Singers Invade Oxford: Discover Western girls Able to Sing Too

By James Titball

Last year's Western College for Women concerts were a resounding success, with the Western choir making a triumphant return to Oxford in 1942. This year, the choir will once again take the stage in Oxford, for a concert that is sure to be even more spectacular than the previous year. The choir, under the direction of Professor John M. Williams, will be accompanied by the Western orchestra, led by Dr. John O. Brown.

The concert will feature a diverse range of musical selections, from classical favorites to contemporary hits. The choir will sing a cappella, with no instrumental accompaniment, showcasing their exceptional vocal talents.

Tickets for the concert are available at the box office, located in the Student Union Building, and at the door on the night of the performance. Advance tickets are recommended, as the concert is expected to sell out quickly.

Don't miss this incredible opportunity to experience the beauty of Western's choir and orchestra, and enjoy a night of musical excellence!
College Opinions

The other day, we heard some one talking about the editor of a college newspaper that he felt was "too liberal." We asked the student what he meant by liberal, and he said that the editor had "no international importance." We were inclined to agree if the present situation were the same. We were pleased to see that an editorial covering the present situation was being seriously considered by the college students. We have long been concerned about the trend of American college students to ignore their own country and its problems, and we feel that the present situation is a good one to consider.

We feel that the present situation is an excellent one to consider because it presents a direct challenge to the thinking college student. The world is going to require that the student be able to think critically and to make decisions based on what he knows, not on what he thinks he knows. McNeill to Enter National Indoor Swimming Meet

McNeill, Kenyon’s gift national Indoor Swimming champion, will probably be on hand for the National Indoor Tennis Tournament to be held on March 18 at Oklahoma City, it was learned from his official at Kenyon College. He arrived here some time ago and is expected to be in town in time to play in the national Indoor.

Naturally, it was rather surprising to find that the United States Lawn Tennis Association had awarded the National Indoor title to Kenyon. A conference was held here that evening.

The Oklahoma, however, did not give up the game, and the following day he appeared in the conference for the Ohio Conference Swimming Meet, which was scheduled for March 27.

The meets were to be held at the University of Oklahoma, and the conference for the Ohio Conference Swimming Meet will be held here on March 27.
