by Rob Murphy

With the inception of the Constitution Committee, and other changes in the past few years, the Constitution for campus governance is undergoing a major overhaul. A committee formed by President Caples with Mr. James Cessar as chairman studied our problems, other colleges' governmental solutions, and after almost two years of deliberation and discussion, has come up with what they believe is the most applicable and workable constitution for the combined Colleges. Though membership in the Constitution Committee has fluctuated during its existence, those proposing this Constitution are Mr. Cessar, Mr. Halbriech, Mr. Adams, Mr. Cartier, Mr. Wren, and Mr. Denison.

Some of the Constitution's features:

- Increased student access to faculty and administration.

Article V Section 1 provides for student delegations to the principal administration bodies until that body shall meet. The Constitution Committee is proposing to the Faculty Council that the faculty representation (voting power) on faculty committees and the student representation on the Curriculum Committee, and the two separate PAA committees be increased as an evening up of the numbers of students and faculty on the various committees, Educational Facilities, and Equal Educational Opportunities Committees.

There will be a meeting for anyone who wishes to criticize or discuss the Constitution with the members of the Committee on Monday, January 24th, in Rossie Hall at 4:10 P.M. At the conclusion of their session and time consuming deliberations concerning this matter, the Committee will appreciate your comments and suggestions on this matter which affects all of us.

class or sex. This was determined in light of decreasing fraternity influence. Campus activities were also omitted because mention of them need not be made in a Constitution.

---Increased power to the Campus Senate.

Article II Section 2 stipulates that the Campus Senate will receive all reports from faculty committees with student membership at the same time the Faculty Council receives them. In the past, Faculty Council received these reports, commented upon them, and then forward-ted them to the entire faculty for consideration. The new Constitution would have Senate receive and discuss these proposals and then express an official opinion on them to the Faculty Council.

Section 1 of this same article provides that the Senate will be a forum for the college community, which includes students, faculty, and administration.

A student council meeting was held on Sunday, January 16th to discuss the proposed Constitution with members of the committee, among other things. The committee put on the defensive from the very start: a majority of Council felt as if they were under fire. Dissension arose mainly around the issue of exactly what kind of a majority of students will pass the proposed Constitution; whether a majority of students or simply a majority of those who vote. From this brief account that emerged was a confused inclination of contradictions.

To the Editors:

Something has happened at this school which should receive considerable public attention but as of the date of my writing this, human existences are not only irrevocably and certainly written but of the utmost importance to the Kenyon community. —L.H., D.D.

To the Readers:

There were the typical cases of drunken guys "pawing" with a greater or lesser degree of force, the available females. At Kenyon few girls are raped (more than I've heard of) but many are so molested. The question arises: Isn't there something wrong in someone's social thinking if he needs to get drunk in order to approach a girl or if she enjoys or even allows this kind of approach?

There was, as one by-stander put it, "another naked man show" at one of the parties. This was simply composed of a drunk in a hat and overcoat exposing himself to any one who cared to look. Why is it that Kenyon people insist upon making this community nothing more than a microcosm of our overall society instead of trying to make it what it could and should be, wonderful Mecca of a little bit of heaven?

And why do we fail to apply the same terms here that we would apply if we saw some drunk exposing himself in New York City? The act itself may not be one of the grosser but there still isn't something wrong with people who require stunts to get the attention they require.

And finally there were individuals who openly considered suicide who considered it not so openly. In any case, we all know that there have been several attempts at suicide this year. This, if nothing else, should make us stop to reconsider this cold society we have created on "Magic Mountain." Why are we so preoccupied with a drunken debauch and how healthy is our fascination with the bizarre? We don't help ourselves by perpetrating a paragon for clowns and we don't help them.

This is not a call for absolute temperance and I would stand with anyone against any crack-down from the Dean's office. But that is nothing but a waste to do. I'm sure, and any attempt he might make would be futile anyway. We are the only ones who can make this society better for ourselves. We are the ones who are fouling out and attempting suicide and dying in the snow and we are the only ones who can stop it. We can start by using alcohol and drugs as something other than free license to do anything we damn well please. The phrases: "well he was drunk" or "well he was stoned" are too often heard as excuses for behavior which should not be acceptable otherwise. There seems to be no limit to what is excusable while one is "under the influence." This might be a good place to start. The individual who has on one other is tremendous and we all know it. Therefore, all that remains to be done is for us to stop accepting "well he was drunk" as an excuse and people will either stop doing these things while they're drunk or stop getting that drunk. It is that simple. There is not a single little bit that is good that has ever come out of a "show" and now there is one death. That is not an acceptable account.

Sincerely,
Josh Bill, '73

Money May Cut Trainer
by Sam Barnes
Training George classroom of the Wertheimer Fieldhouse staff may be dismissed from his duties later this year, the COLLEGIAN learned this week.
Chrisman, in his sixth year as trainer for Kenyon athletics, may be retained, but only on a temporary basis, due to his positive considerations, according to Samuel Lord, Vice President for Finance."Some cuts have been made to the budget this year," Lord said.
When asked if the action was likely, Lord at first declined comment but later stated: "Until the trustees meet on February 19, the action is still in the non-looked-in category," Chrisman reportedly told reporters that there was a possibility that his resignation would be released.
"It makes sense to have a trainer that is important, is a part of the athletic program, is not a new hire," Chrisman said.
Lord, however, has said that "it is always better to have a Fear departure, since our concern is to deal with our problems and think of ourselves as grasshoppers that effectively disperse from potential success."
