Haywood Resigns to Assume Teaching Post

By ROGER FILLION

The close of the school year in May 1980 will mark the closing of an unofficial era at Kenyon - The Bruce Haywood era.

Haywood will resign from his post as Kenyon's Provost at the end of the 1979-80 academic year and return to

“Town Council” Proposed

A position drive to force Student Council to obtain itself has been initiated by Kyle Henderson '81 and Gary Vertin '81 because they desire that Council not have its Constitu- tional obligations "to formulate and express officially the student viewpoint and the student interests in the College."

They propose to reform Kenyon's representative body with a direct democracy or "town-meeting" type government.

The two need to obtain the signatures of one-eighth of the student body in order to hold a referendum. Chris Gould, Counsel President, will "call an all- campus assembly" to discuss the question should the signatures be obtained. Then, within a one week period, a referendum will be held if at least 10% of students vote in favor of the proposition.

Council Notes

Smoking Banned in Reading Room

By BRIAN RANDU

Student Council voted for over two hours on the topics of new budget hearings, smoking regulations, certification of election officials for Senior Class President, WKCO public service, and appointments to fill vacant posts, at its September 16 meeting.

Additional funding recommend- ations made by Finance Committee were voted down when Treasurer Mark Hallinan refused to submit an Ohio Public Interest Research Group allocation from the budget.EDU

Town Council to be voted on in advance of the proposition.

The Council is bound to carry out the duties that it is expected to. It doesn't have the Constitution. Therefore Council cannot act itself because the power to alter the Constitution is reserved to the Campus Senate.

A very important problem arises in the referendum process, however. If the referendum fails, how would the students receive Student Activities fees? Money? Ms. Gould, who voted to disbursed the same procedure. Clarification of certain ambiguities in the Handbook and written definition of several terms are desired.

Election for Student Council leadership positions will take place from Wednesday, September 26 to Friday, September 27.

Due to needing of the WKCO staff, the Food service Committee announced that the scheduled drama photo-shoot would be postponed.

The new time for this presentation is Sunday, September 25 at 8:00 p.m. with Christopher Selden and Jeff Silvich were chosen to take seats on the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs.

County Sheriff's said only that there was "an on-going investigation in progress and I am not at liberty to disclose any information.

Kenyon County Sheriff's confirmed that the suspect was in an Adair County gas station robbery. Edwards said there was a safe found in the suspect's car. There was no sign of any drugs in- volvement.

Ho Elected President

Kenyon's new Senior President is Chn B. Ho. Results were announced during Convocation after a run-off voting in elections conducted on self-government.

Chn B. Ho was selected from a field of four top candi- dates in an earlier election that included three candidates, Chris Gould, Jim Leslie, and Bill Lipscomb finished 2nd. In that order Council Secretary-Ties and described the selection process.

Ho is an Economics major from Penang, Malaysia. His responsi- bilities include chairing the Student Class Committee, advising the Faculty in the selection of honorary degree candidates and Com- mencement and Baccalaureate speakers, delivering a Commencement address, and serving as class agent until 1983.
A Long Tenure Ends

It almost goes without saying that the resignation of Bruce Haywood from his position as the director of the OPRIG at Kenyon College, after twenty-five years of dedicated service, is a momentous occasion. Haywood's tenure has been marked by a commitment to excellence, integrity, and innovation in the field of political science and international relations. His leadership and mentorship have profoundly influenced the growth and development of the political science department and the broader academic community.

The Kenyon College community is deeply grateful for Haywood's contributions and wishes him all the best in his future endeavors. His legacy at Kenyon will continue to inspire and guide future generations of students and scholars.

OPRIG Interaction

A Kenyon chapter of OPRIG, the Ohio Public Interest Research Group (see article, page 4) is a worthy means of constructively interacting between the liberal arts students and the subjects of the world. We hope to bring the research beyond campus centers, as the well-established OPRIGs on other campuses have shown, can be scaled to accommodate the demands of life at a residential college. Students and faculty members can involve themselves in the project and, should it reach fruition, to make an effort to integrate OPRIG work into the curricula of the College.

The dissemination of much-needed facts which OPRIG seeks to bring about will only provide an opportunity for individuals to apply theories learned in their studies, it will also aid the community that surrounds the Hill. All are affected by the problems of our day, from media inundation to child abuse to corporate monolith. Thus the problem-solving capabilities of the Kenyon professor and the Kenyon student should be shared with all, not circumscribed exclusively within the high-class libraries of academia.

