On January 1, Hubbard Hall burned to the ground. The fire began shortly after six o'clock in the morning. John Parker, the head janitor, arrived at six-thirty. He ran to the building and unlocked the door at once. The flames and smoke inside the door did not allow him to enter. The whole front end of the building was from basement to roof along the stairway was burning. He shut the door, and cried for help, but that at early hour he was unable to arouse many. Running to the horses of Dr. Walton and Dr. Peirce he aroused these men and asked for help. A few, realizing that the proceeds obtained from the games would still leave a deficit if the alumni did not support athletics at Kenyon, have subscribed. Their part was not in question, and they have the most grateful appreciation from the undergraduate body for what they have done. There is one regret. The great majority of the alumni who could give small amounts have failed to contribute. There are enough alumni who can afford to give one or two dollars and up several hundred. If these men would respond our deficit would be wiped out. We shall all doubt as to the return of Bennis Pierce, the greatest coach Kenyon ever had will be assured. Most all students are able to B. In an article on football in the January number of the Century, Walter Camp enters into a discussion of the way to reform football. Following the line laid down by President Alden of the University of Virginia in his speech before the A. A. U. conference, Camp takes for granted that football has come to stay. All the wild rant against it is useless for it is broadcast into ideas and infames public sentiment and makes the right kind of people afraid of the game. Before long people do not realize that football is a very old game and that the so-called brutal features of it are not merely modern additions.

Camp quotes several interesting paragraphs from old manuscripts to prove this point. He says 'A professor in an American University said a few years ago. The boys are trained to consider as the hero not the moral champion nor the mental expert, but the greatest fighter or the heaviest rusher.' Three hundred and twenty years before him in 1531 Strabo wrote of football a bloody and murthering practice, and one that can serve the most of this world. '...he is counted the fellow and who but he,' Fifty years before him in 1541 Sir Thomas Grafton writes. 'Foot Ball where in is nothing but beastly fury and extreme violence; and a late in a proclamation of King Henry VI was issued which ran 'The King commands all that no man play at the ball under the payne of iud.' Does not the fact that all these cruel and edicts failed to stop football suggest serious consideration of what it gives this astonishing vitality??'

To the objection that the game exalts the physical, Camp replies that in all places and all ages physical prowess has been the most admired of all boisterous accomplishments. Yet the intellectual progress of the human race has gone steadily onward. If not the football hero it is the boxing champion or distance swimmer or some other youth who combined strength of soul in dangerous feats of sport. Dr. Laubach has said, 'The boy intellectual is only a very small part of the.

The wings of the building were brilliantly lighted with candles, while the body was filled with transparency. To give a description of all the devices would be impossible. The library windows of the Philomathian Society had appropriate designs; in one of them a pair of scales representing a pen in the one side outweighing a sword in the other, and as a background, rays of light diverging from a common center; in the other window were the portraits of Washington and Lafayette, surrounded by the American flag, eagle and shield, with the words "Pro Patria et Gloria," underneath. In one of the Nu Pi Kappa windows, was a pillar with rays of light falling upon it from the Greek letters 'Phi Sigma,' and underneath the words "Sapientia est Auctoritas," in the other was an open book bearing a pen, and above it Nu Pi Kappa written. The different Secret Societies had each of them beautiful designs, which would occupy too much time in describing.

The Phi Delta, a Literary Society of the Grammar School, had as a device the American shield bearing their motto, and beneath it the words "Vivit nova gloria claret." The other Grammar School Society (Athenean) had a portrait of Washington, an eagle holding in its beak their motto, underneath the motto, and the whole surrounded by a laurel wreath. The Freshman Class had a transparency consisting of a laurel wreath encircling a shield, on which was written, "Class of '92-Kenyon"; above the shield was a crown, and behind it a sword and a spear crossed, the ends protruding beneath the wreath, and a ribbon thrown across them bearing the words "Finita coronat opus." Prominent among the miscellaneous devices, was that of the Kenyon Chess Club, representing a game of chess played between two parties, one of whom is check mated, and above it the significant word "Yorktown." Among the comic and terror-striking devices, was that of the Soap-Dragon Club, a large double-headed green dragon vomiting forth fire and smoke, also a correct representation of his Satanic Majesty, and in a remote corner with a dim light was the "swall and cross-holes" with "Vale" written above. All three of these were prominent subjects of conversation among the country people, and many were the conjectures and "feel suspicious" breathed by the unsophisticated.

