Shain Will
Honor Jordan
At Inauguration

Charles E. Shain, President Emeritus of Pennsylvania College, was the inaugural speaker at the 1974 inauguration of the presidency of Richard Will, Princeton University's eleventh president. Dr. William E. Schaff was installed immediately after the dedication ceremony.

Shain was born in Pennsylvania College on June 9, 1912, and was educated at the college. He served as the college's President from 1943 to 1974. Shain's decision to retire was made in 1974. He subsequently served as President of Princeton University until 1981.

Richard Will, Princeton University's eleventh president, was inaugurated on October 6, 1974. Will had served as the college's Provost and Dean of the College since 1970. He had been involved in the college's administration for many years, and was well respected for his leadership.

The lack of industry in the area is a concern, according to Mayor John Baer, who is running for his fourth term.

Mayor Baer, who works full-time as an executive at a manufacturing company, considers his position his second career. Although he works with a lot of different people, he says his main focus is on the town's economic development.

The town has a lot of local businesses and industries, and Mayor Baer wants to see them thrive. The lack of industry in the area is a concern, and he is working to attract new businesses.

By DIANE EKTVAN

"I was very disappointing in the decision. I thought there was more evidence to overturn the original decision," said Mayor Baer, who noted that the decision was made by the board of directors, not the council.

The decision was made in March 1977, and Mayor Baer said he was disappointed with the outcome. He said he had hoped for a different result, but he was resigned to the decision.

The decision was upheld by the Board of Directors on May 2, 1977, with a vote of 6 to 0. Mayor Baer said he had hoped for a different result, but he was resigned to the decision.

Mayor Baer wants to see the town's economic development continue, and he is working to attract new businesses.

He also wants to see more attention paid to the town's parks and recreational facilities. He has proposed a number of improvements, including the addition of new playground equipment and the installation of new lighting in the parks.

Mayor Baer said he is looking forward to serving another term as mayor, and he is hopeful that the town will continue to prosper.

The Gurn Foundation

The Gurn Foundation announced in the early years of its existence that it would not provide financial support to the college. This decision was made in 1977, and has been in effect ever since.

The foundation has stated that its mission is to support the college in its efforts to provide an outstanding education to its students. It has made a number of donations to the college, including support for scholarships and the construction of new buildings.

The foundation has also supported a number of projects, including the construction of a new athletic facility and the renovation of the Old Gymnasium.

By PETER MEYER

The Gurn Foundation is a private foundation, and it makes its decisions independently of the college. It is not subject to the college's policies and procedures, and it has the discretion to make its own decisions.

The foundation has stated that it will continue to support the college in its efforts to provide an outstanding education to its students. It has made a number of donations to the college, including support for scholarships and the construction of new buildings.

Schermer Denied Tenure

2) Availability and responsiveness to students.
3) Participation in the general life of the college.
4) Contributions to scholarly and educational activities.

The college is to be guided solely by these criteria, with emphasis on the first and second items because "teaching excellence is a sine qua non." Written evaluations of the faculty member in question are to be requested by the Provost from each member of the appropriate department and from students designated by the department chairman, and it is upon the basis of these and "other sources of information" that the Provost makes his recommendation to the President.

Now Schermer has made, in writing, a two-year commitment to teach in the Integrated Program in the Humanities at the request of the program's director, Professor Richard Hettlinger, and Provost Haywood. The Provost, though he had made a negative recommendation to Caples, had expressed surprise to Schermer that the actual decision by the president was negative.

It was this aura of complexity and confusion, of disparity between what all signs had indicated would happen and what actually did happen, that prompted Schermer to take her case to the Grievance Committee. She made her appeal on the grounds that her academic freedom and her legal rights had been violated by the decision and that the proper procedure as outlined in the Faculty Handbook had not been observed. These three grounds are included in the Handbook as sufficient reason for initiating grievance procedures.

The Grievance Committee voted 2-1 to uphold the decision to refuse tenure and make its recommendation accordingly to Sept. 25, although a minority report was filed. President Jordan, who attended the proceedings, accepted the recommendation and restated the decision on Oct. 6. The only further development since then has been Schermer's decision to file her complaint with the EEDC.

