Apology Ends Council Furore

A well-attended, fiery session of Student Council met Monday evening with the furore developing from the Leitman lecture walkout.

The mammoth meeting, extending past midnight, survived motion, amendments, oratory, and two efforts to adjourn. The chamber was alive as members and guests of Council held private conferences and brief strategy talks in what gradually became a smoky-filled room.

It was two hours before the minutes of the previous meeting were approved, at the end of last meeting, including what turned out to be an illegal vote, precipitated the lengthy discussions this week.

Council President David Hoster described the events of the previous week stemming from Council's move to inquire about alleged activities in political science.

He noted the several errors by Council and by the academic affairs committee, and outlined the various meetings and letters between upperclassmen and professors (see story p. 3). Mr. Hoster read the text of a statement of the academic affairs committee which declared it did not approve of any formal investigation of students of faculty actions in classrooms.

The Council debated the text of and then passed a letter of apology to the political science department. It was moved and failed for further discussion that a joint-student faculty committee be named to study the question of student rights of inquiry and innocence in the conduct of a democratic affair in the classroom.

Consideration 14-2 to dissolve the current academic affairs committee and have the executive committee of the student senate as a temporary, constitutional committee. The legislation of the current committee was deemed from the fact that it did not have two Council members on it and that the chairmen was not a Council member.

Old business continued with discussion of the rine meal for Bifra proposal, which all fraternity seemed to favor. The question of military recruitment was discussed, and Mr. Hoster conveyed to Senate the general opinion of fraternities of satisfaction with the current procedure.

After various committee reports, the meeting adjourned at 12:00 a.m.

Frosh Pledge Rate Rockets

Approximately 65% or 154 freshmen are pledging fraternities this year. Out of 189 in the class, 13 did not bid anywhere and 26 were turned down.

"This is the most successful rush in years," stated Dean of Student Thomas Edwards. He noted the small number of non-bidding freshmen as proof and attributed this to an enthusiastic rush by upperclassmen.

The breakdown is ALO 13, PHI 9, Delta 19, Betas 11, Alpha 15, Sigma Pi 16, Alpha Sigma Chi 14.

Nixon's the One?

Novak Sees Conservative Trend

Columnist Robert Novak brought to Ross Hall Monday night a sense of humor and a considerable journalistic insight into the realities of 1968.

He rounded out one of the campaign-year series sponsored by the lecturership committee and the political science department. Mr. Novak talked of the frustrations of disorganized Governments, he says, which are shaping the outcome of the 1968 election.

He noted the conservative malaise among the American people and observed that Nixon is likely to win the Presidency, with Humphrey's weak campaign in the wake of the defeat of Wallace in the final tally.

Mr. Novak, co-author of the book "The Real Nixon - Novak Report," said that he had found in talking to people around the country that there is a feeling of alienation among the working man, as well as among students and blacks.

In Detroit suburb, he found that working families, of mid-class income and mortgages, 26 be ahead of the law. Mr. Novak noted the fact that Nixon would win in the Wolverine State.

He said that Kennedy would have provided leadership that would have been a stabilizing force, employing the "jawboning" concept of the presidency talking to the people and leading them.

Recognizing Nixon's tendency to over-calculate, he observed that the former President is "usually more communicative than the present President of the United States," and that he realizes the war must and soon as

Social Extravaganza

Homecoming to Feature Floats

by C. Dwight Walsh

Students and alumni of Kenyon have no reason to complain about living up to the Homecoming festivities this year. An extremely active Social Committee and the coordinated Executive Committee of the Alumni Association have turned the weekend of October 14-15 into a social extravaganza.

The continuous entertainment begins Friday night with fraternity frat-building and the judging of Den floats early Saturday. The winner will be blessed with security guards, and attention features the football) fiches with Markets, and the Beer Tent. On the game - where almost everyone comes out to attend the Kenyon game.
Counselor Apologizes

Campus Turmoil Based

by Bob Borowich

The events of the last two weeks at Kenyon have put the Legion- man walkout under much clarification.

Student Council and the political science department have exchanged letters. The council has deliberated and is a complex question whether academic freedom has been raised, to be considered by a faculty-students committee.

In a meeting Sept. 30, Fred Prichard called for inquiry into alleged activities by the political science department in support of a student who, in an unduly narrow way, was present. As a result, the academic affairs committee was charged with the investigation.