Filter Needs Repair

To Whom It Concerns:

The "Swimming Women" are becoming what we hope to be yet another successful season in keeping with the tradition of Kenyon swimmers' excellence. Yet this year there is a particularly insurmountable obstacle in the way—concrete is in use in one of Schuler Pool. This is not new problem. The filter system has been accumulating to a terminal illness called "age" for a long time, but the problem has become a crucial one. In the past week, the water filters have had to practice in a pool complete with sand and products by the earth disdained from the bottom of Schuler's filter system. We have also been told that we have to sink a veritable jungle of green animals and plants beneath the new "improved" filter level. The whole issue was brought to a head on Tuesday when the women discovered that the pool on the floor was filled with clear water. We were appalled and distressed at the possibility that our opponents may soon be calling us such names as "clean," "beautiful," and "sanitary."" Green Lagoon," or "weird," that we may fall prey to infection and/or illness. If all this is true, that something needs to be done about the pool, we shall do what we can. OPRIG can not wait for two years for an entire new pool, welcome as this addition

World Economy, Campus Concern

By ROGER FILLION and WILHELMMERICK

World economic problems are the most important concern on campus, according to a sampling of students, faculty, and administrative officials. This opinion was shared by a significant number of issues that will be explored in this column.

Most of these issues were both political and economic in nature, yet the latter was more pressing. Faculty and administrative officials were interests in discussing the economic problems, while students' concerns were largely economic. A significant number of students have discovered the political outlook of the two foreign students questioned.

The energy problem in the United States, its implications for the rest of the West, and the passing of the[s] energy were all foremost concerns. Related to this was the problem of diminishing Western economic leadership in the world. Many people denounced OPEC as one of the reasons for this trend.

In addition, some persons considered domestic and world economic fitness a means for curbing both domestic and international political problems.

Problems in the third world, and its relation with the rest of the world, generated political interest. For example, one student disapproved of the West's employment standards and techniques in Africa.

The question of world problems is a Big Problem. Yet the similarity in some responses was surprising, as evidenced by the following replies to the question, "What do you think is the most important issue or problem in the world today?"

Dean Thomas Edwards: "Acquiring a world peace that can be achieved by nations acquiring, or maintaining, economic security.

Richard Trethewey, Professor of Economics: "The dramatic increase in gross world product in the past three decades has made it possible for the West to eliminate global poverty within the next 50-75 years. Standing at this threshold point in history, we advance western countries, particularly the United States, are obliterating their leadership roles in world affairs. Domestically, these countries are having policies which are inhibiting the economic growth that is necessary to the world to eradicate world poverty.

Harry Clee, Professor of Political Science: "The most dangerous problem immediately confronting us is the growth of Soviet military power, and the West's advantage in foreign policy in Africa and nearby countries. I am identifying all this as one problem and one that is demanding political and economic solutions.

Molly Poling, sophomore: "We need to learn to live within the limits of the world's resources, i.e., energy, food, living space, and the irreconcilability of the environment."

I hope that every nation should rise up and stop such people." Donald Ragan, Professor of Religion: "Increasing economic or civic crises in this country would make it difficult for me to exercise the generosity and intelligence required to solve our other problems. Energy vs. Environment: Udall, Martel Debate

By RICHARD SNOWDEN

The debate held Monday evening at Rosse Hall between former Secretary of the Interior and new environmentalist Stuart Udall and Leon Martel, respected educator and ex-executive of the Hudson Institute (a demographic and econometric research organization) was loosely billed as an exchange of views. It was actually a more pragmatic energy policy versus the continued need for environment protection. As usually, however, the near-capacity crowd favored a discussion centered mostly on energy issues, while the questions raised pertained to some of his collateral concerns.

Udall and Martel agree that the United States faces at least in the short-run—a serious energy shortage, particularly of petroleum products. The differences between the two men arise in their respective assessments of the severity of the crisis and most importantly, in the means and methods of a public-policy agenda for the future.

Udall pointed to the manner in which energy policy has been made in this country in the past, the Arab oil embargo. He painted a dismal picture of inflation, lowered productivity and continued dependence on foreign petroleum supplies in the America of the 1980s. For Udall, the most serious problem confronting the United States is one of attitude: "We wanted to believe that we're so versatile that nothing like an energy crisis could take place, . . . this country is notoriously prone to daydreams."