All this—the transparencies filling the body of the building, and the wings brilliantly illuminated—formed a magnificent sight. After about an hour's exhibition, the lights were extinguished, and the literary exercises at the Chapel commenced. This consisted in music and addresses. The President delivered the Introductory Address and was followed by representatives from the Societies, Mr. Guthrie from the Philomathean and Mr. Mitchell from the Nu Pi Kappa. These exercises finished the celebration of the 22d at Kenyon. Citizens, students—all, returned home satisfied, and the college, which had been turned from its usual course, resumed its proper channel, and all glides on as monotonously as before.

Alumni

The Alumni and undergraduates of Kenyon College living in Minneapolis and St. Paul gathered on Wednesday evening, December the 29th, for their Second Annual Reunion and dinner at the home of Mr. H. S. Gregg, '81, in Minneapolis. An association was formed for the purpose of bringing together Kenyon men who live in the northwest and for keeping alive the spirit of the college and promoting its best interests in that section of the land.

The strength and name of Kenyon is yearly gaining more hold in Minnesota, and the visit of President Peirce to Minneapolis last spring did a great deal toward securing men from that region to enter Kenyon. There were eleven men present at the reunion, which included almost one of the oldest alumni which the college has, as well as several men from the youngest class in college. They were: Rev. James Trumble, D. D., '52 A. B., '53 Bex., '56 A. M., who was elected President of the Association; Mr. H. S. Gregg, '81 A. B., Mr. Cha. W. Adams, '83, Mr. Cha. L. Cole, '84, Mr. John F. Trumble, '88, Mr. Thomas Eggerton Hayward, '100 A. B., Mr. B. F. Tull, '11, R. M. Watson, '22 L., E. Reilly, '12, I. R. Salter, '13, and H. P. Johnson, '13. Mr. Hayward was chosen Secretary and it is to be hoped that any who can claim Kenyon as his Alma Mater will make it a point to get into communication with the secretary, Mr. Hayward. 2421 Emerson Avenue South, Minneapolis, and be on hand at the reunion to take place during the Christmas holidays in 1910, which will be held in St. Paul.

Lemuel R. Brigman, '99, is temporary athletic instructor at the Advent Memorial Club in Cincinnati.

Mr. F. D. Tunnard, '56, died early in December at his home in Natchitoches Parish, Louisiana. Mr. Tunnard was a gallant confederate soldier during the civil war.

During the Christmas recess Mr. W. T. Finlay, '88 and Mrs. Clara Brandon, Harpurt, '04, were married at the bride's home in Columbus. They now live in Toledo.

Mr. P. L. Day, '99, and his wife, formerly Miss Mary Graham of Mt. Vernon are now living in Oberlin, O.

Howard B. Wright, '02 A. B., returned to Gambier for a brief visit, January 7th.

Harold Eddy, '07, graduates at Case this year.

The Rev. Royal H. Balcom, '03, returned to Gambier on January the 7th with the remains of his mother, Mrs. Louisa Badger Balcom, who died at the home of her son in Irvington, New York, at the age of 88 years. The burial service was read by the Rev. G. P. Snively and only the immediate relatives and friends attended. Mr. Balcom returned to New York immediately.

Maxwell H. Ganter, '04 A. B., visited Gambier on January the 7th for the first time since the graduation of his class. On leaving Kenyon, Mr. Ganter spent two years in post-graduate work at Yale, one year in travel and study in Europe. He is now at the General Summery in New York City, preparing to enter the ministry of the Episcopal church.

