Approval Expected Soon on Ford Grant

by Bob Bercowits

A $72,000 Ford Foundation grant to Kenyon has been assured for all intents and purposes, according to a reliable source.

The grant will support a Public Affairs Conference Center for a five-year period beginning next year. After the grant terminates, royalties from publications of the program will support it.

Purpose of the conference center, located previously at the University of Chicago, is to bring together people who deal in public affairs to discuss major contemporary issues of public policy. It attempts to gather people with a primarily academic viewpoint and persons who operate in political, governmental, and journalistic capacities.

The conferences are held in close proximity to campus to permit the freest possible discussion, but plans are being made by the Political Science Department to make the participants in the conference available to Kenyon students during their stay.

About ten persons are invited to participate in each meeting. Several write papers on the subject for conference publication, which they read at the conference. The topic is debated for several days and after the meetings, several other members write papers, incorporating points raised in discussion.

All the papers are to be combined into a volume under the editorship of Conference Chairman Robert Goldwin and published by Bob Bercowits.

Some of the subjects so far discussed at Chicago have been American electioneering, affirmative action, American military power, program, the national debt (including Congressmen, civil rights leaders and journalists).

Encephalitis Nothing To Lose Sleep Over

Since August 1, six residents of Knox County, one in Gambr, have been taken ill with a mild form of encephalitis. The form is spread by a virus which apparently requires no insect or other carrier. But all of the victims are expected to recover quickly and none is expected to suffer any after-effects from the disease.

Blood Drive Opens Tonight

Registration for Kenyon's annual blood drive will open tonight with student representatives registering names of potential donors.

According to Mrs. M. Landon Warner, students living on the hill may sign up with their division chairman. Freshmen may register with a representative at their dorm. Mrs. Warner will explain the drive and answer supply for registration, freshmen will be presented at the service. All students under 21 must have signed permission from their parents before they may give.

Health officials insist that there is no cause for alarm, and Dean Thomas J. Edwards said that he has no plans to close the college or take any other emergency action unless the contagious proves to be more virulent than it has been so far.

Encephalitis, the inflammation of the lining of the brain, is not a single disease but is a symptom of many diseases, raised by more than the hospital and by certain organs, such as the brain, which may result in permanent damage to the brain and result in permanent or temporary memory loss. More severe forms can lead to permanent or permanent mental deficiency, epilepsy,

Questions Fill First Assembly

by Andrew Bergman

With Professor Richard Hettlinger, Dean Edwards and Jim Craver on the platform, Kenyon's version of "Meet the Press," or "How to fight that overpowering problem of communications in Gambier," was held in Room Hall on Tuesday. In his opening remarks, Hettlinger assured all that the encephalitis "plague" had struck only once in Gambier, which was recovering quickly, and then dismissed the opening as a "hysterical." He explained that it had been "held up because of the delivery of pre-fall plumbing and delay and procrastination of installation."

Mr. Hettlinger spoke about the potential power of Kenyon students through the Campus Senate, "greater potential power" he added, "than perhaps at any other campus." He also stressed the problem of communication between faculty and students. One solution he offered was for station student and faculty members of the Senate at the Coffee Shop on Wednesday nights between 10 and 12.

After a somewhat lengthy introduction by Dean Edwards, Jim Craver, President of the Student Council, discussed the problems involved in the students realization of potential power. He criticized Dean Haywood's education, saying he may be four years away from the world as "con- straining!"

There is a total lack of communication between academics and social life here," he said. "Kenyon has driven out students who've had

Negro Admissions

This spring, the College was presented with two faculty proposals concerning to the Negroes, and concerning its moral obligation to do something about them.

One plan, initiated by Professor Alan Batchelder, is based upon the assumption that for the Negro to become fully integrated into American society, he needs power—not black power, but economic power, the kind that is possessed by management. Professor Batchelder noted that only 34 of 15,000 applications for Master of Business Administration degrees came from Negroes last year. He proposed a specific program to fer-et out Negro students interested in corporate management.