Udall claims that economic principles and economists who in the past have underlined sometimes simplistic solutions to very complex problems. If you believe there is an easy, quick solution in the short run, you're wrong," Udall warned.

Instead of proposing a particular program to achieve energy sufficiency, Udall preached the need for conservation and a broader role in solving the energy problem. "We must be prudent, thrifty and cut our waste of oil," in addition, Udall proposed an increase of the gasoline tax to achieve two objectives: spur conservation and provide funds for alternative forms of transportation, such as buses for public education and improved mass transit.

In direct contrast to Udall, Martel proposed a highly pragmatic way of achieving energy independence.

We wanted to believe that we're so versatile that nothing like an energy crisis could take place . . . this country is notoriously prone to daydreams."

OPIRG Proposes Kenyon Chapter

By LAUREN WIENER

Presently there is a movement to establish an Ohio Public Research Group chapter on the Kenyon campus. The proposed organization, to be modeled after 17 such groups now operating on U.S. college and university campuses, will involve the gathering of information by students, faculty, and concerned public on public concern topics such as ecology, human rights, sex discrimination, and consumer matters.

The idea for a Kenyon OPIRG was spawned by Ralph Nader's speech in Rosse Hall last spring by student senator and junior Bill Koggin, one of the group's coordinators. "The specific role called for in the OPIRG statement is to become conscious of and active in the society of which they are a part. In the week following the lecture, 800 signatures calling for a referendum on the issue of forming an OPIRG chapter at Kenyon were collected. However, "the Kenyon administration saw the proposal as one of student control, student control, student-funded, organized and run. As an affiliated chapter, Kenyon OPIRG will make use of the umbrella structure's staff as well as professionals, scientists, consumer researchers — in all, in-depth study and publishing the findings of the studies. In its broadest conception, it will be to join theoretical and practical aspects of academic learning in projects which aid the community of large.

Myerhoff, Tribal Expert to Lecture

The spirit of Margaret Mead is alive and well and coming to Kenyon, in the person of Ruth Myerhoff, half-Mead.

Myerhoff, who is currently working toward her Ph.D. in Social Anthropology, will lecture tonight at 8:00 in the Biological Auditorium. Her topic will be "Women's Lives Among the Pokes of North Carolina." Try to hear her lecture. Myerhoff has lived among the Pokes since 1972. She embarked on her study of the Pokes with Walt Lesky, and has concentrated her research on the role of women in Poke society and status and social power. Her illustrated lecture will reveal new information about Pokes society, women's property ownership, daily life, marriage customs, and female initiation rite.

Rush; Fraternity Scramble is On

Relatively soon, the loveliest of Old Kenyon, Leonard, Manning and Ward will be full of students not only planning to fall rush, but those who have been invited to sign formal "frats." If there has been any news of change, the minds of faculty and staff, and the minds of freshmen, students begins once again this year, on September 21.

Long ago, when fall off will be an IFC picnic on Friday night after which the fraternity women will be able to do all they can — within certain limits, to get desirable pledges to pledge their fraternity.

Rushing and being rushed are familiar to all of us except the freshmen who, not surprisingly, have a vague idea of what rush is all about. "Rushing" is the means by which fraternities acquire new members. This year, approximately $10,000 — $12,000 will be spent "on the hall" during rush. In order to get to know the freshmen rush, the freshmen will have parties, barbecues, canoe trips, . . . it is not quite a free-for-all, since there are specific rules and procedures for all rush activities. (Continued to a fourth-week period, rush will begin on September 21 and will end on October 27). The freshmen will then place their bids for the fraternity of their choice joining.

According to IFC president, Ken Rice, no formal invitations will be presented to freshmen before commencement of rush, however, fraternity will be allowed to have "frat parties," and other IFC activities.

The rules and regulations connected with rush (the official dates, etc.) were presented by Ken Rice and the IFC to the campus last week. Ken Rice, working with the Administration was important, Dean Edwards especially played an essential role in communicating the rules, the policies, and the standards that have been defined. It is expected that freshmen students begin once again this year, on September 21.

When asked who they thought rush actually was, the freshmen came up with typical responses. "You go to all the frats, have a good time, and you try to get a roommate," said freshmen Jim Gips, one of the freshmen males interviewed were already versed in the stereotypes of the feasible and meant of them were interesting, as well as the future fun.