John L. Cable, '06, is now junior member of the law firm of Cable and Parmenter in Lima, Ohio.

Malcolm C. Platt, '08, is now living in Cleveland, where he has accepted a position.

George Southworth, '09, is now at home at Norfolk, Nebraska. He is special agent for the Middle West Insurance company.

James Dow, ex '09, has gone into business in Houston, Texas. He is a member of the Texas Roofing and Construction company.

FOOTBALL ALWAYS DENOUNCED.

Camp is sincerely impressed with the conviction that football is here to stay and that in some respects it is the noblest of all our sports for it does not lead to a career in professional athletics. He urges fair minded consideration with a view to beneficial reform, such as was advocated by President Alderman, instead of all the runt of the past months.

FOOTBALL RULES CHANGES

Probably every true lover of football is watching with interest the outcome of the conference in the East which is to meet in February to discuss the more or less radical changes in the rules of the game.

It is true that the death list is far greater this year than previously, not excepting the year which led to the original alteration of the style of play, but it however, seems that a large part of the newspaper criticisms which has been so evident in the last month, was written rather with the idea of furnishing the public with sensational news than giving the game fair criticism.

Some of the moderate changes to be discussed in the coming conference are the abolition of the running game or increasing the penalty in connection with the forward pass changing the number of downs from three to two and giving greater freedom to a player in the end zone.

The tendency seems to be towards a more open game in spite of the fact that some critics hold this largely responsible for the increased number of accidents.

To the Patrons of the Collegian:
Owing to the pressure of other work, which was entirely unforeseen when I accepted the editorship of the Collegian last spring, I have been forced to place my resignation in the hands of the Collegian Board. It will take effect with the printing of the issue now in your hands.

The board after accepting my resignation proceeded immediately to the election of a man to fill out the unexpired term. The result of this election was the unanimous selection of Mr. W. T. Kinder, 1911. I hope that all patrons of the Collegian and all Kenyon men will accord the new editor the same hearty support and interested cooperation which have made the work of the position a pleasure to me.

I had hoped to remain with the Collegian throughout this year, especially as at the beginning partly through my own efforts, a material change in the policy of the paper was inaugurated. So far I have reason to believe that this change has been generally approved. It is because of these facts that I venture this word of explanation for my course in laying down a work half done. My best wishes go with the Collegian on the successful career for which it is destined as a representative Kenyon paper.

WILLIAM J. BLAND.

THE KENYON COLLEGIAN

At a meeting of the Collegian Board on Jan. 6, plans were discussed for the coming year. Owing to the pressure of other work, Mr. Kinder resigned as Editor-in-Chief. The election of a successor was deferred to the next meeting. It was resolved that the change in the form had been successful, having met with the approval of both alumni and undergraduates should be continued.

COLLEGIAN BOARD MEETING

The Collegian Board met Thursday afternoon, Jan. 12th for the purpose of electing a successor to W. J. Bland '10 who resigned his position as Editor-in-Chief of this paper. After dispatching some routine business T. W. Kinder, '11, was chosen to succeed Mr. Bland.

The meeting then adjourned.

THE LIBRARY LOSS

The recent burning of the library should serve to point out several things to us. First the ever present need of fire protection has again been amply demonstrated. How this result is to be achieved, however, seems as much of a problem as it has ever been; and, it is not about it that this article is written.

The fact that we now have to do without the library and to make shift with a very poor excuse for the periodical reading room makes us think how big a part the library has played, unconsciously in our part, in the daily routine of our lives on the Hill. Truly the college library is the very heart and soul of college as an institution of culture and learning. Perhaps having it temporarily closed will make us understand its value more.

As to the loss itself, that is considerable. It is true more than half the actual money loss on the books and buildings was covered by insurance. The loss in old manuscripts, papers, pictures and all the articles belonging to the Kenyon Museum, however, cannot be replaced. Many of these things were rendered invaluable by association. Not all of them were destroyed, we are glad to say. The stack room came through the fire practically unharmed and everything in it was of course preserved.