At the same time, Professors Bing and Rogan were developing another approach. Kenyon might take in aiding the Negro. They had listened to the admissions department's traditional return to charges of token integration—that few Negroes apply, and that wealthy schools can outbid Kenyon. It seemed to them, however, that there must be Negroes who are qualified intellectually, if not academically for admission, but who do not have the sine qua non: impressive college board scores. If the College were to obtain financing for full scholarships for 20 such students each year and money to provide summer headstart programs, it might be able to provide those students with an education they would otherwise have missed.

At the same time, these students would change the College and would give teachers an intellectual challenge, some-ting to test their teaching against. Professors Bing and Rogan felt that the abandonment of token integration, intentional or unintentional, might give the Gambier community a new vitality.

We feel that these two plans represent a more important choice for college administrators than it would seem. Two at Kenyon has sat back and made decisions by default. The two plans demand decisive action.

Fisher on Film:
L'Avventura an Artistic Drag

I reported in the College that "L'Avventura" had little dialogue. This was my impression. Anna had no conversation. As in recalling a theatrical performance, my memory was defective. Half dozen lines constitute a scene, a scene an act, an act the subject of the whole play. That which was most vivid is remembered and magnified disproportionately.

When I walked out of the movie, someone asked me: "Why was it so long?" This question is critical, because the answer is at the core of Antonioni's technique and defines his unique vision of the world. Let us consider a few of the reasons why this is such a long film.

First, there is the search for Anna, which goes on ad on with an almost imperceptible advance in the plot. What happens? Anna, who has been the focus of attention, disappears, and the story crumbles as Claudia's. The search is beautifully choreographed. As there is no music, the pacing begins slowly; the searches are easily intruded upon by their own fanciful and the secrets of the into-graphy.

But when a desireful search fails to turn Anna up, the pace quickens. Claudia seems to turn her way over, not the physical. Claudia is did I make this up? As she searches, she searches, at the brink of a precipice. The wind is louder. It is getting late. The result is a spell of the clouds gather to dark gray. And then the twilight. Twilight is refrains.

Claudia looks out at Sandro, Dawn, and the run heralds a beautiful day. "The sea is like a lake." The search resumes the report it had when it began, only now it is a kind of obsession because it is hopeless. Characters are filament wandering around aimlessly in full view of each other. One inquires of another, "Nothing?" They talk quietly.

Someone examines a skull, and someone else mistakes one of the search party for Anna. We are meandering through Greek islands, and the search begins to die in us. Something passes between Sandro and Claudia. Sheehan stated that "we are researched. A storm is hard put to maintain a course in the mundane waters. The general impression that he seasonally, yearly, his he (and herself): "Why, he didn't sleep a wink last night." Her answer for Anna is replaced by the recognition of her desire for Sandro and the knowledge that she can have him.

This has taken up most of the first reel — a long time. Now Antonioni was interested in creating right here, right now, that feeling he could have done this in half the time. But he is looking for a general change in the character. He draws it out, he layers. He lets the events occur in something more like real time. Oh, it's not real, but it's nothing like theatrical time. This is not easy to watch.

P. 10, Phi Kappa Sigma, It: "I feel that we've swung the bag, we've swung it all." Tensions had been especially high in the week after the search for Sandra, who was a distant relative of Frank Schmid, when she was kidnapped.

Ted Siehens, President of the IFC, stated that he considered the search the "greatest period of our time." While he was pleased that there was an increase in interest in the fraternity, he pointed out that he had hoped that the idea would be greater. He felt, though, that we would be looking in the coming weeks for a more "normal" period, not a period which would be in as much the same as the period we had as in the past.

In response to complaints about the "rash" of fraternity activities, he pointed out that the IFC, who has no power over the fraternity, has been telling the fraternities about the activities of the fraternity to make them aware of what the fraternity is doing. He stated that the IFC has no power over the fraternity, but that the IFC is trying to get the fraternity to do a better job of informing the fraternity members of what the fraternity is doing.