The freshmen were enthusiastic about the parties, but were not concerned about the money. They were also not concerned about the pressure of rush. Nevertheless, they were in agreement with the men, acknowledging that it would add to the dimensions of their social life. This is perhaps the most contrast — whether or not the freshmen over time too much of Kenyon's social life. Dean Edward's maintaining that "the freshmen have a long established and proper place at Kenyon College." However he has a "certain obligation to be an institution," and has to come to grips with the issue of the "best interest of the institution and the students."

The rush season officially closed on September 21, remanded the Dean's and freshmen in their social and fraternity "heavy domination at the beginning of the year and price competition with fraternities who cloud out other opportunities."

As to the actual rush activities, each frat has a different rush plan. They range from the opening of seven fraternities to the opening of seven fraternities. Since the opening of seven, Tim Martel and Jim Gips have been reserved for Warter Brothers, but by request of the producers formal announcement of the plans had been withheld by Kenyon. The Public Relations Office said it expects to be in contact with Warter Brothers later this week concerning the possibility of rescheduling.

"Ryebucks Tonight and Tomorrow Night"

"...the best of life is but intoxication; the grape, the rose, gold, in love..."

The hopes of all men, and of every nation:

Without their sleep, how brandish they were.

Of life's strange tree, so fruitful on occasion:

Then return — Get very drunk; and when

You wake — with headache, you shall see what then..."

— Lord Byron Don Juan

Kenyon's answer to Byron's immortal words happens to be the Ryebucks Society.

According to Dave Faus, the society's Curate of Monuments:

"The Ryebucks are a social society existing to bring diverse people together, and for everyone to have fun. The society is made up of an assortment of people, both current and retired students. The society has traditionally been a great place to meet new people and be involved with the school." The Ryebucks are supplied by the Ryebucks officers, who run the society and enforce the party policies on the party

The general consensus among the frazzled men was that the parties get the students drunk to ensure large turnouts and profits, but the majority of their friends agreed that the social scene at Kenyon is not as dull as it may seem.

"I think the social scene is just as good as anywhere," said Tim White, "but it's just harder to get involved." The frazzled men agreed that involvement is the key to a good social scene.

Kokosing On Rampage

By ANDREA McEVoy

"If the Kokosing had risen three more feet, it would have been like the flood in 1937," said Charlie Jacobs, coordinator of Health, Safety, and Maintenance, referring to Friday's flooding of the Gambier area.

Remnants of Hurricane Frederick released three to five inches of rain on the already over-saturated Kokosing Valley, causing the usually quiet Kokosing River to leave its banks, flooding the area around it, and closing Route 229 and Canterbury 33 to traffic for several hours.

"I couldn't even set my garden stock," said Jacobs, whose vegetable crop was ruined by the flood. "It almost drowned my dog that was tied up until my neighbor saw him," he added.

By the time the flood began to recede at one o'clock, water had seeped into several buildings. The lower level of Farr Hall had water running out of its doors and bush Baskey Hall and Smythe House basements were swamped.

The only place the flood seriously affected was the New Apartments, said Dean Robert S. Hendig. Roof leaks occurred so that an extent that one student had to be moved from her apartment into the Alumni House.

This problem occurred because of poor drainage, causing water to collect and seep through the apartment walls. "We haven't heard of any other roof leaks, which is surprising," said Dean Reading, noting the large number of flat roofs on campus.

As a result of the flooding, Gambier lost its electricity for two and-a-half hours, causing a total blackout and interrupting normal daily activities.

Friday's lunch was served on paper plates in the dark. A cold buffet was the fare at Good dining center while at Peirce Hall a hot lunch was available because that facility's generators were not affected. "Had the blackout gone on for more than one meal, there would have been a problem," said Curt Burgdorf, Saga's manager. "Luckily, the electricity came on early enough for dinner to be prepared," he added.

With Friday being the last day of course changes, the interruption of electricity "caused the computer center to break down, delaying the entering of student class changes by a day," said Margaret Woodward, Registrar.

Other effects of the blackout were individual professors cancelling classes, the closing of Gambier stores, and a three-hour breakdown in the college telephone system.

Questions have arisen concerning safety in buildings during blackouts, especially if one occurred at night. The only light available in the halls on Friday was from rooms with open doors. Questions such as should Kenyon have emergency lights have been raised among members of the Kenyon Community.