President David Hester then called the meeting to order, and Fred Prichard, then chairman of the academic affairs committee, told the council that no inquiry was involved in the inquiry, and of the council that no inquiry is being employed in the inquiry. He had not been involved in the inquiry. A student who had asked for a walkout, or in a poll, the council. They decided to appoint the committee to discuss their issue.

In the meantime, Mr. Hester met with the Provost to inform him of the Council's action. Mr. Hester told that student Council felt it was the responsibility of the students in this matter, to exercise that right, and that the council make no value judgment, whatsoever, and that Council would turn over any information obtained to the Provost for his consideration.

According to Mr. Hester, the Provost found no disagreement with the Council at that time.

(Mr. Haywood observed in a Collegian interview that "if he believes it is something we cannot ignore, Academic freedom is a fundamental of this College." He noted that "we must come to some general understanding of how we are to view events in Rome Hall," as an extension of the instructional programs or as political events analogous to political meetings in Mt. Vernon.

Mr. Baehr then began the interview by asking Mr. Benjamin, one of the members of the academic committee. Mr. Baehr then explained the walkout, and he to the other two professors with whom he interviewed.

At the committee meeting on Thursday, three Friday nights not all on the committee were present to answer the inquiry.

These students were never convinced of the inquiry as was hung. The student now is.

Tuesday evening, September 29, Prof. Robert Horvitz, chairman of the Political Science Department, telephoned to Mr. Hester to come to his attention that his decision was "being investigated." Mr. Hester then went on to give the time for a three-hour discussion with three of the political science faculty.

The President council explained that it is looking for and finding fault, which it seems to be the right of the students to receive with such academic affairs.

Mr. Hester reported to Council that the professors observed that announcement of an "investigation" was tantamount to a condemnation and ultimate summary. At that time, Mr. Hester tentatively announced the inquiry being on the inquirers and that the inquirers had been in the walkout to the college, and that the inquirers had been in the walkout, and that the inquirers had been in the walkout, and that the inquirers had been in the walkout, and that the inquirers had been in the walkout. The President was to suspend the inquiry on Tuesday morning.

The next day it was questioned whether there indeed was a question of inquiry or whether there indeed was a question of inquiry or whether there indeed was a question of inquiry.
Novak Probes Power of Press

The press, according to columnist Robert Novak, has a tendency to sensationalize news events, often at the expense of accurate reporting. Novak argues that the power of the media is not great, as the actions of the press often depend on the sympathy of the audience for the perceived victims. He points out that the press often involves influencing the nation as much as it is influenced by the happenings, and that the media rarely manages this task.

Novak argues that the press, as a political force, makes an effort to portray a favorable image of the press. He believes that the public is not aware of the manipulation by the press, and that the media is often perceived as being very irresponsible in reporting the news. Novak contends that many politicians are often just as slow.

In a College interview, the Washington correspondent observed that the press is not always above criticism. He noted that the press often uses the incident at Wall Street to sell stories, and that the media is often criticized for not being accurate in reporting the facts.

The Washington correspondent, George Wallace, who continues to rise in popularity polls. He said that he was concerned that the reporting mass opinion is very nearly irrelevant to the press, and that the press tends to be in danger of misunderstanding such phenomena as Wallace's candidacy. He feels that national politicians are often just as slow.

Mr. Novak observed that he and his partner Howard Kwan, by splitting up, can cover more ground and be more creative. He points out that the news is often used as an average reporter. They maintain contacts on several levels of government. "Our stock and trade," says Mr. Novak. "Is the line of communication in government."

He remarked that it is important for the public to be constantly re-educated, as the world of politics is constantly changing. Mr. Novak believes that the coverage of the Chicago convention was not a very good example of conditions. He observed that it was very hard for the real story and that the mood of Chicago was in good part evoked by the media. He also noted that the drama had an impact on the readers.

Faculty Members Discuss Walkout

which you cannot have had any experiences like this. It is a very important issue and it is absolutely damnable to claim knowledge of what you have not experienced. It is very dangerous to say it. I have myself known personally all the students who walked out, but I do not know all that has been said in my classes. I am far from always going to the classes. I have been bound to say that I have never found anyone of them furloughing the College. I think they have to have the right to express themselves and to have the right to discuss things which are happening. I do not agree with the idea that we should express the idea that we should express our disagreement. I believe that we should express our disagreement. I believe that we should express our disagreement.

