God is Dead’ Prof To Speak Tonight

Thomas J. J. Altizer, who helped introduce the “God is Dead” theory to modern theology, is at Kenyon. He is conversing with Mr. Altizer, whose ideas on the relationship of God and the world came to public attention in early 1964 while he was associate professor of Bible and religion at Emory University, is holding several seminars and will deliver an address in Philo Hall at 8:00 p.m. this evening.

Mr. Altizer, who has been described by author William Braden as “Looking like Glenn Ford, standing like one of Plato’s idle madmen, and presenting the image of a fuddled, frightened, encounter-visionary—a profound mystic haunted by an apocalyptic vision of cosmic dimensions,” concedes that the resurrection has not yet occurred. “The total of God passed into Christ, manifesting more deeply and fully and comprehensively into the world, flesh, consciousness, and experience,” he said. “As he has become the transcendent, the transcendental God we have known has died. He rejects the theology of social action, and a more active hope for this world, seeing instead the fulfillment of the new testament in Godliness in an apocalyptic hope for the total transformation of all things.”

According to Braden, his theology suggests that the cosmic process is evolutionary while the Euro-American idea of a post-Christian age, which it resembles, looks back toward a primordial totality.

Notre Dame Girls Join Lords in Vernon Concert

This Sunday there will be a joint concert featuring the Notre Dame College Choir and the Kenyon Chapel Choir. The concert will be the Lords’ first in Mt. Vernon. Director Frank Landis is pleased to have an opportunity to perform in the “All-America City.” He noted that many Vermoinians have no idea about the musical activities at Kenyon and that it is a good time for the choir to appear in Mt. Vernon because of recent interest in the European summer tour.

Sponsored by the Mt. Vernon Interchurch committee, the concert will be held at 4 p.m. at Grace’s Roman Catholic Church.

The featured number will be a joint rendition of Schubert’s Mass in G Major.

Building Begins on Girls School

Two more giant steps are being taken this week in Kenyon’s coordination and expansion as construction begins on the biology building and women’s residence halls.

Final contracts were awarded for these projects at a meeting of the College’s Executive Committee yesterday. The groundbreaking ceremony will be held this Tuesday.

The big building presents problems to College planners since kids ran some $300,000 over the budget allotment for the job. The Executive Committee could have decided to make cost-saving alterations that would sacrifice the quality of the building, but Vice President for Finance Sam Lord, “We decided to go ahead on $300,000 with a couple of minor alterations.” This means that more money will have to be found in finance the project. Ultimately, additional funds will have to be obtained through the capital funds drive.

Bids on the two women’s residence halls ran to the delight of officials, within $10,000 of the budget. The winning bid for the job was $2,304,000.

Completion dates for the building, the residence halls, and the women’s comment, now under construction.

Council Appoints Academic Committees

Student Council meeting Monday night, in contrast to the fiery session of the previous weeks, assumed a confident, relaxed air as the major areas of business were undertaken.

The Council discussed the reorganization of the Academic Affairs Committee, the proposed creation of a study committee of faculty representatives, and the creation of a Student Council ad hoc committee on academic freedom.

After the announcement that Mr. Frank, a junior, and the senior class president, Council President David Little, elected Paul Halpern, chairman, Karl Rustin, Reed Woodhouse, Greg Leteke, Robert Magalor, and Saul Benjamin as the new Academic Affairs Committee member.

Gilligan for Senate

It is difficult to generate any enthusiasm for any of the presidential candidates this year. There seems to be little difference between Humphrey and Nixon. Wallace is a terrifying alternative to any of the candidates who speak in any depth on the major issues, and it looks like Nixon will walk away with the election anyway.

But there is some reason for hope in various local and regional candidates. Among these is John J. Gilligan, Democratic candidate for the Senate from Ohio.

Gilligan is one of the young politicians concerned with the war, the problems of the cities, the reorganization of his party. He received national attention for his defeat of incumbent Frank Lausche in the primary and for his fight for the peace plank at the Democratic convention.

He was forced, reluctantly, to support Humphrey in the balloting because he had to hold the support of the Democratic organization in Ohio. He needed party support to give him at least a fighting chance against the Republicans' Bill Saxbe. It has been reported that AFL-CIO funds were withheld from Gilligan in order to support the Humphrey candidacy. He did refuse to support HHF at a pre-convention caucus.