It has often been said that living on the hill insulates Kenyon students from the outside world. This proved doubly true during the rains brought on by Hurricane Frederick. While most of the college was high and dry, Kokosing valley residents had a different story to tell. Gone With the Wind

By LINDA ENROSE

Have you ever thought of what life would be like in a totally different geographical location, say, in the 18th or 19th century? Well, if you haven't, you can experience it for yourself, this weekend, Sept. 26-28, as Gardner's own Metropolis Festival.

The festival opens Friday afternoon at 3:30 when thejonglars, a medieval music group, will hold a renaissance music workshop at Ross Hall. That evening at 8:00 p.m., the jonglars will perform at Ross in the first George Gund concert of the year.

Saturday from 2-4 p.m., a Medieval Fair will be held on Petron Lawn. Musicians, artists, jugglers and beggars will be among the attractions. If you haven't seen them before, or you're just curious, you'll be in for a treat. The goal of the fair is to increase awareness of the Middle Ages and Renaissance music.

Sunday afternoon at 2:00 p.m. some of the fair's participants will be performing at the Greek Gym in a special event sponsored by the Student Activity Committee. The event will feature a variety of musical and dance performances.

His Girl Friday

If you're a fan of Cary Grant or you've ever looked for some adventure last Wednesday, His Girl Friday is a good choice.

His Girl Friday has that "slickpate" quality that is so reminiscent of the early days of cinema. It is hot by some that this style of comedy is too amorous to be funny or too critical. However, this is a common mistake; it is best exemplified by the popularity of such series as Mervyn Peabody's Flying Circus. His Girl Friday is a well-blended mixture of romance and comedy, but it is not "singing in the rain" of Hollywood history.

Howard Hawks, who directed this film, is interested in how an independent woman deals with a man's world; hence the rationale behind casting Rosalind Russell in a role originally written for a man. His Girl Friday is based on the play the Stage Page, which in recent years was made into a film of the same title with Jack Lemmon and Walter Matthau.

Vote Pee Wee For President

Analysis and Commentary By FEE WELF ELL WERNER

When you mention "Kenyon" or "Gambier," certain words naturally spring to mind: words like "community," "coholism," "literature," and "claustration." Yet every time we candidates present to "foster a sense of community," or "enrich the framework of the atmosphere," as to allow greater student participation, we say, "I say, I say," the last thing Kenyon students want or need is deeper involvement. What they want is old, safe, I've fact the face come February when you haven't seen a new face for six weeks, when you know every bit of gossip three days before it happens, when you're ready to end it all just for something to do, do you need open channels or communication? "A more responsive student body." Another finesse Social Board misfire? NO! What you need is a bit of Jack and a ride to Columbus, pronto.

The duty is clear, the clarion call unmistakable. With humble heart and ready hands, I, Fee Welfe, will not only declare you my candidacy for the office of Student Body President, unlike the "third wheel" opponents, I offer no empty mishmash of mediocrity and political correctness, but a solid program of concrete proposals. I am realistic in believing that no one here gives a fart about "dramatically increased parking," or about "openness and efficiency," or about "student input providing the impetus for progress." What's more, I know that this office has need to do with such issues as the Health Service, the food, the need for an athletic complex, tenure hearings, parking, the quality of SAGA food, or in society we have no intention of wasting my time and yours with their old standby of campaign statements, which nobody does anything about after the elections anyway.

As I intimated, I offer a program of bold, decisive action. I seek this office for the purpose of getting things done, not for the purpose of merely embellishing my resume. In this election, at long last, Kenyon students will be offered a choice.

When I say that I intend to streamline student government, I do not refer to the creation of yet another cosmetic subcommittee as a sop to those who demand action, an honest-to-God PUBLIC. The rule of one man is the most efficient way to run any organization, whether the whole of society or a hole of a college campus, and that is the system I intend to institute. No longer will we be saddled with a plethora of authorities in the form of Student Council, Finance Committee, Medical Board, etc. Instead, all governmental functions shall be wielded into a single, encompassing entity, that is saying, a system of the hierarchy of responsibility. Under new order, I, your fearless leader, shall pioneer Kenyon toward a brighter, an echo.

Shall we continue under the same old system of petty bureaucracy, or shall we Put Things Right? Don't allow the facts of the inn college to get you down. The only thing that refuses to endorse our government, but even refuses to endorse its ugly side? No.
Season’s Opener
Capital Swamps Lords On Second Half Surge

BY PAM BECKER

Kenyon gridders were shut out, 24-0, in their season opener with Capital University, Saturday, in what seemed like two different games with a halftime in between.

