Editorials.

In this, the first edition under the new board, something in the way of announcement and salutation is according to custom expected; and we shall start out by introducing the new members of the board to the readers of the Collegian. Mr. C. T. Walkley, '92, is the Literary Editor, and this year an attempt will be made to confine ourselves strictly to student productions, and to this end we ask contributions from all. The Collegian is intended to be the organ of the students, and to fulfill this aim to the highest extent hearty cooperation is necessary. Mr. L. C. Williams, '92, is Business Manager, and under his guidance it is hoped that the Collegian may emerge from the uncertainty of financial troubles and be placed on a secure and profitable basis; but to attain this end the co-operation of all the students is necessary, and their dollars are just as important. To the alumni we can say the same and hope to see more of them on our lists. The Collegian in the past year has been improved in many ways and this has taken money; we hope to make many more improvements and these will all take money. Our advertisements cannot be expected to pay all expenses and the subscribers must do more than simply receive and read the paper. Mr. Bope, '93, is the third new member and has the Exchange department with Assistant Business Managership. Mr. Gill, '91, retains his old place as Local and Personal Editor, which he has filled so well in the past. With these sketches and remarks, wishing all a prosperous year, the Collegian board of '90-'91 greets you.

The successful field day of the K. M. A. should inspire all to work and hope. Much of the brightness and success of commencement week is lost if Kenyon Day is allowed to lapse as was done last year. The committee have done all in their power to induce the students to take an interest and help make Kenyon Day a success. Some few students—very few we regret to say—are training for the events, a spirit to be commended to all. Even if we cannot break Inter-collegiate, or even Kenyon, records we can at least have exciting contests and keep people awake during that week, otherwise apt to be so dull and long.

It is the duty of every student to make commencement week as pleasant as possible to all who may be in attendance, and in athletic sports we find one of the chief means for this end.
The announcement of the intention of Pres. Bodine to resign at the meeting of the trustees in June has been received with regret by all the students, who recognize in him a firm and devoted friend, not only of the students themselves but of all the institutions whose interests he has so much at heart.

For fourteen years—a longer period than any other man in the history of the institution—has he been president and striven with might and for its present success and future good. He has raised more money for the endowment of the institution than any other person; has labored against difficulties unknown to many; has been opposed, slandered and traduced by those from whom he would most naturally expect aid; has helped formulate and worked incessantly for the new Constitution, which he rightly believes will be the saving of the institutions in Gambier, and at the last, when he sees his efforts about to be crowned with success, he resigns rather than any one should have even the shadow of an opportunity to say that it was done to increase his own power.

Now in the midst of controversy and excitement not unmixed with prejudice and ignorance his work may be by some unappreciated, but the light of succeeding years will show the wisdom of his steps and the unselfishness and true manliness which impels him to make a sacrifice that good may come.

The work of the Diocesan convention in postponing action on the new constitution was a sore disappointment to nearly all the students, but indications are very favorable for its passage next year, either in its present form or with a few unimportant changes. The failure of the convention to consider it was largely due to the fact that President Bodine had made public his intention to resign and in deference to him all action was postponed.

The Southern Convention which met at the same time had quite a stormy session in considering it, and hearing the report of the educational committee. Their report urged the adoption of the new constitution with a few changes in themselves not important, but which they have evidently overestimated.

To those who have noticed the workings of the different schools under different heads, it is apparent that the only way to bring success to all, is found in the plan of one institution with one head, all working in unity for the same common purpose. We believe this is best expressed in the plan of committee as shown by their work in the proposed constitution. Their standing, experience and the knowledge we have that our interests are theirs should make us satisfied to accept their report even if all is not clear to us. A better feeling between the different schools and more regard for the interests of each other must be shown before success will be reached. In no other case more clearly is it true that in union there is strength, in division weakness.

