Alumni Return: C. P. Taft
To Receive Chase Medal

The COLLEGIAN Reports

Approximately 250 alumni of Kenyon College will attend the Homecoming and re-dedication of Old Kenyon this weekend. Although there are about 4,000 graduates and non-graduates of Kenyon living, the number expected this year is the average number of people that attend the Homecoming.

Activities for the event are composed of meetings of various committees, the re-dedication of Old Kenyon, the awarding of the Philander Chase Medal, the football game at Benison Field, and open houses in Old Kenyon. The re-dedication of Old Kenyon and the awarding of the Philander Chase Medal will be held south of Old Kenyon at eleven o'clock Saturday morning. The program includes an academic procession, hymns by the choir, speeches, and the awarding of the Philander Chase Medal to Charles P. Taft.

Mr. Taft, the brother of Robert Taft, is the second person to receive the Philander Chase Medal. This medal is awarded annually or biannually to a layman for "distinguished and devoted services to the Protestant Episcopal Church." Mr. Taft, who was president of the Federated Council of the Churches of Christ in America, was the chairman of the divisional committee for the World Council of Churches.

Since the middle of the Spring term last year two men have built up a small campus business. They have sold sandwiches through the divisions each night about nine o'clock. This has been very convenient and not distracting to good study habits.

Last week Miss Kimball decided finally that the Coffee Shop was losing more money than previous-ly because of the competition of this small business, and she decided to take action. She went to Dean Bailey and asked him to take the necessary restrictive measures.

It seems that the "Bobbsey Blit-z" has taken another step to protect its own interests without regard to the students' welfare. It has been the policy of Kenyon College in the past that student enterprise and its place on the campus should be determined by the Student Council; this policy is most democratic and unique. One must admit that it has always worked out very well in the past, and that it should accomplish its purpose at present and in the future if we are to keep our type of student government.

Kenyon Military Academy

The sight of cadets trimly marching to the cadence of fifes and drum made its appearance in Marriot Park in 1883, when the Kenyon Grammar School, founded in 1854, changed its name to the Kenyon Military Academy. The academy consisted of two main buildings, Milnor and Delaware Halls, one of which, Milnor, burned in 1890, but was replaced by a larger building, also called Milnor Hall.

The relations between Kenyon College and the Kenyon Military Academy did not always run the course of true love. In 1902 Dr. Theodore Sterling, then president of Kenyon, became worried about the steadily decreasing enrollment at Kenyon (then under 50 students), and decided to remedy it by pilfering third formers away from the academy with offers of full time freshman status with President Sterling.

However, peace was eventually restored, and relations became so friendly that William Porter Peirce, president of Kenyon College in 1893, was moved to state that “Under present loyal management the Academy may be looked upon as an integral part of Kenyon College.” But the fates decreed that such was not to be the case. Early in the morning of February 24, 1906, the Kenyon Military Academy was completely destroyed by fire. Three students were killed and twelve seriously injured. The college could not afford to rebuild the academy, and thus taps were sounded for an institution which, under one name or another, had been part of the Gambier scene since 1824.

Harcourt Place School for Girls

From the viewpoint of many students, life in the wilderness would be much more civilised if there were girls in Gambier in quantity. Such was once the case. From 1817 to 1823 there flourished in the one-plush Harcourt Court, now Knox County’s leadingThus district, the Harcourt Place School for Girls. This hotel of the Kokosing valley was housed in three buildings, one of which, Milnor House, was the residence of Bishop McIlvaine, second president of Kenyon. McIlvaine House still stands, more or less, in the center of Splintersville.

Because of its historical association with Kenyon’s early years, the Harcourt School was bought by the college in 1906, which continued to rent the area to the residents of the school.

William F. Peirce, fifteenth president of Kenyon, aided Harcourt School during his administration here. In 1902 the school was discontinued for various reasons. The desire to see women take their place in the flower of Ohio womanhood is now primarily a target for ale beer bottles as it stands, and neglected in the midst of present-day Harcourt court.

Library Gets Rare Neksei-Lipocz Bible

The College Library has just received as a gift from Mr. William F. Moag, Jr., editor of the Youngstown Vindicator and trustee of Kenyon College, a copy of the beautiful folio reproduction of Neksei-Lipocz Bible. This fourteenth century manuscript is one which the authorities in the Library of Congress consider their most beautiful possession. The book that is now in the library explains in a fascinating detail how this unknown manuscript was acquired. It is the result of the Hungarian illumination. In passing, references are made to one of the beautiful manuscripts in the Morgan Library of New York City. That book was purchased in a ten-year search for authorities and the slow process of documentation which was international in its scope. This detection reads like a novel in an engrossing story. All this careful documentation goes behind the small entry "A Hungarian Manuscript of the Fourteenth Century." This volume will be on display in the college library during the month of October.

In Control

If women ran a more active part in civic, state and national affairs, a greater game which has proven to be diverting to the Western mind as it has to the Japanese. It operates as follows: the players are provided with a series of glasses ranging in size from a shot to a small drinking glass. Each glass bears a different design and there is a die whose faces are stamped with corresponding designs. The glasses are filled with sake and the players cast the die in turn. Each must drink the contents of the glass whose design matches the up-turned face of the die. The winner is the last player who can stand upUnnoticed. A glorified version of "Cardinal Penn." Tsuneko, a graduate of Tokyo Woman’s College where she majored in literature, is vastly impressed by America in general and Kenyon in particular. She says in a sentence upon which it is impossible, "I think it’s wonderful."

Colburn Library of Bexley Hall has received as a gift from Philip Mather, one of Kenyon's Trustees, a copy of the Bruce Rogers World Bible. This Bible which has been several years in preparation is a huge folio and designed by Bruce Rogers, the foremost living typographer. This handsome book was published by the World Publishing Company in Cleveland and has already taken its place as one of the five great Bibles in the history of printing. Other Bibles are considered as follows:

Gutenberg Bible 1440
Baskerville Bible (Cambridge) 1728
Dove's Bible 1805

Oxford Lectern Bible 1434
The World Bible 1449
Colburn Library not only has the New World Bible but also has as one of its earlier possessions a copy of the beautiful Baskerville Bible which was done by a most important man in the history of typography. This Bible as well as the World Bible is readily accessible for those students who wish to visit the Colburn Library which is open regularly every evening. In addition to the World Bible there is a small volume by William Targ entitled "The Making of the Bruce Rogers World Bible" which explains in detail the long process of producing this folio.