It appeared as though there were really four teams playing on Mt. Blue Field. Kenyon's early defense held up solidly, bringing a scoreless duel into the halftime lockerroom, but finally weakened as the Crusaders exploded for four second half touchdowns.

"We haven't had any comebacks with other teams this pre-season," observed Coach Bill Hoiter. That would have had something to do with the Lord's second half fusillade.

The key to the Lord's strengths still lies with the defense, but because Capital operated a total of 14 offensive plays to Kenyon's 49, the defensive stamina was overtaxed. For the third quarter. Standouts Keith Studzinski, Mike Shiba, Greg Niehaus, Carlos Daugat and Tom Besley still managed to maintain good performance, but the loss of injured defensive back Tim Foster and Pete White was a factor.

Foster should return to action as the Lords travel to OAC title contesting Wesleyan (6-3 last season) this Saturday.

Kenyon had two strong offensive drives against the Crusaders, but only penetrated past the midfield stripe five times. The best attack came in the second quarter as quarterback John Coffey directed an eight play, 91 yard drive, to the Capital 41, before being stopped on fourth down.

Of the Lord's 143 total offensive yards, junior tight end Jim Stueber's 101 topped the list, due mainly to the Coffey directed aerial attack. Freshman tailback Pat Hunkler rushed for 54 yards on 17 attempts. With Hunkler doing most of the ball carrying, tailback Tim Mazella gained only eight yards as he was relegated to a blocking role.

On their first possession Capital drove to the Kenyon three yard-line, mostly on runs by Jeff Mason, but ran into a stalwart Kenyon goal line stand. This was to be Capital's most successful drive of the first half. Of Capital's five more first-half possessions they managed to penetrate the Kenyon ten yard line twice more unsuccessfully.

Capital scored quickly in the second half, with a well engineered drive originating from the Kenyon 24 ending in a four touchdown pass. Freshman Scott Meadows blocked the extra point.

The Crusaders made the score 12-0 with a late third quarter score.

Kenyon opened the fourth quarter with their deepest penetration, as Coffey, using a combination of Hunkler-Maarella runs and passes to Stueber, drove the Lords to the Capital 14. On second and long from the 14, however, Coffey's wayward pass ended in the hands of a Capital defender, thus closing Kenyon's best scoring opportunity.

All the coaches were pleased with the team effort. Head Coach Tom McHugh had special praise for the crowd. McHugh added, "we've got a pretty good team and though we're not pleased with a loss, we are pleased with the kids' effort and enthusiasm."

Ladies Dump Ashland Look To Denison

BY LARRY O'CONNEL

The Kenyon Field Hockey Team began its season Tuesday with a routing 3-0 victory over Ashland.

The Ladies have a strong returning team led by senior co-captains Barb Robinson and Ann Bush; Senior Ana Myer returns to action with her strong shot after a one year vacation at Boston University. Though five girls were lost to graduation, this year's sophomores saw extensive action last year and are stepping right in along with returning junior Chloe Perry.

Though scoring has been a problem for the team in the past, Coach Karen Burke expects improvement this year. The veteran attackers are very aggressive according to Burke. Ann Bush came on as a strong scorer last year, continued scoring with a goal Tuesday, and Ana Myer had the good shot the year before. Barb Robinson and Deb Housh of the other attackers, Coach Burke feels the offense has "excellent speed." We'll use the winning game. We have the personnel to score now.

Defense has traditionally been the strong point of the team and the snapshot at Ashland points to another good year.

The women have a very tough schedule this season facing both Kent State and Ohio State, Division One schools that finished 1-2 in Ohio last year. However, Coach Burke said, "We should go above 500." The LVV plays a six game schedule this year.

Tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 the Ladies host arch OAC rival Denison University. Though they have seven games, The Big Red, Robinson hopes that "because of our new goalie and strong defense we hope to break this record."

Depth and fitness were Soccer Coach Jeff Vennell's principle tools as his team dropped a disappointing 3-0 overtime contest to DePauw University in his Kenyon premier at Friday Night.

The depth and conditioning will also be a key factor in tomorrow night's home game against Western University. The Bobcats demonstrated their strength and fitness against DePauw, Saturday, by taking a 4-2 victory from the Indiana victors. "Our pride proved to be too much in the air, on the ground, and aggressive," according to Vennell. "They are a very fit team and never quit.