The base ball season of the Ohio Inter-Collegiate Athletic Association now being over, the question naturally comes up as to the benefit all have received from it. That there is benefit in visiting and being visited by the neighboring colleges few will deny, but it might be asked has not all this been more than outweighed by other considerations. In the first place, in their anxiety to win the pennant nearly all the colleges have not been too honest in their endeavors to get players. Quite a number of the players in the league are students only so far as to fulfill the conditions of the constitution and attend two college exercises per week, this is something to be strongly censured, but when this is exceeded by getting professionals the action can not be too strongly condemned and college honor ought to repudiate any such action. The fact that it was found necessary in revising the constitution at the annual meeting to insert a clause forbidding professionalism ought to be enough to show that not all was benefit in the past season. In foot-ball in the fall we shall not be hindered by any fear of professionalism, but more stringent rules in defining a student should be adopted.
That a person should take music, art or such a subject twice a week and legally have a right to play as a student is plainly enough stretching the term and living up to the letter of the law, but far from the spirit of it; as such a person can hardly be called a bona fide student. Another point to be regretted is that in not every case has the proper attention or even friendliness been shown to the visiting team in certain places; one of the best points that can be made for such an organization as the Association is that it will improve the friendly feelings and relations between the different colleges; but alas! this has not always been so, and hatred has been formed or increased.
Let us enter on the foot-ball season with a different feeling and strive to do as we would be done by.

NIKOLAI V. GOGOL.

MUCH has been written lately with regard to the condition of Russian civil life and also of Siberian exiles. A country though clouded with shame because of her treatment of convicts, has bright spots, or rather most brilliant gems for a redeeming virtue in her literature. Originally the most of the available reading matter of Russia was translations from the German, French, Italian and English. Imitators abounded, and it was not until fifty years ago that a characteristic Russian writer was thoroughly recognized.
Nearly all Russian writers, whether poetry or prose writers, with the possible exception of a few satirists, were imitators.
Some of the greatest authors of the present century, Zhukorsky is mentioned as the best example, owed their fame to translations. Pushkin, Russia's Homer, found in Byron a style to be imitated, and did not discover the power and resources of the country in which he lived. He died having detected the budding of a Russian literature.
To him is given the credit of inspiring
Gogol to his work.

Authorities differ as to the exact date,
according to Paleroi, Nikolai Vasilyévitch, Gogol—Yanovsky was born March 31st, 1809, at Sorovvchintsui; but on the authority of M. Dupuy, Gogol was born in 1810.
Perhaps the fear of governmental authorities had something to do with the mistaking of these dates, but it is thought that the former is correct, from the fact that he is a Russian, while M. Dupuy is a Frenchman.
He was educated at Niejin, and was not particularly noted as a student. His literary taste however, soon revealed itself, and he started a periodical named "The Star."
At Niejin he wrote several poems which were published under a nom de plume.
"Gasten" was written while he was at college, but not published until 1829. This poem was so ridiculed that he bought up all the copies himself and burnt them in a room at an inn. This same year he went to St. Petersburg, tried the stage, failed, and procured a position of appendage, but his restless disposition soon compelled him to give it up.

His father was a Regimental Secretary,
one of the honorary officials in Zaporogian Cossack forces. His grandfather had served the Government in capacity and in Gogol's infancy he heard the legends and bred coss-sack tales of adventure from one of them.
Herein lies the power of Gogol. In 1830
the first of "Evenings in a Farnx," were published. These excited the greatest interest and were greedily welcomed by the rough unpolished Russians. The Cloak, and St. John's Eve—which perhaps is the best
—are characteristic tales. Much in St.
John's Eve deals with witchcraft and a certain charm about the style makes it very acceptable reading. The Cloak is the story of a poor governmental clerk, a copyist, who is faithful, a beautiful copyist, but incapable of filling any other position. The poor fellow discovers the scantiness of his cloak as the winter comes on and the keen weather compels him to buy a new cloak. The trials of this poor maniac in getting his cloak are portrayed with a keen sense of humor.