The EEDC can require reinstatement as part of the reconciliation, but now the future of the Marsha Schermer tenure case is uncertain, especially considering the large number of cases pending before the EEDC.

She says that she did not leave the matter where it was when she received the president's letter two weeks ago, because she feels that every time someone gives up in a situation like this, it will only result in the reoccurrence of a like situation.

Some women faculty members and young faculty members believe that the Schermer case has been in a sense a lesson to them, a matter of "if it can happen here, it can happen to me, too." The fear even reaches into the ranks of the tenured faculty. One member, for example, refused to testify at the Grievance Committee hearings because he would endanger his own position.

"There is no incentive for change here at Kenyon, and until people feel that they can speak and act in safety, there will be no change," Schermer said. "There are some people on the faculty and administration who are very sensitive to women's issues, but there is still a lot of learning that has to go on here." She recounted the story of one member of her department who had told her point-blank that women did not belong at Kenyon and women professors should not teach here.

"I have been counseled that junior members of the faculty do not speak out. And it's been a case of double jeopardy as far as my experience goes," she said, alluding to the fact that she is a woman faculty member as well as a junior faculty member.

"Looking back, how does Schermer feel about the whole thing? "It's been an educational experience. There have been a lot of things I've learned—there have been a lot of things I've learned that I hadn't wanted to learn."

Some people collect match books. Jeffrey Norris, Kenyon senior, publishes Schism.

Appariting four times a year, printed in Mt. Vernon, Schism can best be defined as "Left and Right. Consisting solely of reprints from little-known sources of opinions and in making them accessible to adults.

"As far as I know, Schism is the only magazine of this kind," said Editor Publisher Norris, "and the library journals seem to be done every day. It's not the sort of thing. It's our job to do, and it's necessary, but we're not in it for the money. It's a political op-ed piece, not a textbook. Even the grammar isn't changed."

260 Students Stayed In Gambier During The October Vacation

During the Fall Vacation last week, 260 Kenyon students remained in Gambier. This was due to the administrative obligations. Ross Fraser, director of Student Housing said that many of those who stayed were connected with athletic teams and of whom the students had to stay in Gambier.

The students who choose to spend their vacation in Gambier are usually those who have room for the week, and therefore it was decided to close the dorms for the weekend. Avoiding rumors spread abroad vacation concerning the number of students who were planning to remain. The students who stayed had planned to come to the University.

The athletes who remained had their meals and were dropped off by the athletic department.

A Matter Of Priorities

The Health Service and its problems are still with us. Despite pleas for change, nothing has been done about the present inadequacies.

Last year, the Health Service was open eighty-four hours a week. This year, the Health Service was open fifty-three hours a week. Yet, the Health Fee went up five dollars.

Unless one enjoys the ambience of Merry Hospital, it is not advisable to fall ill 10:30 p.m. Saturday and 8:00 a.m. Monday, during which times the Health Service is closed.

Not, most inexcusable of all is the critical lack of women's services. Women in need of contraceptive advice have been turned away to manage their problems at Verno or Columbus — if they can get an appointment.

This is not an indictment of Health Service personnel, who tend to be as dedicated as they are over-worked. Rather, it is a plea for an expansion or dedication as they are over-worked. Rather, it is a plea for an expansion or

A Defense of Senate

To the Editor:

I write in support of the Senate in the October 9 issue of the Collegian.

Dean Edwards expressed his lack of confidence in student committees of the Student Council, he said: "I have no need for confidence. What I said, in response to a suggestion to forward certain study topics to various standing committees of the faculty, was that on past experience I had little confidence that those committees would be willing to undertake a thorough study of sensible issues and return meaningful reports — a thought considerably different from the one presented to you by your readers. My approach to the personnel, procedural matter, not reservations about their work, has always valued student committees as a means for student representation on all college committees."