We understand that another and more handsome library will be built and opened before next September. The Collegian hopes that such is the case and feels that it is expressing the earnest wish of the entire student body in so doing.

LECTURE ROOM VENTILATION

With the advent of Old Boreas accompanied by zero weather, into our midst much grumbling and soft impatience has been heard about the campus. Upon inquiring the reason the writer was informed that the ventilating system used in some quarters of Ascomsen Hall was perhaps better suited to the warmer regions found below.

We can appreciate how a professor warmly enthusiastic in expounding the truths of his department, might not feel the chilling blasts pouring in the wide open windows and reducing the huddled students to a state of cold consciousness. Some where it has been remarked that a low temperature reduces the mental activities in the same degree as high temperatures. It is also a known fact that a sleep or stupor overcomes a person about to perish of cold. In our opinion the various professors would find the students of the class far more nimble when the thermometer registers about seventy than when the mercury hovers at fifty as is frequently the case.

Nor do we wish to depreciate the good qualities of fresh air. It does seem, however, too much to say that a judicial management of the windows by the professor in charge would go far to secure the gratitude of the student body. A comfortable recitation room goes far toward securing a student's cooperation in a course.

A revival of medieval miracle plays at St. Michael's church, New York, in collaboration with the Players' association of that city inaugurated on Dec. 27, a series of ancient miracle plays. The first play represented a pagant of "The World." It is to be followed by a Twelfth Night Pageant on Jan. 6 with Robin Hood, Maid Marian and the old Morris dance.

This is the first attempt in America to revive the old miracle plays.

Contributions to this column are invited from Bexley alumni and undergraduates.

ON THE HILL

The first indoor base ball game of the season occurred at Rose Hall on Friday evening, Jan. 7, between teams representing the East and West Wings of Old Kenyon. The contest went five innings devoid of any special features. Hall is left held made a sensational catch and Sackett of the East Wing team proved that he has not lost his skill at piloting.

The game ended in a victory for the East Wing by a score of 7 to 2.

Batteries:—East Wing, Sackett and Sanderson; West Wing, Bland and Deacon, Dr. Walton and T. L. Cardillo officiated.

Several meetings of the Students' Lecture Course Committee have been held recently. It is planned to start the lecture series on Thursday, Jan. 13. The first one will take place before the mid-year exams if a lecturer can be secured. Several efforts looking for men who have been engaged in the teaching profession have come to the committee and are worth exploring.

The committee expects to arrange for an inter-divisional winter league, to start the week after next. It is also desired that every team in the league may play every other team. By this arrangement no complaint can be made that one of the best teams was eliminated at the very start as was said last year by several.

The committee consists of the following members: Messrs. Carillo, Sackett, Hardy, Kinsler, Mason, Downey, Guines, Williams and Dr. Boxwell.

Work on the 1910 Revolve is progressing nicely. Several most of the Revolves Board have been held recently, at which plans for the book have been discussed. Much work has been done and the Board regrets that this has been confined largely to members of the Junior class. To make the book representative every man in college should do his best in either prose or art to get some contribution into the annual.

Plans of the Junior Prom Committee are rapidly maturing. Although handicapped somewhat by the role of the board of trustees in regard to the decorations of Rose Hall, the Juniors expect to give a prom which shall fully come up to Kenyon traditions.

The Prom will come as usual on Monday evening. The Glee Club concert will also be on the same night hereafter (Tuesday evening). It has not yet been settled definitely whether the informals will be on Friday or Saturday after the play which will probably be the same one as far given in November. "Ici on parle Francais."

Owing to the thaw after the heavy snow of last week Old Kenyon, especially the three divisions suffered a superabundance of moisture. The water from the roof found its way under the weather sheeting and ran down into the interior of the building. Some discomfort was experienced and the prompt action of a relief squad under the direction of John Parker put a stop to the overflow.