Gogol's one aim seems to be in making the life of the Russian official contemptible and ludicrous. In 1836 his play, "The Revisor," appeared. The plot is quite simple and uninvolved. A worn-out traveller with empty purse arrives at a provincial town. He is taken for a government official and immediately finds himself the object of much favor and receives bribes which are intended for one whose arrival is awaited with fear and trembling. The play was successful in spite of the indignation of the officials. The aim of "The Revisor" is carried out more fully in Merluiya a Dushior "Dead Souls." First part was published 1842. The hero is an adventurer traveling through the provinces making fictitious purchases of the souls of slaves who had died since the last census, with a view to pleading them to the government. Many criticise it as being merely an excuse for a series of pictures of provincial life and the types of Russian society. His descriptions are vivid, bright, and wonderfully poetical. Dupuy says that it is in his prose that he is a poet. The universal comment made by the critics upon this book show its success from a literary standpoint.

After he had finished the second volume in a religious spell he destroyed the latter part and it was finished by another.

Taras Bulba is Gogol's chief work. Thurgenief acknowledged him with this compliment. "Taras Bulba," he said, with much animation, "The day when our Gogol stood the colossal Taras on his feet he showed genius." To attempt to give an outline of this story is out of the question here. The time is the sixteenth century when Poland was attacked by the Cossacks. The book has a most unique beginning. It opens by the father welcoming his sons home from a divinity school where the elder did not accomplish much nor the younger with the exception of falling in love with a beautiful Pole. Taras takes his two sons with him to war and the story of the adventures takes up the rest of the book. While they are on the way to the Sketch this beautiful description is woven in.

"The sun had long looked forth from the clear heavens and inundated the steppe with his quickening warming light. All that was dim and sleepy in the Cossack's minds flew away in a twinkling; their hearts fluttered like birds ......... The air was filled with the notes of a thousand different birds. In the sky immovable, hung the hawks, their wings outspread and their eyes fixed intently on the grass. The cries of a cloud of wild ducks moving up from one side, were echoed from God knows what distant lake. From the grass arose with measured sweep a gull, and bathed luxuriously in the blue waves of the air. And now she has vanished on high, and appears only as a black spot, and shines in the sunlight. Deuce take you, steppes, how beautiful you are!"

An equally beautiful description is found of evening on the same day.

In 1836 he went abroad for the first time and spent many months in Italy, where he wrote much of "Dead Souls." His residence was at Rome and it made such an impression on his mind that it was painful to witness the change from the bright, fresh sparkling Gogol of his youth to the morose religious maniac of his later days. Asceticism and mystical exaltation told upon his nervous system, which was painfully evident from his writings of this time.
THE COLLEGIAN.

In 1848 he made a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and on his return settled in Moscow, where he died March 3, 1852, being not quite 43 years old.

OUR BASE BALL GAMES.

On May 22d the Ball Team went to Akron to play Buchtel and we rather expected to come back with a scalp dangling in our belt, but instead we left ours with them much to our regret and their delight.

The game was lost by our rank fielding, our batting was heavier, of the six hits one being a three "bagger" and also having an earned run. The pitching of Walkley was the feature of the game he striking out twenty men, the star record of the season.

We were much pleased with our trip and the treatment we received at Buchtel's hands. There is some pleasure in visiting such a place as Akron and being treated like gentlemen by gentlemen. Before the game the team had a very good picture taken by Wolfram. The appended score explains it all, our eight errors being much more costly than their nine.

Gill and Morrison attended the annual meeting of the Association at Wooster the next day as Kenyon's delegates. Some few changes were made in the Constitution the most important one being the plan of rotation of offices under which Buchtel gets the president, Wooster vice president, O. S. U., Secretary and Treasurer, with State Field Day, and Kenyon the tennis, Denison having had the presidency the past year takes a rest.

Thursday, June 5, the O. S. U. team played at Gambier, and considering the day, the Columbus boys put up a very good game. It rained about eight innings of the game, very hard, making it exceedingly difficult to pitch or throw the ball, and this was the cause of most of the errors, the following is the score:
The evening of the 12th "Father" Lewis and Hall took a stroll after prayers, and although "Father" was warned that he should not be out after 7 he persisted and kept on in his wicked course. Wandering around at the foot of college hill he spied a strange animal and started to throw stones at it, the animal did not seem to be much frightened but could not run and "Father" proceeded to pick it up, when the "critter" opened his scent bottle and sprayed the curious and incautious theolog. He had struck a skunk. Not in the least daunted by his sweet reception he captured the animal and brought it up to college to learn its name for he was as yet ignorant of it. June 12th, the day of the Wooster game was cloudy and in the morning seemingly unfit for a game, but it cleared up in the afternoon, and old Sol poured down his rays on a long suffering and patient people. Kenyon went under 5-0, and the sun went behind a cloud to swear a little privately. We followed suit with the exception that there was no convenient cloud to hide under. We were fairly and squarely outplayed as the, score will show. The umpire was a little off color, roasting both sides, though we got much the hotter end of the poker. The same old cry explains the defeat—inability to hit the ball. The nine's weakest point all along has been this, and next year we must practice batting if we expect to do anything at all. The yearly crop of hay has been gathered from the campus.