Though Kenyon is that the depth of one or being a statistical understanding tomorrow night, "we can throw three men from which half the brace the ball quickly," Vennell contended, "because they bring the ball sufficiently to be overplayed.

Right now "we're in a hole now with the worst possible midfield and backfield. We should be playing the ball up the field more quickly," he added, "in moving it forward and from one flank to another to the front of capitalizing off the OWL weaknesses.

What needs work at this point is "building goal and backfield reserves," Vennell pointed out. "We need to work on our own defense, with one exception — their hot dogs.

Hot dogs at Three Rivers Stadium taste as if they were boiled fast because they're cold, slimy and generally make one retch. Compare this with hot dogs at the Cleveland ballpark, each hosed a lackluster team, but fabulous hot dogs. The pattern of and on the few teams having bad hot dogs and bad teams having good hot dogs begins to take effect.

This pattern exists throughout the major leagues. As an example in New England are about the superiority of the Red Sox, so are they about the supposedly good-tasting Fenway Franks, the official ballpark hot dogs in Boston. I've tasted from at least three Boston fans that Fenway Franks are generally good but were the best in the major leagues. Yet as well as the Red Sox play baseball, there's one hot dog are, in a word, abominable. In fact, I'll tell you, having had the misfortune of tasting a Fenway Frank, I've named their quality in a recent column.

Kenyon defense though by out-

The Tigers scored twice more to take the lead midway through the second half. With eight minutes of regulation time left freshman Fotez Ahlers rejuvenated Lord hopes with his tying goal.

The Lords controlled the play in the first overtime period holding the steadfast DePauw offense to only two shots, but Kenyon set up the table for an overtime goal to seal a 3-1 Tiger victory.

Frank thoughts on an American Institution

By JIM RESSLER

Okay Cleveland, your city has defeated, your style is on a recession, and your grammar doesn't mean a damn thing.

Without question, eating hot dogs in Municipal Stadium is the high spot in an otherwise dull afternoon spent watching the Indians try to play baseball. Hot dogs themselves cost one cent and can be consumed in about three minutes from which half the brace the ball quickly and a fraction of the time it takes to see a fine inning game, clearly a winner in the all-season contest.

Contrast this to a different city and a different stadium and a different place for the eager fan to see the Cleveland Indians. As an agnostic in New England are about the superiority of the Red Sox, so are they about the supposedly good-tasting Fenway Franks, the official ballpark hot dogs in Boston. I've tasted from at least three Boston fans that Fenway Franks are generally good but were the best in the major leagues. Yet as well as the Red Sox play baseball, there's one hot dog are, in a word, abominable. In fact, I'll tell you, having had the misfortune of tasting a Fenway Frank, I've named their quality in a recent column.

Barnes Place Second

A sample of the Kenyon harrier's new depth was evident Saturday, as the Lords lost to Oberlin behind Edgell of Oberlin by one point in a triangular meet at Oberlin. Oberlin, fourth-place finishers in last year's O.A.C. Championship, placed runners in positions 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 6th to easily match the meet with 21 points.

The best Kenyon could manage was 11th with place finish by Andrew Huggins who ran a 27:31 for the flat 5K. Immediately following were Dan Cosor, Mike Helms, Bob Flemming, Jim Kildare, and Oliver Knowland placed 11th, 12th, 14th, and 15th respectively on the Oberlin list. It was Knowland's finish which assured a Kenyon win. By finishing 9 seconds ahead of Oberlin's fourth runner he put Kenyon runners ahead of the Yeowomen in the county called displaceament.

At the same time, the women ran a three-mile course. Margaret Corrside led from beginning to end and finished in 18:41. She was followed by Merrill Robinson, Mary Surmin, Sue Lasko, and Linda Emerson.

Don Dewitt, seventh man for the Lords with a time of 28:42 showed how deep the team is in balance. Only 41 seconds separate the top seven finishers. Last year's top runners are gone but the depth of the women's team should carry the Lords to a hoped for 6th place in the O.A.C. Championship.

On Saturday, the top ten finishers from last week return to Wooster for the O.A.C. Relay, a unique event in cross country with five two-nan teams compete over a six miles course. Next Tuesday, the harriers return to Wooster for a more normal quadrangular meet against Wooster, Heidelberg, and Marietta.
