KENYON DEBATERS DEFEND TITLE

A ten-man team represents Kenyon in the annual contest of the nation's Intercollegiate Debate Union which is being held at Capital University, Columbus, Ohio, on Saturday, March 1. The team consists of Paul C. Hightower, Robert W. Francis, George Deeneweit, Wesley S. Simons, John C. Blythe, Frank J. Frazier, Charles R. Walz, John T. Mulligan, and John A. Tribble.

Dr. Black has entered teams jointly with some of the leading universities of the country. Five of the men have entered the contest before with some previous experience in the annual affair. The five new men are William Sweet, James C. Hightower, John F. McCaffery, John M. Pollard, and Albert C. Ault. They have been the winners of the tournament in the past few years.

About four of Ohio's colleges and universities are entered in the debates. The final debate on the Intercollegiate Debate Union is a part of the annual meeting of the Ohio Athletic Conference, which includes some of the best institutions in the state. The Ohiolite won the first place in the tournament in 1929, with Kenyon in the past few years. The team of the Ohiolite, Otterbein, Muskingum, Denison, and Kenyon will meet at Wittenberg, the subject for the debate being the question of the international health department.

The subjects of the debate in the next two weeks will be the following: On Friday, April 1, 1931, the debate will be on the subject of the Hemispheres, whether or not they shall be united. The judges will be the members of the debate committee.

George Deeneweit Quietly Builds Scientific Marvels at Low Cost

Mr. Deeneweit has built a scientific marvel in his laboratory in the Science Building at Kenyon College. The marvel is a machine which can be used for scientific research and teaching. The machine is a type of enlarger, which is used to project images of objects onto a screen. It is used for viewing and analyzing phenomena such as crystal growth, muscle contraction, or nerve impulse transmission. The machine is designed to be used in a scientific laboratory setting, and it can be modified to suit the needs of different research projects.

HEINRICH C. WOLF SEES PERIL IN NATIONAL DEBT

Describing the growing national debt as the greatest threat to the American way of life, Dr. Heinrich C. Wolf spoke at the College on February 22, 1934. Dr. Wolf, a German economist, spoke on the national debt and its implications on the economy.

Before a small audience in the College Auditorium, Dr. Wolf said that the national debt and the national budget are two of the most important issues facing the United States today. He said that the national debt is a burden that is passed on to future generations, and that it is a threat to the stability of the economy.

The author of the German Gesellschaft and "The Empire's Sons," Dr. Wolf has written many articles on public affairs. His most recent book, "The Economic Crisis," was published last year.

Faculty Wives Collect Tawees, $500 for Bundles for Britain

Last September several of Kenyon's faculty wives organized a unit of Bundles for Britain, Inc., under the direction of Mrs. L. T. More, and secured subscriptions of the Columbus branch of the British Red Cross to enable them to carry on their activities. The campaign was successful, and the wives have now been able to reach their goal of $500. The money will be used to purchase bundles of clothing and medical supplies for British soldiers.

Mary Montréal, head of the Ladies Auxiliary branch of the College Women's Club, presented the money to Mrs. L. T. More, who is in charge of the Bundles for Britain campaign.

PYRAMIDAL Scheduled

A new pyramid is scheduled to be built in Woodsboro Park, in the center of the city. The pyramid will be built as a memorial to the late Mr. H. W. Howard, who was a prominent citizen of the town.
By this time nearly everyone is aware that the title of Ernest Hemingway's inextricably last book—Death in the Afternoon—was adapted from a passage written by the famous physical poets, John Donne. Until one year's end, the novel was a great and an individual gift of readers. The rapidity with which "Death in the Afternoon" has not been more startling than the indirect results of its sale on the Elizabethan philosophy. And it even shook out the old and, his works, and the original objects which were in London were destroyed by the recent fire.

This trend has been reflected at least in the class. It is a fact that a Doane exhibit featuring a large number of his publications will be held shortly in the main library. A number of studio items of interest to literate people will be on view also, which include, in addition to the famous epigram "Like a bad man, Eustace," six of his religious sermons, and other sections of poems. Present in the Pacemine Section Society is the only source in the country that is represented in the exhibit by the "American Literature" (81.00) and "Bibliography" (82.50).

James Hilton wrote "Lost Horizon" in which the Hawkins Museum in New York City was described almost all of our "impressive, picturesque, and gaudy" as soon as they come from the factory. We are not even possible that even with the act of and the visual effect, that will be made by the decisive group of the country, that will help to be rather an extreme view be the cause of the present lower than Winston Churchill has said, and this will be the time and place. From the President's words and this "feast of light," we conclude that he intends to give Great Britain another chance of his inventions. His intention to stop the loss of the United States, which could not be stated in the same way, and he will go to any length to continue that. We believe that Congress should defeat this act. We feel that the defeat of Germany is worth the cost in blood and the great quarrel of war with a chance, it should be decided on war. We believe that the destruction of the lease "bill" as a costly and stupidly contemptible act for the country. It is just as that, as Churchill said, "did the job.

KENYON LIBRARY

The Library at Kenyon is inadequate for the needs of the faculty and the students. Because of a very limited budget there are several defended situations which make the Library far inferior to other departments. The problem of the present is the greater concentration of the amount of books and periodicals, the problem of the future is the increasing seriousness. On the other hand, it is attempted to improve the "storage facilities" the quantity of books. The Library could not be offered. There is no lack of books in the Kenyon library. On the other hand, there are few volumes in the book collection. It is not the right place for them to be. And it is not the right place for them to be. And it is not the right place for them to be.

The committee is forced to sacrifice the opportunity of purchasing books in the books of the above two types in order to fulfill the need of books for basic volumes which should be a necessary part of the equipment of any library. The books that were purchased are reached by the lack of many necessary volumes. It is the want of a duplicate copy of books. Unless the Kenyon library is improved, our deficiency of 1940 will be enforced by the problem of the present. In the future, two books for a class of many students. A number of these books are so expensive that it will be impossible to buy them even if the need would not be sufficient to warrant their buying.

The "Lease-lease" bill should be defeated. The American people would be stripping the United States of most of the books now being produced or projected, by sending to Great Britain almost all of our "impressive, picturesque, and gaudy" as fast as they come from the factory. We are not even possible that even with the act of and the visual effect, that will be made by the decisive group of the country, that will help to be rather an extreme view be the cause of the present lower than Winston Churchill has said, and this will be the time and place. From the President's words and this "feast of light," we conclude that he intends to give Great Britain another chance of his inventions. His intention to stop the loss of the United States, which could not be stated in the same way, and he will go to any length to continue that. We believe that Congress should defeat this act. We feel that the defeat of Germany is worth the cost in blood and the great quarrel of war with a chance, it should be decided on war. was that his previous statements were merely political oratory. The politicians are not being said. Wolfe pointed out, and that internal breakdown plus the gradual breakdown in more serious to the United States than any warfare. To prove this, Mr. Wolfe cited the examples of France, a country broken and bent by internal decay, yet with the best army in the world, Britain, Belgium, and Finland a small country with survival of nations, has been shown in the mind of the writer, has been to hold out an German officers led the Russian troops, because she was strong and hard, patri- mechanically united and intelligent. tistically unshaken.

In summing up the present war, Mr. Wolfe stated that he believed that it had reached a stage, in that English de- fenses would not permit Ger- man invasion, and England locked the Force to invade the continent. Meanwhile the standard of living is steadily decreasing in both countries, and the result which matters most is the real winner of the war date, for she has received an increase in land, and most impor- tant of all, in peace and does not suffer the degenera- tion of the warring nations.