In a position statement on Vietnam, Gilligan outlines a peace proposal remarkably similar to Robert Kennedy's. He calls for unconditional halt in bombing of the North, while voicing in the South necessary support for American troops.

Secondly, he calls for mutual withdrawal, phased over a short period of time. Third, "we should encourage our South Vietnamese allies to negotiate a political truce with the National Liberation Front looking toward a government which is broadly representative of these and all elements in South Vietnam's society." The substance of this reconciliation would be to bring the major men to decide, with the certain knowledge that American military support will soon be gone.

His fourth suggestion is to reduce casualties among U.S. troops and Vietnamese civilians by reducing offensive operations. He aims to eliminate the presence of all foreign forces in the South while providing enough assistance and seeking international authority to ensure some stability in the South.

He is resolved "to have no more Vietnam." He emphasizes economic and technical assistance.

He concludes his position paper by saying: "We shall neither assume the role of the world's policeman, nor lend our support to corrupt oppressive regimes unwilling to work for essential reforms and lacking the consent of the governed.

"Since the United States cannot allow the unilateral use of military means where the issues are political in nature and our national security is not involved."

The choices are that Gilligan, Paul O'Dwyer and others will be defeated this year. It is doubtful that Humphrey will carry Ohio, and it states for goe for Nixon. Saxbe may follow on his coattails.

But men like Gilligan offer promise for the future, and a hope for our American political system. Moderate men of reason, typified this year by Eugene McCarthy, can add a long-observed dimension to American politics. Men willing to dis-suss the issues with the people are rising in politics.

In the evidence Jack Gilligan is a man of reason who could provide strong leadership in the Senate. We urge those who are eligible to vote for him Nov. 5. The rest of us can get out this weekend and as often as possible during the next four weeks to help Jack Gilligan to become the next Senator from Ohio.

In a Truly Open Society?

Silber Calls for Re-Evaluation

by Harold Levy

As one of the leaders of "the Committee," Steven Silber '70 has generated a great deal of controversy on campus. While Mr. Silber has directed most of his efforts toward protecting the Vietnam war and the draft, it is his hope that the Committee's actions will cause students to re-evaluate issues in all phases of campus life. The following are some of his (not the Committee's) thoughts on wide-ranging topics:

Kenyon as Microcosm

What the walkout (at the Lieberman lecture) and the reaction of various people in the school led to, was that the problem we were really dealing with at Kenyon was a micro-com of what we were trying to deal with in the country at large, that is, in this a truly open society.

Kenyon's Liberal Education

The education here is so archaic. This has been an institution of the past; a liberal arts education is an absurdity. A liberal arts education fails because there is a great deal of difference between talking about things and doing them, we are living in their substance, knowledge is secondary to action.

Student Freedom

I think that we should do away with requarantines. The best way for students to do away with them would be to not attend them; exercise free choice. Communication implicates two people treating each as feeling beings, you can't have communication in an environment where there are threats used.

The Women's College

This is such an unnatural environment, it's incomprehensible that many of the women's college students are calling instead of clinging to the past, as we're going to do, I would really hope that we would become a college of experimenting. While you're not changing, you're dead; this place has been dead for a long time. Change is like cool dorms. People can work out on their own arrangements. First of all, I'd tear down all these dormitories, and build houses, with 10 to 20 students in each. That's a human way to live.

The Faculty

Faculty members, at least a lot of them, are so concerned about their roles as teachers that they can't get out of it... The professors are still trying to maintain relationships with students similar to those between a parent and child, but that must be reestablished... You must follow, that you must work your life into... and what I'm saying is that there are other structures, other ways of living, that don't seem to be respected here.

Political Science and the PACC

Comparing our present institutions with our past institutions is absurd, what about what they are now? The thing is to be stepping into the future. What about the war in Vietnam? What about Chicago?... The political scientist must take the stand that exists outside the system, that they're scientists. Actually, they're very deeply committed to this system. Here's the kind of conference I'd like to see: "what kind of changes in the Constitution would be advisable in the light of present circumstances?"