When asked about a rumor that the fraternity activities were not allowed to be reported in the Collegian, Mr. Siehens said that he had never heard of such a rumor. He said that the IFC, who has no power over the fraternity, has been telling the fraternities about the activities of the fraternity to make them aware of what the fraternity is doing.

Mr. Siehens did not feel that the fraternity activities were being reported in the Collegian. Ab Oris Yaliensis:
"Who is Sylvia? What is She?"

Miss Sylvia Barnard, assistant professor of Classics and Romance Languages at Kenyon College this year, comes to us from a year of study at Oberlin College in Syracuse, N. Y. She did her undergraduate work at Mount Union University, and received her Ph.D. from Yale in 1966.

Miss Barnard finds herself at Kenyon, due to the joining of a mix-up. Professors Pink and Collins, both of whom did graduate work in French, wrote their last summer for a replacement through the French. They did not make it clear that Kenyon is a women's college, and Miss Barnard's director of studies, while indicating a rather vague man, reproduced the mistake. She learned that she had been offered a position at a men's college she was surprised, but not put off.

Miss Barnard is the first full-time female instructor in the arts department. She, nevertheless does think it strange that people should wonder how she must feel in her position. Having been to three predominately male institutions, she has "hardly led a sheltered life" she feels quite at ease on campus. If any provocation, however, she feels that her sex and the genotype of Ohio women rather than the carcinage of Kenyon men.

Miss Barnard has only words of praise for Mr. McCullogh, her sole colleague in the Classics Department, and for therusty old work covered teaching classical history as well as Latin, and will add to that next year, the History Department.

She finds Kenyon students bright, but without ado, and polite. She finds them small and affectionate, when compared to the other institutions she taught in last year. She is also disappointed that not enough students take advantage of the smallness of classes by consistently participating in the classroom exchange.

Miss Barnard is presently engaged in shortening her dissertation in preparation for publication. It is a "historiographical study of the late fourteenth century Roman historian Annonario Marzio" in contemporary of the Emperor Justinian. Miss Barnard described herself as an early medievalist, and, though very busy teaching right now, foresees possible future work in historians Gregory of Tours, Bede and perhaps some parts of the period. Miss Barnard is also a poet herself; a volume of her poetry was published by McMill in 1969 and other poems have appeared in British, Canadian, and American periodicals.

Miss Barnard was given notice last year at LaMoyne because a scholarship, always favored over salary, must feel like a stitch in the pocket. She applied for and was accepted to Oberlin college, appeared to take her place. The dose feel, however, that the need for her departure may have been hastened by a "display of political liberalism" on the occasi- on of a pacifist demonstration in favor of a student who signed his draft card. Miss Barnard voiced wholehearted approval of what she termed a "courageous act" when interviewed by the college with the rest of the faculty in reference to the act. She found little sympathy for her stand among the administration and her colleagues and she admits that her dismissal did not dis- criminate her unfairly.

Kenyon Fund

Raising Hopes

Last year, the Kenyon Fund, the annual alumni support pro- gram, surpassed its goal for the second consecutive time. In 1961-62 the Fund realized a total of $31,905 from 111 contributing alumni. The results of the 1966-67 Fund which closed June 30 re- vealed that 155 alumni invested $86,441 in their alma mater. This new record indicated an increase of $52,289 over the 1965-66 campaign.

On the basis of continued im- provement in the annual Fund, Kenyon College was presented with the United States Steel Cor- poration incentive award at the American Alumni Council Con- vention held in July. The money derived from the use to support the Alumni Ass- ociation, Student Aid Program, to provide additional funds for faculty salaries, and to help fund Purchase new volumes for the library.

LUND LEASE

Kenyon College President Edward Lund recently issued a state- ment hailing the decision of the Church of the Nazarene to locate its new college in Mount Vernon. He said:
"Let no man mistake the value of a college in terms of prestige—pulpit and purchasing power. Think rather of youthful talent dis- covered, of leadership identified and cultivated and of uncommon dreams inspired."

