Summer Trip Abroad For Students
At the request of the Division of International Exchange of Persons of the Department of State, two converted tourcoaches of the C.C.A. have been placed at the disposal of the government for passage to Europe. The Institute of International Education will complete the necessary arrangements for space for students desiring to travel abroad.

Naturally, accommodations are limited in the luxury class. Main passengers will live in the halls and will not be at a stand-up enforced, but have from 170 to 200 each day.

All you can call an English and a French port and two of the sailings will go to Oxford. Priorities for passage will be handled by the Department of State and tickets to Europe will be issued by the M.C. Coremane and the United States Consul-General in Paris. We are now assembling a long list of members sponsored of group students and will send to each person a calling card to this respect.

Full information on the details will be sent from the Institute of International Education to 46th Street, New York 16, N. Y.

WKCG Plans Program Facility Expansion

Last year this time we joined PS and asked for "a government of law and not of men." The band of time now turns the words upon us, and asks. Give us more! MKENNON MEN.
Letters to the Editor

In the last issue of the Collegian Mr. Leist put on his shining armor and, like a good knight, bravely defended a lady from furious attackers. I am fully aware of the position I am in as a countryman of Mme. Flagstad, but I am sure that I cannot be asked to assist Mr. Leist.

According to Mr. Leist, Kirsten Flagstad was only stilled against without stirring herself. As evidence of this he mentions a test mental presented to her by Chief Justice Stang of the Norwegian Supreme Court. But Mr. Leist tells only part of the story which gives a completely distorted picture of the Flagstad case. It is true that Mme. Flagstad refused to sing for the Germans, and that she did not appear publicly in Norway during the war. For this she got the testimonial from Mr. Stang. But what had Mme. Flagstad done before she returned to Norway?

She was without doubt the most famous Norwegian in the country at the time of the Nazi invasion of Norway when the Norwegian Government called upon all Norwegians at home and abroad to do whatever they could to assist their country in the time of peril. The government considered it especially important to build up good will in the United States. To accomplish this, no one could have done more than Kirsten Flagstad. But what did she do? The answer can be given in one word—nothing. Instead, she wanted to go home to her husband whom she could not help knowing was an active collaborator. The Norwegian Embassy urged her not to go. When Mme. Flagstad refused the request, the Embassy would not assist her. Mme. Flagstad, however, must have had influential friends somewhere else. She got permission to go through Germany to German-occupied Norway. I leave it to the reader to guess which one assisted her. In Norway Mme. Flagstad remained passive, shunned by all parties. This, Mr. Leist is the story. If you had lived through five years of German occupation, I am sure your attitude would have been different. You would have learned the hard lesson that all the occupied people did, that all those who were not, were against. A middle path was not possible.

To the Editor:
The Movie Committee of Kenyon College is bringing to Kenyon in June 2nd, the famous French film, "The Call of the Daughters." This film, starring the late French actor, Samu, is being shown as part of the price that is about six times the normal price of a first run movie. We will need the highest attendance we can get in order to keep the cost down. But this is the only way we can keep the students of Kenyon College, as well as the student body at Kenyon pres- ent at this picture.

To The Editor:
Jutte Handerson once remarked that "the deepest eclipses that can be written in memory of a man are those that his passionate love failed to stretch forth a hand to aid, and his suffering to ease." This is the very eclipse that the student body of Kenyon College can very properly describe on the headstone of the Senior Council and the Senior Court. This splendid twin of our student government could have been saved had the student body directed itself enough to become acquainted with its rights and to inform itself concerning the ac-

The Kuwaiti newspapers Praises Spirit

In the midst of the current conflict between the rich and poor, the Kuwaiti newspaper "Praises Spirit" has continued to publish articles that highlight the struggle of the underprivileged. A recent article titled "The Innocent Bystander" discussed the plight of a Kuwaiti student who was found innocent but was still facing financial difficulties due to the high cost of living and studying.

The article also touched on the lack of support from the government and the community, which is often more focused on the wealthy and the elite. The newspaper called for a change in the system to ensure that every student, regardless of their background, has the opportunity to pursue education.

In another section, "The Cozy Grill" featured a review of a new restaurant in Kuwait City, highlighting its cozy atmosphere and delicious food. The restaurant is located in the heart of the city and offers a range of dishes suitable for all tastes.

The newspaper also provided updates on local sports events, including a report on the Kuwaiti national football team's performance in the recent international tournament. The team faced significant challenges, but managed to secure a respectable position, inspiring the local community.

Overall, "Praises Spirit" continues to serve as a voice for the Kuwaiti people, providing them with a platform to express their concerns and aspirations.