As a result of the fine winter weather of the past two weeks, the Bexley Hill affords ideal coasting. Many parties have been formed and Friday and Saturday of last week and this week saw some of the best coasting enjoyed for many years. It is possible to start from Bexley gates, go sometimes down Middle Path to Chase avenue and then down long Battles' hill for a distance of nearly a mile.

Is the Kenyon Orchestra?

Until last year a College Orchestra has been a prominent factor in many of the annual events in the social life of the Hill. This year's orchestra is expected to receive much attention due to its advantages derived from such an organization, since we have a number of fine musicians in the Hill. Someone must come to the front and make a definite step; the orchestra would be affected that would be a credit to Old Kenyon.

DEATH OF M. T. C. WING

Word has been received announcing the death of Marcus T. C. Wing, Kenyon '84. The Pittsburg Post has the following concerning the sad event.

Marcus T. C. Wing
Marcus T. C. Wing, writing editor of the Pittsburg "Sun" died at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the family home, 894 Preuss Avenue, Pittsburg, resulting from an illness of five weeks. Deceased was well-known in newspaper circles and for years was one of Ohio's best-known educators, having served as principal of several Ohio towns. He had been a resident of this section since 1899, owning the Times-Bee. He took the position of writing editor when "The Sun" started.

Born in Shenango, Ohio, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Wing, he started early in life to make his mark. After graduation from Kenyon college, Ohio, Mr. Wing became identified with a firm engaged in structural construction. After a limited time in this line of work he became interested in educational work and was elected principal of the Gambier (O.) public schools. After a service of three years he resigned to accept the principalship of the Findlay, (O.) high school, and for five years held the position. He was known as one of the most progressive educators in North America.

In 1904 he decided to engage actively in newspaper work and has since been connected with the "Times-Bees," being advanced to the position of managing editor, which office he held when signed to engage in newspaper work in this city. He was a most veritable writer, having a thorough knowledge of affairs large and small, which proved an admirable asset to his writings. He was greatly interested in improving educational conditions in Pittsburg and had many friends among some of Pittsburg's best-known professional and business men.

Marcus T. C. Wing was expected, only a few days ago encouraging reports being received from Old Kenyon, which indicated a speedy recovery. He was an able writer, sincere in all his efforts, and seldom made a regret among a large circle of friends. Besides his widow, he leaves two young sons, deceased also survived by his parents, now at the death of his younger brother. Funeral arrangements have not yet been made.—Pittsburg Post.
Astrological Predictions for 1910

The following has been received from the Rev. D. B. Ray, an old and honored alumna of Kenyon. His genius of humor has evidently not been dimmed by the passing years:

Editor Kenyon Collegian:

Dear Sir,—For the instruction of your readers and all mankind, I send you the following astrological predictions for the coming year.

During this year the inhabitants of the planet Mercury will have a "hot time." A mercurial temperament will prove a poor protection against the sun's temperature.

Owing to the proximity of Venus to several stars, many of the latter will be involved in those matrimonial entanglements from which no one can escape without considerable wear and tear.

As the Asteroids are parts of a heated planet those who are in the same financial condition will locate there, as they will feel at home. But aeroplanists will not be allowed to bring one of the asteroids back here for the use of a football team.

The inhabitants of Jupiter will continue to be jovial and those of Saturn will be saturnine. Those below under an evil star will meet with disaster. (See Webster Unabridged.)

The prices of the lacteal fluid will rise so high, it will be necessary to procure a supply from the Milky Way.

All persons are warned against trying to catch the last new comet by the tail. As Mr. Halley has put up a sign "No trespassing."

Coming down to the earth—we will have a great deal of weather during the coming year. In those regions where earthquakes abound real estate will be shaky. Those who are blind will suffer from impaired vision, and those who are deaf will be "hard of hearing."