Amercian Society

This society is eliminating youth. I saw this television show the other night and there were these 7 and 8 year old kids talking about a bomb being dropped. It makes you think, well, I'm getting old, I'm almost 20, I'd better start planning ahead... that's nonsense. The reason that people are so concerned is that they think they're losing... but the point is that there is no order. History is in energy.

Curriculum Changes

Courses could be planned with students and faculty together. You can certainly eliminate exams. I think papers are helpful, but I think that students should write them only if they want to. The same with essays. Some people will choose a major, because it's "in their point in their lives they may really want to pursue something else" and an interdisciplinary choice. Of course, that would do away with comps.

Freedom of Speech

Freedom of speech means that you have the right to listen to someone and you have the freedom to walkout on someone. Mr. Silber notes that what is all-important is that "the thing to realize is that this is a finite universe, if it is a four-dimensional moebius strip, then every point is its center, every point is touching, very simply, all is one, all is god, god is love."

'Faceless' Dorms

Co-op Housing Grows

WASHINGTON (CPS) — Out of theEverybody's faceless dorms of students' drive for independence and control over their own institutions is a small but growing co-operative housing movement among students and young people on campuses and in cities.

Wanting to escape from dormitories with their "long corridors of faceless doors and faceless rooms," and trying to find an expensive way to live in a community, many students have started "co-ops," ranging in size from five to fifty. Some of them have expanded from simple sharing of food and shelter to starting "free universitites" within their communities.

A new organization, the North American Student Cooperative League, has been set up in Washington to serve as an information center for existing co-ops and to promote the student tenants' expertise on the architecture, mechanics and psychology of cooperative living; and it is holding a conference this week for students who want more about setting up a co-op.

The League's director, Norman Glassman, who said a cooperative is as "living environment owned and operated by the people who live in it," thinks universities "will become more free as the people in which students live becomes more free."

Oberlin Drops Saga

Oberlin College knows one way to deal with dissatisfaction with Saga Food Service. No longer does Saga haunt the dining halls of Oberlin. Oberlin shipped Saga back to California and signed on with Continental Corporation.

After making new dining hall plans, the college opened bids for food services. Hi C. won. But dissatisfaction with deficiencies in quality of Saga's service was one factor which prompted the change, according to Oberlin assistant business manager Dayton Livingston (as reported in the Oberlin Review).

According to the Oberlin paper, "the new managers have focused on better service and varying the dining routine," as the new saga chief aims to be trying at Kenyon.

Hi C. now serves 28 schools, 21 in California. The Review reports that Hi C.'s regional director hopes to build a reputation in the midwest through its "prestige account with Oberlin.

Hi C. is using the same type U.S. Chronicle meal and grade A vegetables Saga used.

Smith Adds Wine

The Antimist Student reported recently that its female neighbor Smith College, by vote of its House of Representatives, has passed regulations providing for liberalization of the girls' drinking rules. The regulations permit wine to be served at dinner one night a week and for beer or wine at official college functions including dances. But, the Student reports, students may not have either beverage in their rooms.

As of two weeks ago, there appeared to be some legal complications. The Antimist paper reported that the main question involved the legality of Smith College as a private institution serving; but not selling, alcohol to persons under 21. Susan Lallo, editor of the Smith Sophism, told the Student she "has the impression from a few people in town that authorities would let it go."

IN A CRISIS, it takes courage to be a leader ... courage to speak out ... to point the way ... to say, "Follow Me!" In a crisis, it takes action to survive ... the kind of decisive action that comes from a man of sound instinct, as well as intelligence.

If America is to survive this crisis ... if the youth of America are to inherit a sane and even promising world, we must have courageous, constructive leadership. The kind of leadership that only George C. Wallace—of all Presidential candidates—has to offer. That's why young Americans who really think support Wallace.

THE YOUTH FOR WALLACE movement is building in a small but steady way. Young people are starting to realize that the political system needs a shake-up. It needs to be vigorously challenged by new ideas and a new spirit of leadership.

PATHWAY TO WALLACE

In order to promote this awareness and support for George C. Wallace's campaign for the Presidency, an organizing committee has been formed. They have chosen to support George C. Wallace because...they believe he is the most appropriate candidate to lead the United States into a new era.