"Kenyon College hails the decision of the Church of the Nazarene to establish a new college in Mount Vernon. We note several similarities: both colleges are church sponsored, both offer liberal curriculum in arts and sciences, neither aspires to tremendous size, and since Kenyon plans soon the execution of a coordinate college for women, both will have overlapping periods of growth.

"Because we share common religion and cultural ideals identi- fiable as the 'search for truth'—we look forward to the years ahead when our two colleges will cooperate with each other in mutual association and joint enterprises for our students as well as greater service to both Knox County and the State of Ohio.

"Congratulations to Mount Vernon's civic leaders and council for their enthusiastic leadership in attracting the new college to our community."
Terriers Bite Lords 4-2

By Richard Bearn

Before the Lords' soccer game with Hiram College last Saturday, Coach Bob Harrison warned his players that "Hiram played Oberlin even for a half on the week before, and is a lot better than most people think."

He was right. The Terriers wiped up Kenyon, 4-2 getting off an unbelieveable 30 shots at the Kenyon goalie and dominating play during most of the game. The afternoon had started auspiciously enough. The team disembarked from their bus at the Hiram football field, where for the adoption of the more meaningful elements of the Hiram student body a football game with Denison was in progress. Slowly marching through the stands, the Lords were the center of attention, as all Hiram eyes strained to catch the styles that would grace the Terrier campus two years from now.

By the start of the soccer game, the temporary stands flanking the soccer field were already crowded with disinterested grid enthusiasts.

Hiram started powerfully, keeping constant pressure on Kenyon goalie Bob Hawkins, who made several fantastic saves on early Terrier shots. Repulsively breaking through the Kenyon backfield, Hiram's Sid Saltzman and Chris Choi had several open shots at goal but overlooked each one, pushing penalties on Choi and Chris Coo. Hiram's momentum.

After the penalty the Lords, who were missing injured star Chip Lowery, mounted a sustained offensive attack which lasted from Jerry Miller taking a pass from Paul Rigali and running in past the Terrier goalie for a 1-0 Kenyon lead.

However, Hiram came again and the forward to goal by Bob Ryan, Choi, and Saltzman all took turns blowing open shots. Despite the Hiram onslaught, which almost totally overpowered the Kenyon backfield, the Lords left the field with a 1-0 halftime lead.

Kenyon opened the second half with back Larry Weisser getting a Terrier breakaway play and the Lord defense containing play to the Hiram end of the field. The teams traded missed shots during the early minutes of the half before Choi, a native of Nigeria, took the ball away from a Kenyon back and over to tie the game.

After Choi's goal the game took on a decidedly more violent character as both teams remembered that soon illnesses and the surprisingly effective means of intimidation. Finally, one player from each side was ejected from the game.

Settling back to defend, the Lords went ahead in the fourth quarter on a goal by Randy St. John, with an assist from Jerry Miller. Twice, however, this goal was overturned because of offside. Instead of being caught outside the goal Hiram took a 2-1 lead in the final moments. This lead was extended to 4-2 on a successive penalty shot by Choi.

Despite a great individual performance by Hawkins and some fine play, the Lords were a defeated lot at dinner. They had failed to play Coach Harrison's aggressive, hustling game and they knew it.

The only real division after the game was the rivalry who served the team in the Hiram cafeteria. Since she was also a Terrier cheerleader one of the Lords, defying his strippe flirted to make a dainty conversation with her. One of his teammates, looking up from his dessert, blurted out his deconversion is not the usual-looking necklace she had been wearing. She said it was a present. Both Lords were back to their dinners. The girl went on to their notes.

Kenyon Yields To Otterbein

By Bob Garland

After a dismal first half against Otterbein Saturday, Kenyon Lords again proved themselves to be strictly a second half team. As in last week's game against Centre, the Lords recovered their opponents in the second half, even after visiting Otterbein controlled the ball.