Those who are compelled to walk with crutches will not be able to join a football team. Many members of the basketball family will meet with sudden death. Owing to the lack of elasticity in the financial currency, it will be difficult to stretch one month's salary so as to cover two months' expenses. Notwithstanding the general rise in prices, whisky will go down.

Dr. Cook will be "discovered!" in the gulf of oblivion, meditating on those lines of a German poet: "When I think of you I weep and weep, and I think of you, I weep and weep."

Further predictions will be furnished if they are appreciated.

Yours, indeed,

D. B. RAY, Kenyon '55

Kenyon opened the basket-ball season of 1910 on the home floor by defeating the Spaulding Athletic Club of Columbus. The game was fast and interesting from the start. Kenyon decidedly outdistanced her rival in basket shooting while the Spaulding Club repeatedly showed good team work in carrying the ball down the floor. Young, who shot most of the field goals for Kenyon had to leave the game in the second half on account of an injury to his ankle which he received while in the act of shooting a difficult goal from directly underneath the basket.

Although everyone played a good game the work of Bentley, Young and Weaver stands out most prominently for Kenyon while Fleming, Bentley and Click excelled for the visitors.

LARWILL LECTURES

Around the world with the Atlantic fleet, a Larwill lecture by Mr. Franklin Matthews, promises to be one of the most interesting as well as one of the most instructive lectures ever given at Kenyon. Mr. Matthews is the correspondent of the New York Sun, who accompanied our fleet on its great trip around the world. He was one of the two civilians who had the privilege of witnessing this unparalleled event, and has had an inside view of all of the incidents of the cruise.

In July, 1908, the alumni of Cornell University, where he graduated in 1883, did him the honor to elect him president of the Associate Alumni of Cornell, an office that was held before him by Senator J. B. Foraker.

Mr. Matthews is a well known speaker in the East, and his lecture will certainly not be lacking in interest.

AN IDEAL COLLEGE MAN.

An ideal college man is a clean, well-bred, ordinarily studious and athletically inclined fellow. Of course, as with other ideals, no two persons will have the same conception of this ideal, and different locations and colleges will demand different ideals of men. For instance, in the East a man, to come up to the general standard, must be pretty well endowed with money, must have social standing, and in general must be a man of the world. In the West and Middle West these same conditions do not necessarily exist and we find men, with little money behind them and no fine obscure families, taking a leading part in the affairs of his college. A man's money is no hindrance to him and we find numberless men who, while immensely wealthy, take prominent positions in the various universities. But in the West this is not an account of their money, but because they have the other qualifications mentioned the ideal college man should possess.

We all know that while we can see that some good fellows who have got the best morals through are good "souls", we have not the respect for them that we have for the man who can clean through and through. Although this quality is fast becoming harder and harder to find, to my mind it is the principal one to be sought. I do not mean, in including "well bred" in the list of requirements, that a man shall come from one of the best families, in the present day meaning of that phrase, but I mean "well bred" to include all these qualities which are possessed by a gentleman. I expect the ideal man to be one who can take a position to be upright, courteous and honest in all cases, to be ambitious enough to use any talent he has for the continual uplifting of his college.

The point of being studious must not be overlooked. I do not believe that any person expects this ideal man to be a grind, but it would be extremely sad to find that he had failed to show the required amount of work at the end of the semester. I should like to see this man take his place in the literary field of the college, that is to do some work for the college papers, for the literary societies, and for the debating team. At times these departments are more or less ridiculed, but they are necessary for one of the strong positions in college life.

His athletic ability is not at all necessary. I put that in only because I think that a healthy mind and a healthy body go together and if a man goes into athletics on a conservative basis he will have both a healthy body and a healthy mind.

I believe that we can find this ideal man more easily at Kenyon than at any other institution, since here there are less chances for a man to become corrupted, less chance to lose his health, more chance to engage in literary and athletic pursuits, a close environment of nearly ideal college men, and certainly a democratic spirit which is found in very few high standing institutions.