The organizing committee believes that the United States is at a crucial point in its history and that the leadership of George C. Wallace is essential to bring about the necessary changes. They believe that Wallace's policies are in line with the concerns of young people and that his campaign offers a new direction for the country.

The organizing committee is now reaching out to other groups and individuals who share their beliefs and are interested in supporting George C. Wallace. They are working to build a coalition of young people who are committed to his campaign and to the principles he stands for.

They know that it takes courage to stand up for America against the pseudo-intellectual professors, the hippies, the press and the entire liberal Establishment. And they've got that courage.

Thousands and thousands of tomorrow's leaders—the thinking young men and women of America who have courage and who are willing to act—are joining YOUTH FOR WALLACE. You should join, too.

There are no dues. Send in the coupon to receive your membership card, the YFW Newsletter and a copy of "STAND UP FOR AMERICA," the story of George C. Wallace.

TEENAGE PROTEST ANTI-WALLACE VIOLENCE

Teenagers and young adults in several states have been subjected to violence and vandalism as a result of their support for George C. Wallace's campaign. Some have been attacked while campaigning, while others have been threatened or harassed.

People of all ages are being targeted for their support of Wallace. It is important to stand up for freedom of speech and the right to vote for candidates of your choice. The violence and vandalism directed at the young people who support Wallace is regrettable and must be stopped.

We at the YFW movement believe that violence is never the answer. Instead, we believe in peaceful protest and the power of the ballot. By standing up for Wallace, we are standing up for the future of our country. We are standing up for a future that is free and prosperous for all Americans.

Clubs Quakers

by Flip Seay

Yale's distance field last Friday saw the Lords emanate as the Quakers flattened the Keeper of Wilmington College.

Kenyon faces Marietta this Saturday in another home match, where Wilmington looked tough at the beginning of the first quarter. Their goal at 1:15 into the period pointed out early strength. The thought Kenyon to life to a minute and later inside Steve Bruck, powering forward through to the score. There was a period of relatively light play after that, with both sides avoiding heavy contact.

Unfortunately, the next quarter's Lady Lord surge, led by Neil Smyth, Bruck, Keith Tauska, and Bob Leighton, caused the Wilmington team to speed up, and the pressure increased. The rest of the quarter was marked by ice-break action and the lack of an effective scoring threat. The poor sportsmanship, i.e., beheading of a Wilmington player, threw out of the game for illegal blocking, hardly boosted the opposition's spirit.

A much rougher performance followed the halftime break. The start of the second quarter until the end of the game, the Lords dominated. At 4:15 halfback Steve Becker passed inside Chip Lowery, who scored. A point was scored with the Wilmington guard. Smyth then took advantage of a "hand ball" in the penalty area, scoring on the free direct kick at 18:30.

The game went much the same as the third, but contained the first touch down score of the season by Lowery, with a great confusion at 6:50, and by Smyth, with the help of Becker, at 6:50. Substitutions held the offense for the remainder of the game, which concluded in a well-deserved 5-1 tally in favor of Kenyon.

Let's join forces.

Bestial Roar

Profusek Pounds Foes

by Greg Alexander

Contrary to what one might infer from his nickname—The Beast—Dale Profusek is a quiet and thoughtful fellow off the gridiron.

Dale, who has started in every game the past four years with the Lords, has been quite a versatile performer. During his first two years he was a star unit at both split end and defensive end. In his sophomore year he experienced what was probably his greatest football thrill when he landed in a long fourth down pass in the end zone with fifteen seconds left to win the Lords' Homecoming game.

Last year "Beast" concentrated on defense, filing in on offense when needed. This season he is once again a mainstay at defensive end, besides converting to defensive tackle in some situations.

Dale has also punted for the Lords the past three campaigns. This has allowed him the dubious distinction of sharing a conference record for most punts in one game, 14.

For a student who feared he might not be able to handle the academic stress of Kenyon, Dale has done a remarkable job. He has maintained a B average over three years' work, making the Dean's List his sophomore year and participating in Independent Study the next.

Moreover, he has worked in the Head Start program for retarded children and is serving his second year as a freshman proctor.