Do not misunderstand me. I do not believe that the idea of a concern for the well-being of this country is a concern for academic freedom or intellectual integrity, and the unhindered interchange of ideas, and the exchange of ideas for the benefit of all.

You have brought a public accusation, indeed as public as possible, against some other members of this college. It is not fitting that an accusation of this kind should remain without reply. - A. Denis Bell

The following is Mr. Goldwin's response to Mr. Baly.

Letter to the Editor

I agree with Mr. Goldwin's statement in his recent letter that "in a true community of learning, each member of the community has an obligation to share in the tasks of inquiry." Our primary concern should be to provide opportunities for inquiry and to rectify the silent walk-out, in response to Mr. Leibman's attack on PACC inquires, and the other attacks on the walk-out to a certain extent, and the investigation a curtailment of academic freedom.

Lords Fall to Union Raiders

by Ben Smith

The Lords came out ahead in nearly everything but the final score last Saturday as Mount Union capitalized on Kenyon miscues to gain a 21-0 victory.

Kenyon took the opening kickoff and marched down the field. They were stopped on the 1-yard line and the field goal was missed. In the second quarter the Lords took over at the Mt. Union 40. With fullback Barry Diersfeld doing most of the damage, Kenyon ground out yardage to the four-yard line. With third and goal, quarterback Bill Christians went in the air, looking for split end Chris Myers. But the pass came on a little late and the ball was intercepted by Perry Bours (six interceptions this week). This picked it up on the end zone Mt Uni. Union then drove 85 yards to score with two minutes left.

A pattern mixed on the first play after the kickoff gave Mt Uni. another interception and in 30 seconds they had another TD on the board.

With the score 14-0 and only 30 seconds left, freshman halfback Butch Black crossed the 32-yard line, then gained 12 more yards and 10 to cross midfield. The rally was stopped, though, when an offensive lineman intercepted a subsequent pass.

In the early minutes of the third quarter the Purple Raiders marched 84 yards to score the second TD. The Lords came back with a long drive, but a fourth down pass would have started a drive and the visitors took over on their own 9.

Kenyon finally got on the board with only 3:08 left in the game when Black ran it over from the two. Chris Myers' pass to Myers brought two extra points. But it was too little too late and the final score read Mt Uni. 21, Kenyon 0.

The Lords did prove again that they can gain yardage, topping the opponents in total offense, 365 yards to 268. But inconsistency is a problem, as three drives were stopped inside the ten. The team cannot afford to give up the ball six times, five interceptions and a fumble, and still hope to win. The young ballplayers are learning a great deal, though, and will certainly improve as the season goes along. The running attack looked much better in recent times.

Val Diersfeld is a dependable inside ground gainer, and Butch Black may be the quick outside threat the Lords need badly. This would also help free John Petrow to devote his energies more fully to linebacker, where he is indispensable. Chris Myers added ten more receptions to what should be a league-leading total.

The Lords face a tough Marietta squad this Saturday in their Homestanding tilt. This Kenyon team should provide some things for the alumni to cheer about.

Dave Ulevy: Lord Leader

by Greg Alexander

In an age when the college football player is stereotyped as a "dumb jock," David Ulevy, senior co-captain of this year's Kenyon Lords, stands out as a gentleman, a scholar, and an athlete.

Unfortunately, the thing that keeps his many accomplishments both on and off the gridiron from being more widely recognized is his quiet modesty. As an athlete and scholar, every endeavor that Dave undertakes he performs well; as a gentleman, every success is a personal accomplishment that can be improved upon the next time, not a public victory. Dave has been the top man in the Lords' defensive backfield the past four years. He had his best year in 1967, leading the team in interceptions and placing second in individual tackles, a significant distinction for a defensive back.

So far this year he is off on an even better season, using his experience to get to the right place at the right time and stabilizing an otherwise green defensive backfield, while losing none of his own drive and hustle. Dave has matured into one of the finest safeties in the Ohio Conference, a remarkable feat considering the fact that he did not play high school football.

The clean-cut captain leads an exemplary life off the field as well. He has served as freshman proctor the past two years, participated in the Head Start swimming program for retarded children, sat on the Judicial Board for three years, and still manages to maintain a strong "B" average in a rigorous pre-medical curriculum.

