Kenyon Collegian - October 18, 1946
The editor of Time failed to appear on time, the Master of Balliol was swallowed up, but these matters were of small importance in the adroit planning of the seventy-two-hour Heritage of the English People conference.

Three hundred guests of the College converging on Gambier Quad—Columbus Thursday night and Friday morning were collected from Gallon, Mt. Vernon, Manchester, Columbus, Cleveland by college cars shuttling back and forth. By Friday afternoon, the register of the Alumni House read like a Blue Book of scholars, industrial magnates, and society. Lord and Lady Kenyon, Walton Hamilton; Harold Löska, Sir George Sambon; Creton Brinton, Carl Ganter, Jacques Barran, Ananda Coomaraswamy, Denis Bovey, Irwin Chenham.

Professors, corporation presidents, college administrators, and businessmen criticized the English Heritage, admired Kenyon's campus. The speakers but one and visitors examined their heritage, and found it wanting but nevertheless basically admirable. The one, Ananda Coomaraswamy of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts cogently insisted.

No Rushing

The Dean's Office announces there will be no rushing of incoming men until the temporary housing facilities have been completed and the freshmen have moved from these, and the senior faculty will continue to issue announcements of the academic program: recitations, blues, whites, backsans, purples, silks and velvets, led by Archbishop Carrington of Quebec, who, in his robes, as one guest later remarked, "looked as if he had just stepped out of an illuminated manuscript."

"One of the greatest tragedies of the last hundred and fifty years has been the falling of white shadows over the Southern Sun." The audience applauded, one became loudly insistent but this reaction was not typical of the usual response of calm reflection.

Agreement of words but not of ideas between Harold Laski and his antagonist, Senator Taft was accomplished when the former called for a "reaffirmation of the Anglo-American achievement of finding significances for the individual citizen." The weariness of reacting to two days of heavy weight argumentation was relieved somewhat by a charming humorous session with Robert Frost who asked men to maintain the "Separations of the Parts, more exaggerated individualism.

Sunday, the last of the sunny bright conference days, began with the colorful convocation of the senior faculty, and the Senior Council will take further action on this issue at its next meeting.

Homecoming Weekend will open Saturday, October 19th with a program limited in scope for two reasons, Robert B. Brown, Alumni Secretary, announced. This year's celebration of the annual alumni homecoming will not be as important an occasion as usual due to the homecoming feature of theti August's Victory Commencement and the fact that accommodations for a large number of Kenyon alumni are impossible to procure.

The weekend will be highlighted by the Kenyon-Marietta football contest on Saturday afternoon and the Undergraduate Alumni Smoker in Peace Hall Saturday evening. The Executive Committee of the Alumni Council meets at 9:00 A.M. Saturday morning, and the Annual Meeting of the Council proper will be held immediately following the football game.

Laski Donates Ms. To Library

Harold J. Laski, who spoke here during the Conference has sent a letter of thanks to the College in which he expresses a wish to benefit in some way, once Kenyon campus he says is "the most beautiful" he has ever seen. Laski offered his collection in the Kenyon Library either of two manuscripts. At his option, the manuscript of a manuscript notebook by Sir Henry Main, the other, a manuscript speech, the first one Leonard Blum made in England after the liberation of his native France.

Classics Department Gets New Prof.

Mr. Robert O. Fink, Associate Professor of Classics, B.A., Indiana University, M.A., Cornell University, Ph. D., Yale University, Mr. Fink has taught at Indiana University, Yale University, Russell Sage College, and comes to Kenyon from Beloit College.

World Government Enthusiasts to Meet

All students and those interested in world government are to meet to discuss the conference and the students' plans for a group, possibly allied with either Student Federalists or World Government magazine, a Los Angeles group, will be held in the Music Room of Peace Hall, tbd. Wednesday evening (See Pg. 2, "Your Business")
Your Business

The article on page one of this issue referring to the formation of a Kenyon group of world federalists may not seem to be directed towards you. Yet it is your business! It must certainly concern almost every student in the College because almost every student in war-ravaged Europe in the UN and seeks a way in which it might be improved, a way in which he as an individual might help to get it improved.

The project of world federalism as fostered by both the Student Federalists and the World Federalists is one answer to the question of how we must overcome most of us after a session with a newspaper or magazine. Both aforementioned world government organizations offer every individual student here at Kenyon an opportunity to work for a practical yet permanent peace. If at all possible, attend the meeting at Peace Hall Wednesday night. It is indeed your business.