This distortion is only one of many in Mr. King's article. His running theme, that senators "do not know what students are," is embellished by personal attacks on individual senators. "I have no need for confidence," he said no such thing.

My approach to the personnel, procedural matter, not reservations about their work, has always valued student committees as a means for student representation on all college committees."

If enough people become interested, maybe Senator would get something done.

President Jordan will hold open office hours on Monday, 27 October between 2:30 p.m. and 3:30 p.m.; and on Tuesday, 28 October between 10:30 a.m. and 11:30 a.m.

Dance

This Friday night, October 24, Kenyon College will be celebrating the inauguration of President Jordan. The festivities will include an "Illumination of Old Kenyon" from 9:16 p.m. and an "Inaugural Dance," from 9:30-1:30 a.m. The Inauguration Committee, Student Council and Social Committee have combined their resources to sponsor an extraordinary evening for students, faculty, alumni and Gambler residents, to participate in and enjoy together.

Specifically, "Inaugural Dance," which will be held in the Great Hall in Palace will be free of charge and will feature "Bill Purser's Swing Band" from the Chicago area. Everyone from Kenyon and Gambler community is invited to come and join us in honoring our new President.
Interview With President Jordan

By Matthew A. Winkler

The following interview was held on September 1, the day before President Jordan began the 1975-76 academic year. The community at the college was in a state of transition as fewer students than the Class of 1976 had been admitted, and the freshmen to feel, however, that this is a temporary situation is wrong. Most anything Kenyon wanted to have was gone; there is actually a serious matter that you wish to consider?

Jordan: Any downward fluctuation is serious. I believe the dip in enrollment is temporary. It was not planned. We aren’t sure yet, fully the reasons for it, although we suspect it will happen. It is part of a phenomenon that is beginning to go national in its reactions to the financial crisis. I do believe there will be quite a change in the student body—more high school seniors, for example, because of the financial situation. The freshmen to feel, however, that this is a temporary situation is wrong. Most anything Kenyon wanted to have was gone; there is actually a serious matter that you wish to consider?

Jordan: That is true. But in terms of what the potential college graduate sees, the college and the many careers that are suited to the college graduate, the liberal arts college is more attractive for the high school senior. Even though Kenyon and the other liberal arts colleges at the time are going through what I think is a very temporary change, isn’t it our job to keep college—by which I mean liberal arts education education—to retain that image?

Jordan: Yes, but that depends on what we do. And if our enrollment is not growing, we can’t do much to change it. We must do something to attract the students that we think are appropriate to the college. We must continue to attract students.

Chalmers Library:

What is the relationship between the library and the college? How do you see it?

Jordan: I see the library as the central place for the college. It is the place where students come to study, to do research, to find information. It is the place where the college community comes together. It is the place where the students have access to the information they need. It is the place where the students can find what they need to do their work.

Lords In Bad Shape After Dual Defeats

By JOHNY VAN DOORN

In football action over the weekend, Kenyon played Case in the Gridiron Game, hosted Oberlin at home on the 11th and Kenyon was by the Wooster at home on the 18th. Those were expected to be easy victories for Kenyon; the Wooster defense had been good enough to keep the Kenyon football team to 138 points, while the Case defense has been good enough to keep the Kenyon football team to 138 points. And, of course, the defense was always going to prevent them from scoring. The game started slowly, with both teams sticking to their usual game plans. The second half started, however, and the game began to heat up. Kenyon scored a touchdown, and Case responded with a field goal. The game continued in this manner for the rest of the game, with both teams trying to outscore each other. In the end, Kenyon emerged victorious, but it was a close game. The next game, against the Case, was expected to be a walk in the park for the Kenyon football team. However, the Case defense was able to hold Kenyon to just 13 points in the entire game. The final score was Case 21, Kenyon 13. The loss was a humbling experience for the Kenyon football team. They had to regroup and focus on the next game, which was against Oberlin. This game was expected to be a close match, with both teams playing well. However, Kenyon was able to come out on top, winning the game 14-6. The victory was a much-needed boost for the Kenyon football team. After the loss to Case, they were ready to come back strong.