A biology major, Dave's future plans center around medical school and a certain Trans World Airlines hostess.

In his own quiet way Dave Ulevy has established himself within the college community as a leader on the athletic field, in the classroom, in the community, and among his friends. Leading by example rather than exhortation, Dave stands out as a very exceptional kind of person.

Soccer Comes Out Even With Denison Booters

by Filip Segar

Last Wednesday's home soccer game with Denison may have ended at 0-0, but it certainly wasn't lacking in action, excitement, or enthusiasm. Although neither side chalked up any points, both teams played a strong, fast-moving match, and the Lords only knocked the confidence and wind out of their opponents, but also demonstrated that they definitely want and can have an excellent season.

Kenyon and Denison were really up for the game in preparation and spirit, and this may have caused the back-and-forth pattern of play. In the first quarter, the initial goal set-up by Ned Smyth sparked a great deal of tension. Worried, Denison began to hustle, holding the ball on our side and putting up our pass. The tide changed, however, as eight light Leighton went through several enemy halfs and fired to Brakower, whose goal shot was very close.

At the beginning of the next quarter, Red and blue both to the ball, but by changing their tactics to playing more quickly with more coal and shorter gains, the Lords broke the monopoly of Red's wing and went over the offensive. Peter Bersin's coup to Smyth ended in a smock that was barely caught by Denison's goalkeeper. Then John Kaufman's dive for goal was followed by Smyth's corner kick that flew exactly before the goal, only to miss a few inches. Kenyon's head was by a hair.

When Denison once more got hold of the ball, Kenyon tightened its defense, permitting very few shots, the ones that did get by being knocked out by goalie Ed Pope. Nevertheless, by the end of the first half the main problem of the game was evident. The teams were having alternate energy intervals: the Lords would let up just as Denison would pour on, and vice-versa. Although both teams had very strong defensive backs and goalies, many crucial goal shots were missed.

As the second half fell, the fans realized that Denison was on the ball when one of their inside barely missed knocking the ball into his own goal. Although no one was around to pick up Fleming's loop deep in Red country, Leighton, Bersin, and Smyth looked very close even. Kaufman failed out a enemy line to maintain the initiative so that St. John could steal the ball and pass to shouter Fleming and Mower. The Lords now were really "doing their thing," as fullbacks fed the ball to Brakower and Lowery, and Pope made fantastic saves.

There were two five minute overtime, during which Kenyon continued to keep the offensive. Four more goal shots brought the total to 2-4. Unfortunately, none got by, and the game ended still without a score.

The junior varsity soccer team played Wooster last week in its first game of the season. Wooster greatly outnumbered our team, which had no substitutions, and had the distinct advantage of not having to use their extra men. The Lord's defense was quite stable, nonetheless, and kept the score to a low 2-0 in favor of Wooster.

Bersin Heads Team For Second Season

by Dave Balent

A good example of an athlete becoming a college star in a sport he never played in high school is Kenyon's Bersin, co-captain of the Lords soccer squad.

Leaving the Lords this fall for the second time, Andy feels the team should pick up where they left off en route to a 7-1-1 record. "Coach Robinson has been a big help," Andy says. "He's been the team hustling." This has been evident in the team's strong showing as of this season.

One Oberlin, Wooster, Ohio Wesleyan, and Denison as the leading contender for the conference crown this season, but knows "we can come out top if we play well."

Because Andy's high school, Buckville Centre in New York, had a terrific team, he never played in high school. He watched many games but never started playing until the summer of his freshman year. On a 1-4 squad that season, Andy noted, "the team tried hard, but just didn't have it." He became more serious his sophomore year in a 4-8 campaign, and was elected co-captain for the following season. "I felt speciality was in the back of my mind," he says, as "last year we began rolling and playing as a team."

Andy feels the squad was in much better condition, only one being outcored in the second half. Looking back, he sees that "Coach Harrigan helped my confidence a lot, telling me I played well even when I didn't feel I did." As the center fullback in the Lords 4-3 alignment, Andy is the hub of the defense.

He feels the soccer team is representative of an attitude more prevalent on all Kenyon squads: "All the teams feel they can win." The Chicago tournament last season was definitely a boost to the team and, as Andy points out, "the alumni appreciated it."