A Yearbook?

It's normally plus at Kenyon now. The increase in enrollment, the return to the semester system makes possible many features of college life not enjoyed during the accelerated program. One of the features which we all expect to see re-instituted in a yearbook— at Kenyon, traditionally, of course— is the Reville (and, incidentally, traditionally pronounced Rub-veelyuh). Yet there may be no Reville this year!

This is the case. Since 1943 Kenyon has published no yearbook for obvious reasons. At Commencement Time in both 1945 and 1946 the Class of 1947 was in London to review the previous year, the various activities, and every individual student, his activities and accomplishments. This type of yearbook is naturally impossible. It would be even less qualified for the present academic year. But besides being far from commensurate with Kenyon's needs such a Reville is impossible, too large, too expensive, and will require excessive effort on the part of the Collegian staff. A separate publication prepared by a separate staff is the only way.

Here, as in most colleges, the publication of the yearbook is entrusted to the junior class. This year's junior class must begin work on the project immediately. Publishing a yearbook is too engrossing a task to delay its inception another month, or even week.

If, and we hope this does not occur, the junior class decides, after careful consideration, that by itself it is unequal to its responsibility, it must enlist the support of other campus groups. But, whatever the situation, Kenyon needs, can have, and must have a Reville for this, its first postwar year.

It is my purpose to present a completely ludicrous appraisal of Kenyon's estival pedagogues. Attribute any expressed acidity to the assumed superiority of an upper classman and dilute it with your first week's experiences. The men of cap and gown are to be revered, obeyed, and slaved to.

of Cusset (Allier), France, and Douglas Milton Thomas, of Dirks, Alaska. Another student was expected to enter from Alaska, but he was killed in an airplane accident recently. This man was David Robert Johnson, of Fairbanks, Alaska. His name, together with the names of five other men who have withdrawn, has been dropped from the list of entering students. No other cancellations are expected for the moment by the Admission office.

The addition of these 181 men to Kenyon College brings the total enrollment to another record figure of 541 students. The average enrollment before the war was about 275 students, and the total student body could not exceed 300 students, by the order of the Board of Trustees. The future plans are to limit the student body after the end of the present educational emergency, to 400 students.

The representation in the new group of entering students by states shows Ohio leading with eighty-one students entered. Next is New York, with twenty, followed by Pennsylvania, nineteen, Illinois, fifteen, Michigan, ten, Minnesota and Massachusetts, four, New Jersey, five, Missouri and Washington, two, and Iowa, Oklahoma, California, Virginia, Indiana, West Virginia, Washington, D.C., and Maryland, with one each. In all, Kenyon welcomes students from eighteen states and the District of Columbia for the fall term of school.

Conference Teams Show Varsity Strength

By BOB COLLINGE

With the season well under way for most of the teams in the Ohio Athletic Conference, it is possible to gain a picture of the prospects for each of these teams. Kenyon has played only one game, but the other colleges in the league have all played at least two, and the scores of their games tell a great deal about the games facing Kenyon later this fall.

On October 13, Otterbein won its third game of the season to continue to be considered the big threat in the conference. The "Otters" beat Heidelberg rather badly, although the score showed only a 29 to 6. Otterbein, with Paul Davis and Ken Ziegler taking turns kicking the ball, marched down the field six times, scoring after three of these drives. The team took advantage of most of the breaks the game, and was able to shake its team loose for an average of 63 yards gained on each attempt. It also recovered several Heidelberg fumbles deep in Student Prince territory, a sure sign of an alert, fast football team. Kenyon plays Otterbein on November 16, in an away game. The Lords will have to find a way through a big and tough line to score, and Coach Henderson's charges also will have to stop Davis and Ziegler to win.

With Heidelberg, it's a different story. The Student Prince outfit still has to show some improvement before they can be considered a big threat to any other team in the conference. The season's record for this group shows no victories, and a detailed analysis of these games show a weakness at both ends in the backfield. Ted Roese, the Heidelberg quarter-back, seems to be cursed with a bad case of fumble-itis, and until he can improve in this department, none of the plays the team can hope to make will work. As far as the ends go, the story is told in the Otterbein game, where the Cardinals scored two of their three counters around right end, and the other around left end.