Mr. Michael, Head Master at the Hall from '85 to '88, is to be ordained in Gambier.

Harcourt Commencement took place the 15th and was a very pleasant and successful affair.

Harcourt examinations began Thursday, June 12, and their commencement was held Wednesday, June 18.

Lewis's pet which escaped the other night was discovered in the moat and shot by Morrison on Saturday. It is a good thing it is dead or some one else might have shared Father's fate and had to bury his clothes also.

A special train will run out from Mt. Vernon the evening of the 23d in order to give the people living there an opportunity of hearing the Baccalaureate sermon. The vested choir of St. Paul's Church will furnish the music for the occasion.

A tennis tournament was held on the college courts Tuesday, June 3, the winners of which are to compete in the O. I. A. A. tournament at Columbus on the 14th of June. The contesting teams were Buttolph Bros., Granger and Follett, Walkley C. and Foley, Sterling and Walkley W. Won by the Buttolph Bros.

The season for the picnic seems to have arrived and several times lately parties have spent the day at the Caves, all reporting "the finest time out!" What with picnics, hot weather and the flies the poor livery horses have a hard life of it and will unquestionably be pleased when the 26th has come and gone.

In addition to the regular sports of Kenyon Day, on Tuesday afternoon at 3:00 will occur the prize drill of the K. M. A. cadets for the valuable gold medal given by the head master. The contest this year promises to be very exciting and close, quite a number of extra well drilled cadets having signified their intention of competing.

The theatrical performance on the program for Tuesday evening of commencement week has been given up and in its stead the Sophmores will burn Analytics, and the Freshmen are talking of giving Balbus a like fate. An elaborate program for the Analytics has been prepared and everything points to a successful end, but the Freshmen have not gotten along so far yet.

The following is the program for Commencement week:

- Sunday—Baccalaureate Sermon.
- Monday morning—Athletics.
- Monday evening—Concert.
- Tuesday morning—Athletics.
- Tuesday evening—Cremation of Analytics.
- Wednesday—Alumni Meeting and Speaking.
- Thursday morning—Commencement.
- Thursday evening—Senior Reception.

The Senior Class supper, held at the Neil House, Columbus, June 6, was in every way a grand success, the menu was excellent, and the following toasts were given:

Toast-Master—F. H. Ginn.
President’s Address—Robt. Sterling.
Our Faculty—H. L. McLellan.

The old brick house opposite Dr. Sterling’s is being put in repair preparatory to being occupied by Dr. Mitchell, the new chaplain. This house is one of the oldest in Gambier, the old stone portion being built soon after old Kenyon, and for many years was used by different professors as a dwelling. Its windows have been favorite targets for those possessed by a “spirit of vandalism”, and these will have to cast their eyes around for some other place to throw stones; the bull’s eyes will be the chosen spots probably, being the most convenient.

Saturday, the 14, the ball nine went to Mt. Vernon to play a return game with the team there and were successful by a score of 20 to 16. Only four of the regular nine played and of these Walkley, W., was the only one playing in his regular position. The substitutes, however, did well, and there was lots of fun in the game if nothing more. The features of the game were the hard hitting of most of the team, the battery work of Walkley and Scott, the continuous “beefing” of the Mt. Vernon’s, the umpiring of Lanehart, and last, but not least, the way in which the Micks stoned the bus as it left the town.