The Lords missed the first score at hand in the first quarter, marching 68 yards in 12 carries. On a touchdown drive, he carried a ball 5 times for 46 yards, including his 5 yard touchdown run in the fourth down.

The visitors scored first after short Lords' punt to the Kenyon 24. A 13 yard touchdown pass on the clock at 2:1 of the first quarter. Three punts were added midway in the second quarter on a 41 yard field goal. The Lords defense was resiliant for the visitors' next run as a Jones pass was returned 5 yards for a touchdown. The score resulted from a block punt which Otterbein recovered on the Lords' 6.

During the Lords' lost drive, Ryan broke the defensive front into open lanes to put the Lords in the end zone in rushing for the score. In the two earlier contests the Lords were held to no yardage. After Ryan's touchdown, the Lords lined up on a kick the extra point. Jim Jones recovered the snap, took it and kicked a punt to Ryan for 3 points.

After another strong defense, the Lords are preparing themselves for Friday's home game with Brown, who last year edged the Lords by the score of 53 to 6.

Soccer Co-Captains
Command Success

by Steve Scott

Soccer fortunes appear to be on the rise this year. Many talented freshmen have added to the strength of the squad, but it will be the experienced players who will provide the team with leadership essential to a winning season. Co-Captains Craig Jackson and Bill Northway hope to provide the leadership that will make the team’s goal of a winning season a reality.

Colorful Craig Jackson, known to referees and opposing players alike, stands at a slim 6’11” and weighs 165 pounds. He has been a standout in the Ohio Conference for the last three years, gaining an All Ohio honorable mention at right wing. A native of Long Meadow, Mass., Craig also plays an outstanding game of Lacrosse, and at the end of last year he made the All-Midwest second team. For many reasons Jackson is an exciting player to watch on the soccer field as well as an interesting person to talk to. When asked for his opinion of Conference referees, he laughed and said, “A better question is, what do they think of me?” Lacrosse coach Dick Watts dubbed Craig “Hummingbird” for his method of cradling and shooting a lacrosse stick.

Denison’s All-American soccer goalie, Ian Callen, is Craig’s favorite opposing player. “If I score on him I’ll shake his hand,” promises Craig, whose rivalry with Callen is mostly friendly. With such powerful teams as Ohio Wesleyan and Denison on the Lords’ schedule, Kenyon depends heavily on the talents of men like Jackson. Craig states that, “This season’s team is better than any other team I’ve played on, and I predict a winning season for this year.”

Bill “Piggy” Northway, a Co-Captain in his junior year, plays fullback for Harrison, and like Jackson, Bill is also a lacrosse player in the spring. A scrappy man on defense at 5’11” and 165 pounds, Bill has started for the last three years. He played his high school soccer at Williston Academy under coach Ray Brown, who in 1929 was Kenyon’s “Athlete of the Year.” Piggy attributes his enthusiasm for the sport to coach Brown and his Williston team. The team that Northway would most like to beat this year is Denison. “I like playing against them the most, and I would get the most satisfaction out of beating them,” explains Piggy. “Due to the freshman element on the team,” observes Bill, “I feel we’re in for a real good season. Also beneficial is the fact that we are playing ‘together’ for the first time in three years.”

Piggy has not seen action in the first two games because he is handicapped by sprained ligaments and possibly broken cartilage in his right knee. But all indications are that he will be in the lineup against Cedarville next Saturday.

Separate Libraries to curb Battle of Sexes

Despite the fact that Kenyon to around 1,400 in the addition of the dedication of Chalmers library.

Several steps are under consideration by college administration. A system of decentralization is the chief method of meeting the demands of greater numbers, acc. to Dean Bruce Haywood.

Two systems of study, and chemistry, have already set up headless departments, and Haywood stated he was pleased with results of the system whereby the books are at hand for seminars and departmental use.

He went on to state that a branch library would be provided in the new addition, and renovation of Old Mother for a library. In addition, the fine arts department, which is said to have quarters for a library containing books on music, theatre, and art in the planned Fine Arts Center.