Capital and Marietta played an exciting and tough game on October 5, with Marietta winning, 12 to 0. The Gridiron gridders could not hold the huge Marietta line, and the result was no score for the Lutherans and two touchdowns for Marietta. The interest comes in the fact that Capital usually has a hard-hitting squad. In the Capital-Wooster game last Saturday, this was evident. The Lutherans were outweighed by twenty pounds per man, and lost in a close battle, 7 to 6. Wooster's score, like the pattern in the Marietta game, came in a plunge through the line into touchdown territory. The only ray of hope for a successful season at Capital lies in Norm Devine, a half-back. Devine is fast and an excellent broken-field runner, and he got away in the Wooster game for a seventy-five yard touchdown punt.

The Ohio Athletic Conference boasts many strong teams this year, and none that can really be called soft touches. If a prediction is possible at this early date, it would have to favor Otterbein as the probable champion in view of its fine early season wins against Wooster and Capital.

Kenyon, after losing the opening game of their season to a weak Hiram team, faces Marietta, Capital, Ashland, Heidelberg, Otterbein, and Mount Union in league games on successive Saturdays. Heidelberg and Capital will be the easiest of these, but both are not to be taken lightly. However, it must be remembered that the Kenyon team lost to Hiram after completely outplaying them all through the game. Kenyon gained eight first downs to Hiram's three, and out-rushed them by almost a hundred yards. Kenyon was inside Hiram's ten yard line three times, while the Terriers threatened only for their one score. With any kind of luck in regard to injuries past and present, Kenyon should prove to once again have the "stuff" needed to make it a power in the conference.
Project Field House

The above cut shows the architect's conception of Kenyon's proposed Field House. This building is intended to be more than serve the purpose of Rose Hall, the present gymnasionum. The projected Field House will include many features which Rose Hall lacks but the plans are not yet completed. The Field House will be built on the athletic field which lies behind the railroad station.

Hiram's Spooneller played a bang-up game at quarterback keeping his team out of danger most of the afternoon.

The above game will be the last of the season for both teams. Kenyon fans were thrilled also by the all-round play and fighting spirit of "Sparky" Vail.

The Lord's fallback showed promise of great things to come.

The loss, during this game, of Jim Graves at the tackle spot is a serious one. His broken hand will probably keep him out of action for several weeks. For prospects of the Marietta game see page four.

DAVE HENDERSON

Coach Henderson is married and has one daughter who is his hobby as well as his pride and joy. Asked about his greatest thrill, Dave said it was when he scored from second base on a squeeze play against Ohio State to win the game.

Coach Henderson sees great possibilities in our Purple and White eleven, which is still green after only nine days of practice. We certainly wish Dave and his team the best of luck, and hope his career at Kenyon will be as successful as it has been previously.

FOOTBALL Fans, Please Note

In my opinion Mr. Taft may possibly wish to have aggressive warfare stricken off the records of international law as a crime because of a possibility which is undoubt-ably dear to his heart, namely the possibility of this country going into an aggressive war against the Soviet Union.

It is generally recognized that drinking has no place in inter-collegiate sports. In previous years Kenyon has been brought into some difficulty with Dennison University and other schools as a result of a failure to respect this country. This drinking ought to stop at our games so that Kenyon's name will no longer be blackened by it. Everyone is urged to attend the games, except those under the influence of liquor and those who intend to drink. It has been generally agreed upon among other schools to eject from the stadium those guilty of this practice. Kenyon students can cooperate freely without jeopardizing their enjoyment of any of our games.

RESponsible Student Government Is aim of new constitution

Satisfying a rigorous clamor for more effective student government a committee, Stanford Lindsey, Andrew Morgan, George Whitaker, and James Bellows, drafted a new constitution which was recently approved by the student Assembly and the Faculty. Only an election of student officers is needed to begin the functioning of the new plan.

The government is tri-cameral although each of the three legislating bodies has some unique functions.

The Student Assembly consisting of all registered students is to meet monthly to consider amendments to the constitution, petitions of students or groups if these are rejected by close vote in the Senate council and to hear KENNY TRADITIONS CARRIED BY SHIP

Carrying 100,000 tons of general cargo for Boston, including over a thousand cases of Scotch whiskey and seven Irish show horses and hunters, the S.S. Kenya Victory, the first passenger-cargo ship of the United States Line from the United Kingdom since the war, docked at East Boston in late May.