According to custom the Freshmen held their Class Supper on the same night, but broke the old custom of holding it on the Hill, by going to Mt. Vernon. They were beset by many difficulties, however, in the shape of Sophomores, with whom they had a lively rush, in which some of them fared rather hard. They finally got started into town, having settled the rush by arbitration in which the Sophs had rather the better of it. The toasts were as follows:

Toast-Master—E. Burr Cochrane.
Our Class—F. W. Bope.
The Ladies—E. D. Babst.
The Faculty—R. J. Watson.
The Absent Masters—B. H. Williams.
Our Record—J. D. Follett.

Saturday, the 14th, was the day for the tennis tournament in Columbus, but in the morning it rained so hard that the contes-
The recent session of the Diocesan Convention at Mt. Vernon was looked forward to by the Students of Kenyon as a means of settling in some manner the perplexing question of constitutional changes, of putting the college on a firmer basis and of inaugurating the prosperity which she so justly deserves.

In this we were in a measure disappointed but the interest manifested in the college was an unmistakable evidence that next year will be much brighter and more prosperous. One event which occurred during the session was thoroughly enjoyed by us, and we believe this pleasure was not wholly confined to ourselves.

On Wednesday afternoon a special train brought the Bishop and clerical and lay delegates to the Convention from Mt. Vernon to Gambier. At the station they were met by the College Faculty, Students and Cadets of the Military Academy by whom the procession was escorted to Rosse Hall. Here after the singing of a college song, the address of welcome was made by Owen J. Davies on behalf of the educational institutions at Gambier. His address was a pleasing expression of the hearty welcome of all the students, and we feel certain that ere he closed our guests felt at home and were well assured that we are "right loyal sons" of Old Kenyon.

The Bishop on behalf of the visitors replied in an address full of energy, and when he finished all felt that we had been listening to a man whose heart and soul are in his work, and whose aim and endeavor will be to increase our resources and the number of our students.

The Rev. H. D. Aves, Mr. Chapman and Judge Marvin made excellent addresses which attested the love and pride which every Kenyon man feels for his Alma Mater. Dr. Bodine followed with a few well chosen remarks and was frequently interrupted by bursts of applause. He concluded with the announcement of the program of the rest of the afternoon.

The time until the train left for Mt. Vernon was occupied in visiting the various buildings and in renewing old acquainances. At six o'clock the visitors departed well pleased with their reception and many with the determination to send a son or daughter here next year.

Editor Mack of the Sandusky Register on his return home devoted considerable space in his paper to a description of his visit to Gambier, and the pleasant impressions received during his stay here.

We take this opportunity to extend our thanks to the ladies at whose hands Rosse Hall was transformed into such a tastefully decorated and attractive building. And to our guests whose presence made the afternoon so pleasant we extend a very cordial invitation to come again.

The strong points of the Brunonian are its excellent advertising patronage, bristling editorials, complete athletic reports and handsome typographical appearance.

Barring its startling resemblance to the "Talmageville Boiler Plate" or the "Backwoods Kicker," the Practical Student is as bright as any sheet coming to our table.

Wooster's University Voice, notwithstanding its sensational headlines and "pat. med." circular make-up, is well edited, and is doubtless the worthy representative of a bright constituency.

The valedictories of "retiring" boards of editors would make interesting reading in most of our exchanges, if there were not the air of sameness about them. It is our impression that, on the whole, college journalism is satisfied with its achievements for the past ten months.

A commendable feature of the June "Earlamite" is the publication of half a dozen articles written by alumni, one by a member of a class so far back as '67. College journalism would be materially strengthened if interest in it was not altogether confined to undergraduates.

We see by many of our exchanges that debating societies of the old school, after a long and honorable career, are slowly but surely giving away to so-called "Parliaments" and "Congresses." So long as the novelty lasts the change may be for the better, but we have doubts as to the longevity of its popularity.

The Wooster Collegian for May made its last appearance as a monthly, with a well assorted table of contents, in which the closing chapters of a long drawn out serial, "Orator vs. Athlete," and well written succinct articles on "Our Duty to the African," and on "Lord Macaulay as a popular historian" are most prominent. Next year it will come out as a weekly, with a radical change in its policy and make-up.