A psychology major, Dale is also interested in photography, and a certain co-ed from Baldwin-Wallace, dubbed "The Beastess." Dale plans to attend grad school in psychology after picking up his Kenyon diploma and a wedding ring.
Kenyonmen of Yore
Walk Out with Flair

Ed. Note: Since the walkout on Mr. Lashman’s lecture there has been considerable discussion of the implications that the walkout bears on liberal education. It might be noted in this discussion that walking out is a bit less militant than the activities of Kenyon students a century ago, as related in the Kenyon Collegian December 1846.

Situated as Gambier is, almost isolated from the rest of the world, it is seldom that anything rare or peculiar crosses our path. There is little to satisfy the ever thirsting desire in the human mind for novelty.

One evening last term, while we were all assembled in chapel, it was announced after service that Mr. Croting, an able eucharist, would deliver a lecture there that evening. The first sentence he uttered satisfied us that he was a “gem from the Emerald Isle.” He began his remarks by expressing his abiding compassion for all American youth generally, on account of the midst darkness under which they were laboring. According to his notion Uncle Sam was a good sort of a fellow, but the father of unruly children. That long independence paper we were fond of reading, was possible. America, viewed in every light, would make a splendid picture-field in which to fatten sheep! It was not, however, a matter of surprise to him that the people of the United States were so brightened; it was easily accounted for by the fact that we possessed no “guineas cobility of rare blood.” After tearing our po-faced institutions to pieces, the gentleman went on to state that our ignorance was illustrated in nothing so much as in the utter absence of anything like century among us.

He stated that, hearing of the extreme ignorance of the “natives” this side of the water, a sense of duty had impelled him to come over to enlighten us. “The effect of such a harangue upon a crowd of American students, can better be imagined than described. Deceivious laughs occasionally greeted his remarks, which he doubtedly interpreted as exclamations of astonishment, and as expressions of his talent.

At a portion which he considered particularly sublime, a book, sent by some kind hand, underwrote an aural trip to his head. All at once, he seemed to comprehend that all the applause was not complimentary. Then leaving the sublime flights of Horace, he descended to the vulgarity of his native element by a transition as sudden as it was complete. “I wish I had my childhood, and I’d make ya sing, we spalpeen.” All order was at an end. All the books in the room followed suit with the first. . . . Some left, singing, “Ain’t I glad I’m out of the wilderness.” Some remained behind to see more sport, while one tall fellow, perched on a bench, was busily murmuring, and occasionally exclaming, “here’s the place to get your money back.”

Debaters Defeat Purdue

Last weekend Kenyon debaters successfully defended both sides of an issue and defeated Purdue University, Abilley College and Hiram College.

Debating the affirmative on the issue “Should executive control of United States foreign policy be sufficiently curtailed?” the Kenyon team of Jeff Burtz and Michael Cummings defeated Purdue University by five points.

Meanwhile, the negative team of Ken Moore and Hugh McIntosh defeated Abilley College (Ky.) and Hiram College (Ohio).

The tournament, Kenyon’s first this year, was held at Bellarmine-Uvaline College in Louisville, Ky.

The termers favor the abolition of the entire requirement, yet a few individual favored mandatory attendance of conventions. In this latter case, under Mr. Moser’s suggestion, a new penalty be enforced such as a monetary fine in place of the academic one in effect. Council decided that the matter should be handled as the bill last year for the abolition of the Physical Education requirement was handled; a petition was circulated openly and then was sent to each of the fraternities.
Under Mr. Rattan’s suggestion the motion regarding the assembly requirement was referred to the Academic Affairs Committee which will draft a bill explaining what the abolition of the requirement entails.

Mr. Hester introduced a five part bill proposing a set of committee on academic freedom. This committee, shall report on the degree of the right or duty of the student body to act officially through some duly appointed representative group in concerning itself with the quality and nature of the classroom program of instruction.”

The Council shall make the final decision whether or not the students may have such a group. Membership on the Committee will consist of three students, three faculty members, and a student chairman. The student’s will be appointed by Council and the faculty approved by the Provost, after nomination by the Council. This motion was passed unanimously, with short discussion.
