketball culminated for this season's B2 League Championship. The Riders, with Deon Abercrombs' heroics, won the title over the Trustees, 82-75.

It was a hard-fought game, with both teams playing their best basketball. Abercrombs' play was critical in leading the Riders to victory.

Overall, it was an exciting season for the B2 League, with plenty of high-stakes games and dramatic finishes.

LaCrosse chews up Ashland

By Barry Shankle
The Kenyon men's lacrosse team scored a huge victory over Ashland University yesterday, with a final score of 21-5. The game was played in Ashland, Ohio, and the Kenyon team overpowered their opponents from start to finish.

The Kenyon team has been a dominant force this season, and this win solidifies their status as one of the top teams in the nation.

Ten straight for Schneckee

By Lawrence Paulucci
The Kenyon Ladies tennis team raised their record to 4-2 overall and 3-2 in conference matches this past week.

The ladies started the week just where they left off last week, with a victory over the College of Wooster last Wednesday. They continued their winning streak with a 6-3 win over St. Olaf, and then a 9-0 shutout over Coe College on Friday.

The match against Coe was particularly impressive, as the Kenyon Ladies controlled the court from start to finish. The team showed excellent teamwork and communication, resulting in a dominating victory.

Despite the loss, this match is indicative of the improvement that the team has made this season. Last year's match with Oberlin ended in a 9-0 defeat for the Kenyon Ladies.

The streak, however, unfortunately came to an end last Saturday in a disappointing match against Kenyon College. Once again, the Lady Blues were unable to overcome their opponents.

The Kenyon team is currently at the top of their conference, with a perfect 7-0 record. Their next match will be against Kenyon College on April 9th at 2:00 pm.

The Kenyon team is looking forward to their upcoming matches, with a strong sense of confidence and determination.

The Ladies will try to continue their winning ways this Wednesday at home against Bowdoin College. The team will travel to Denison this weekend for an important conference match.
Reactions to letters must be in public form

To the Editor:

We wish to express:\n
Several weeks ago, we submitted a letter to the editor concerning, respect-\n\nly, the positioning of the Editors. After the removal of the editors of the Ginn-\n\nham Review, the treatment of the different points that each of us addressed in our letters. We obvi-\n\nously would like to reiterate that we would not have made our views public.

However, in response to our "common\n\nreasonable conclusion" that the student council was, in fact, a positive \n\norganization, we would like to make the following points:

1. The student council has, in fact, attempted to improve the situation, as evidenced by the recent changes and the continued efforts of the current council.

2. The student council has consistently shown a willingness to listen to the concerns of the students and to respond to them in a timely manner.

3. The student council has actively sought out the advice of various groups, including the student body, the faculty, and the administration.

In conclusion, we believe that the student council is functioning effectively and that the students should continue to support it.

Sincerely,

Student Body Association