Dean Haywood declared that decentralization would meet the first problem, that of housing books, and two other methods will have to be found for study space. He suggested that a regular reference library on the girls campus which would contain basic reference books, and basic course texts.

The new library would encourage sexual segregation. Dean Haywood expressed the view that "two people who sexually interested in each other cannot study together." However, to prevent socializing which would bring problems, study is the rule. Therefore, he felt that a rule would be enforced barring women from Chalmers in the evening, and noon from the women's library at the same time. "We will be making an effort to keep the library pure," he said.

Dean Haywood concluded by reporting that a study is being conducted to determine if better use of existing space in Chalmers can be made. Also, ways of expanding the existing building into the parking lot are being looked into. According to the state of affairs at present, Dean Haywood said, "It is not as if all decisions must not be expanded. All data and there will be no press release until 1,400 substantial number of women are gone.

Librarian Edward Heintz places himself on the side of expansion. "In fairness to Kenyon students this has to be taken care of," he stated.

Recovering the situation, Heintz reported existing facilities were designed for one-third of the students of 750. However, there is not actually existing space for 300 people. Since that number includes seminar chairs and several other unused items, he expressed the feeling that expansion is inevitable and that decentralization is not the answer.

He reported that one current problem is the amount of use the library is receiving from non-Kenyon people. In a short time, a sign will be placed in the library requiring all non-Kenyon library users to register. Heintz is stated further that he expected a fee for non-Kenyon people would be put into effect before the end of the year. The fee would probably be $15 with $10 of that refundable if the charges are made against the user.

Citing figures, Heintz reported library circulation to outsiders is up 15% for two years in a row.

The library has, he reported, been six times greater than five years ago, and 25% of the entire circulation was to non-college.

great political interest but who've been checked by a great social pressure here. We must try and relate these two things," he said.

Dean also spoke about the purpose of the Academic Committee. He emphasized that it should be utilized to decide which courses should be taught and which should be discarded.

"There's quite a bit of dead wood at Kenyon," he concluded.

He then discussed "the inability of Kenyon to face issues squarely." He said, "We should start question social standards at Kenyon." Case said, "Kenyon is not really liberal, not really conservative. We're like the quarterback who can't decide whether to run or pass and just stands there and gets hit." (Jones, he added.) He asserted that if Kenyon were truly liberal, like the University of Chicago, it would have a greater drawing power of talented students. Instead, he said that Kenyon exists under "a semi-liberal guise."

During the question and answer portion of the show, Freshman Tom Egerstorff asked why students are "dissuaded from seeking extra medical help when they find that the help is at times inefficient?" Dean Edward asked that students, at their own expense, were permitted to seek extra medical help, but that he didn't feel the college-provided cur is "defective." Dr. Bagardius has been here ten years," he said, "and has been in most cases a competent practitioner. The Dean stated that he was aware of "certain happenings" in the medical service, "but let's face it" he said, "we have limited facilities and 95% of the students are treated well."

He admitted there, "95% of incorrect diagnoses." If all the students, about 210, who have attended the college in the ten year period were to have concluded the inferences, by Dean Edward statement, one could assume there have been 125 incorrect diagnoses of cases. David Pratt, sophomore biology major, asked, if the "misdiagnoses had resulted in any attempt to upgrade personnel?"

"No," Dean Edward replied. "From a managerial standpoint, and other and everything else it would be wrong." He also mentioned "the emotional concern" of Dr. Bagardius and pointed out that the doctor was giving his service as a favor as much as anything else. "We're not up to the point where the new infirmary can be built. Then the organization of the health service can be completely revised," he said.

In answer to a question about inspection of rooms by Security, the Dean explained that "A

This form, however, can not be prevented by vaccination nor cured by antibiotics. It must, like a cold, be allowed to run its course. But its victims can not, as old victors can, pursue their usual leisure activities while the illness is running its course. They may be hospitalized for at least three weeks, and practice is to isolate them to prevent further spread of the illness.