A politics senior major, he is not fully decided about his future, thinking principally about law school. If Andy's leadership of the Lord soccer team is any indication, one might well look for the team to make an even bigger name for itself in another postseason tournament.

Wesleyan Nails Up First Loss

Kenyon's record was evened up at 1-1-1 Tuesday afternoon when Ohio Wesleyan handed the booters a 2-1 setback.

Wesleyan's superior speed kept the Lords on the defensive most of the game, forcing them to play the man rather than the ball. Wesleyan finished in a second quarter score and added another in the fourth period as their alert defense stifled the Kenyon scoring threats.

The Lords face Wittenburg this Friday at 3:30 on Falkensteiner Field.

Ancient Election
Won 'Insidiously'

Ed. Note: This article appeared in the November 15 Kenyon Collegian of 1959. It is of interest for its proof that class elections, even 26 years ago, were not a serious matter at Kenyon. What is of more interest, however, is the fact that the "man" who Mr. Maxon made president of the Senior Class in 1893 was William G. Caples III.

Marcus A. Maxson's subtle maneuvers in bringing about the election of President McKinnin in 1896 have long been a subject of awe and admiration. For years students at Kenyon College have been taught to look upon the campus as a microcosm of the presence of dignity and shrewdness. But this is no more, Mark Reno, great though he was, has met his match. And to Kenyon College, Marcus Maxson's favorite ployery, belongs the honor of producing his facsimile. He is Harry "Red" Maxson, perhaps with wily manipulations the deepfake plans of Mark pale into insignificance.

Mr. Maxson progresses with all the subtlety of a Cleveland burlesque show, but he does progress. What his system lacks in profundity and depth, in delivery and craftsmanship, it more than makes up in vigor and power. Lord Debaters
To Consider
Foreign Policy

The Kenyon debate team will compete in its first tournament of the season this weekend at Bellarmine College in Louisville, Kentucky.

The topic, which will be used throughout the year, is: "Resolved that executive control of United States foreign policy should be significantly curtailed." Debating the affirmative side of the issue at Bellarmine will be Jeff Buzi and Michael Cummings and debating the negative side will be Ken Moore and Hugh McIlrath.

The following week Kenyon will be represented by a novice team at a tournament at Western Illinois University and by a varsity tournament at the Dickinson College tournament in Pennsylvania.

With a record 23 members in both debate and individual events, the Kenyon team promises to have an even more successful season this year than in either of its past two years at the top three in both divisions of the state tournament.

The debate society will also host its own tournament here at Kenyon College, with both debate and individual events.

Faculty and alumni will dis- "civil order and disorder" in a seminar this Saturday. 10 a.m. in the Felice Hall lounge.

Assistant Professor Frank Myers of Stonybrook University will compare aspects of civil disobedience abroad and in this country. Political Science Professors Harvey Gru and Robert Horwitz will join the speaker in a panel discussion, followed by audience questioning.

Professor Myers is a "recognized scholar in the field of Comparative Government and International Relations" according to Professor Horwitz. Myers has done graduate work at Yale and Columbia, and studied civil disobedience with the "Committee of 1910" in England.

Only tentative arrangements have been made for Winter Weekend and Spring Weekend. In an attempt to satisfy all musical tastes, Winter Weekend's main show may be a folk concert with Joni Mitchell and Gordon Lightfoot. Co-chairman Bob Settenfeld and Bob Pick have plans to suite every past Spring Weekend. Possibilities for this weekend are either Big Brother and the Holding Company or the Jeff Beck Group.

The emphasis this year at Kenyon is to satisfy the diversified musical interests of all the students, but not by bringing the best quality entertainers. This raise in the general fee approved by students last year is in part responsible for this energetic schedule. More important, however, is the hard work of the Social Committee in their effort to ease the pain of confinement in Gambier.

Mr. Novak feels that Nixon realizes the depths of the split in the country's fabric which neither Humphrey nor Johnson perceives.

If Nixon does not succeed in "binding up the nation's wounds," he feels that a four-party system and a Wallace success in 1972 is conceivable.

Mr. Novak noted that the politi-cal system has not failed but that it can't be "expected to work in the face of hidden irrelevancies" as the horror of the Kennedy assassination.

He looks forward to a future coalition of blacks and whites who do not fear each other.

Mr. Novak fielded questions for about an hour. Earlier in the day he conducted a two-hour seminar on the role of journalism in poli-tics.