Eight passengers, including three couples, were aboard the vessel that left Belfast on May 4 to resume the war-interrupted service of the line between Boston and the United Kingdom.

Executive committee reports. The Student Assembly shall have the right of review over the actions of the Senate Council.

The Senate Council is composed of division representatives. There are no faculty or administration officers in its membership. This body is primarily the police agency. In disciplinary action, a Faculty Committee may hear appeals from Council decisions. The council also negotiates directly with the administration over student rules. What this part of Article II, Sec. 4 means in effect is not clear. Successful performance of this function will depend on the co-operation the administration gives to the Council's arguments, and the semblance of the Council's suggestions.

Either the Senate Council or the Student Council must approve actions of the Executive Committee which concern principally the disposition of the Student Council Funds.

The Executive Committee is a privy-council consisting in elected representatives of each of the categories of student activities. It performs the serious business of allocating student funds to the various activities; establishes rules governing student enterprise. The Executive Committee listens to student and group petitions as do the other two bodies.

Kenyon Invited to Bridge Joust

Mr. Foster M. Coffin, chairman of the Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament Committee, has invited Kenyon undergraduates to participate in the 1947 Duplicate Tournament. Preliminary rounds will be conducted by mail and sixteen teams, representing every section of the country, will be chosen for face-to-face finals in Chicago on April 18 and 19, 1947.

The Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament Committee, is a group of alumni interested in developing a bridge as an inter-collegiate sport. Its support of the event prevents any possible cost to either competing colleges or students.

The 1946 contest, limited to colleges in the North Eastern area and Kansas, was won by Cornell. There were 42 participating colleges.

The separation of authority among the three legislatures is not sharp; the provinces of student jurisdiction and faculty jurisdiction are not marked, however, that in the last resort those responsible for the maintenance of the College in good standing, the administration, officers, have position to act whenever the student government performs wrongly by neglect or unreasonable. The ability of the students to govern will determine the extent to which they shall exercise their powers.

In the vicinity of the Gambier Post Office Monday morning following the Conference, one figure approached each of the two then in the vicinity. One of the figures had much to say about the distinguished Robert Frost. As the other, who, with his head down, almost bumped into Frost, had also contributed to the success of the Conference. His name was Bill Fox, one of the Kenyon students who had volunteered to direct the guests of the College.

After a mutual and laughing introduction, the two chatted about general and then exchanged opinions on the outcome. What had Mr. Frost thought of the Tatlock session was the student's first question. Robert Frost believed that Senator Taft had taken a courageous stand, that his statement regarding the injustice done the... (Continued on page 8)

FROST MEETS FINE

Now war criminals left one with much to think about. After a time the conversation shifted to Mr. Frost's farm in Vermont and then to "Gordon and Berta." For a moment "Gordon and Berta" went over Bill's head—he was hardly used to hearing President Chalmers and his wife spoken of with so much informality. Frost went on to speak of his frequent visits to Kenyon and said that this was one of the few places on earth where one could escape the noise and distraction of the world.

Bill thought quickly as Frost and he rambled along leisurely. Bill's wife, Pat, had once done a source theme on the Dean of American Poets. She would have longed to meet him. Mustering his courage, Bill rushed a daring question at Frost. "Would Mr. Frost go to his house and meet Pat?" It was only a short way from where they were.

Well, the poet was out for a walk, certainly he would go. He would be delighted to meet his young friend's wife.

The two turned a corner and strolled down a wooded lane. From them the scarlet and golden trees waved softly. After a few minutes the men, one young, one old, turned up a walk to the last house on the rutted road.

The elder man sat down on a porch chair while the other rushed into the house.

"Pat? Pat, where are you?"

"I'm down in the cellar here, washing, Bill," came the muffled reply.

"Pat, Robert Frost is here. He wants to meet you!"

"Oh Bill, I can't come up looking like this. I'm a sight. Tell Mr. Frost to come back some other time; Wednesday would be fine."

"Pat, don't you want to see him?"

"You know I'm dying to, but I can't, Bill."

"Well, come up anyway. Come on, right away."

Soon the old man rose from his chair to greet a pretty, but flustered girl who came shyly from the house, her hair up on her head.

After the first flurry of introduction the three chatted amiably about domestic life, life in Gambier, and the things people talk about when they are all alone and not trying to be other than themselves. It was sometime before Robert Frost left the Fine home to go to Cincinnati with "Gordon."
